a right can be acquired. . . . There is no such right as that known to the law. Therefore, there must be a definite terminus, & a more or less definite direction (WILLS, J.).

(3) Where the right of passage exists on the part of the public, & where the road over a common or an unenclosed space, or anything of that kind which would naturally be taken, is foundrou or is allowed to become foundrous, the public . . . have a right to deviate right or left in order to get along upon those parts that are less foundrou (WILLS, J.).

(4) Repair by the parish is always if it is made out, a strong indication of the public right. It is a burden accepted by the parish which would not be accepted unless there was a public way (WILLS, J.).—EYRE v. NEW FOREST HIGHWAY BOARD (1892), 56 J. P. 517; on appeal, 8 T. L. R. 648, C. A.

9. — Artificial structure — Erected under statutory powers.]—Ptfs.*, the Improvement Comrs. of the river T., acquired certain lands & constructed a pier under statutory powers, the work being done at intervals between the years 1854 & 1891. The public were in the habit of using the pier as a promenade & for various purposes of pleasure & recreation, & ptfs. alleged that they never desired nor intended to prevent the public from so using it as a matter of favour. Finding, however, that a claim as of right was being set up, ptfs., on Dec. 21, 1897, placed barriers across the landward end of the pier, & ordered the pier to be closed for twenty-four hours. Thereupon the mayor & other officers of the adjoining borough of S., being refused admission broke down the barriers & also certain permanent gates across the pier. Ptfs. now sued them for the trespass. At the same time an action was brought against the comrs. in the name of the A.-G. alleging that the said pier & the several parts thereof had been from time to time dedicated to the use of & accepted by the public as a common & public highway:—Held: (1) a right of way could exist over a structure erected under statutory powers; (2) an owner might dedicate his land for purposes of recreation; (3) ptfs. must be presumed to have dedicated a simple right of way within certain assigned limits. —TYNE IMPROVEMENT COMRS. v. IMRIE, A.-G. v. TYNE IMPROVEMENT COMRS. (1899), 81 L. T. 174, 10. Once a highway always a highway.]—DAWES v. HAWKINS, No. 270, post.

14. — — —.]—A triangular piece of ground, on one side bordering a river & contiguous to a bridge, & on another formerly open to an ancient highway leading to the bridge, was fenced in 1871 by the then highway authority to prevent nuisance, the fence extending from the bridge to the wall of a house which formed the third side. The person who since 1890 had owned the house treated the ground as his own, & ptfs. as highway authority brought this action to establish their right to remove the fence at will:—Held: on evidence of user before the fencing, the ground was a public highway between the land & the river, & was also part of the highway to the bridge, & the erection of the fence did not prevent its being a highway.

The true view is that this was part of a very ancient highway, & once a highway always a highway (SWINFEN-EADY, J.).—ST. IVES CORPN. v. WADSWORTH (1908), 72 J. P. 73; 6 L. G. R. 306.

17. — — —.]—I apprehend that the free right of way with horses, carts, waggons, or carriages, gives also a right of way without horses, carts, waggons, or carriages. The greater right carries with it the lesser (AMPHLETT, L.J.).—WELLS v. LONDON, TILBURY & SOUTHEND RY. CO. (1877), 5 Ch. D. 126; 37 L. T. 302; 41 J. P. 452; 25 W. R. 325, C. A.

18. Foreshore—Not a highway.]—The public have no common law right of bathing in the sea; & as incident thereto, of crossing the sea shore on foot, or with bathing machines, for that purpose.

Many persons who reside in the vicinity of wastes & commons, walk or ride on horseback, in all directions, over them, for their health & recreation; & sometimes, even in carriages, deviate from the public paths into those parts which may be so traversed with safety. In the neighbourhood of some frequented watering places, this practice prevails to a very great degree; yet no one ever thought that any right existed in favour of this enjoyment, or that any justification could be pleaded to an action at the suit of the owner of the soil (ABBOT, C.J.).—*BLUNDELL v. 39. Occupation roads.]—Occupation roads laid out through an estate for the use & convenience of the inhabitants are not thereby dedicated to the public.

An estate was purchased for the purpose of building houses; a part was laid out as private roads, & upon a partition, the owners taking the roads covenanted that the other freeholders & the occupiers of the houses should have the full use & enjoyment of the roads in as absolute a manner as if they were public roads.—Held: a request to be supplied with gas by a minority of the occupiers of houses was sufficient, without the consent of the freeholders, to justify the breaking up the roads by the gas co. to lay down their pipes to comply with such request. On appeal the decision was affirmed, as every occupier had the same right, for the purpose of his use & enjoyment, to call in all such aid as he might have done if the roads had been public roads.—*SELBY v. ### SUB-SECT. 3.—WHETHER NECESSARILY A THOROUGHFARE.

40. General rule.]—If a passage leading from one part to another of a public street, though by a very circuitous route, made originally for private convenience, has been open to all the world for a great number of years, without any bar or chain across it, & without any person passing through it meeting with interruption, it is to be considered as dedicated to the public, & it becomes a highway, to obstruct which is an indictable offence.

To say that this right [of way] cannot exist because a particular place does not lead conveniently from one street to another, would go to extinguish all highways where there is no thoroughfare (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—R. v. LLOYD (1808), 1 Camp. 260, N. P.

To this it was replied, that upon the true construction of a local Act of Parliament the right of way, if any such had existed which was denied, had been thereby extinguished.—Held: (1) such an Act of Parliament is not to be construed strictly as against the public, who were, in fact, no parties to the passing of the Act; & (2) the provisions of such Act & the works which had been constructed thereunder, were not inconsistent with the existence of a public footpath over these lands; (3) issues directed to try the fact of the existence of such right of way were properly directed, notwithstanding the confluence of two rivers, the locus ad quem might or might not be held to be a public place.

Consideration of what is a public place as the terminus of a public footway.

I believe applt. is quite right in saying generally that a public right of way means a right to the public of passing from one public place to another

43. —.]—(1) Although a public way may pass through private property, it must have at each end a public terminus. The terminus of a public way may be sufficient, although it have not in the ordinary sense an exit. It may be a cul de sac. But a mere private place, not admitting of a passage through or beyond it, cannot form the terminus of a public way.

(2) Upon evidence satisfactory & uncontradicted showing a public right of way as far back as the memory of living witnesses can be expected to extend, the jury may presume a previous enjoyment corresponding with that evidence.

Non-user or obstruction of a public right of way may be evidence for the jury that the right does not exist, but qu.: whether it can be evidence to show that the right has been lost.

It was contended that the learned judge ought to have told the jury "that evidence of the interruption of the right of way for twenty-two years after 1827, acquiesced in by the public for that period, was sufficient in law to exclude such right of way on that part of the public." I can find no such provision as that in the law of Scotland any more than I can in the law of England. Whether a person excludes the public is a question of degree; & the acquiescence of the public is also a question of degree. Certainly the fact that a person has for twenty-two years prevented people from doing what they had done before for forty years, does not of itself destroy the right (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—*YOUNG v. It was proved that the boys of the neighbourhood went there to play; that on one occasion an organ grinder was found there; & that it was sometimes chosen as a suitable place for fights because it was quiet. It was policed by the City Police & scavenged & lit by the Comrs. of Sewers. In 1877 land which included this court was acquired by the Comrs. of Sewers under an Improvement Act. Acting under their powers the comrs. erected a hoarding which prevented the public reaching the site of the court through the passage. The passage was then used for private purposes. In 1890, the scheme having been abandoned, the comrs. commenced to sell the land in building lots, & in 1896 they sold a lot including the court to deft., together with such right of way over & along the passage as they had power to grant. & roads" of a given width which "after the setting out & completing thereof" were to be repaired & kept in repair in such manner as the other public highways within the township. By their award they directed that a certain raised path of the given width, which was already staked out, & had theretofore been used as a bridle road, should be "a public road" called the L. road. In describing abutments in their award, the comrs. treated the L. road as a known boundary, & in setting out bridle & other roads they used express & apt words. Nothing was done from the date of the award in 1760 to 1853, to make the road more a carriage road than it had been before; the actual repairs were consistent with a bridle road & with a carriage road; but there was no evidence of uses except as a bridle road. The inhabitants were indicted for non-repair of the road as a public highway, & evidence being given to show that it was in disrepair if it was a road for all purposes, a verdict was taken for defts., subject to be set aside & entered for the Crown if the award was conclusive that the road was one for all purposes:—Held: though the phrase "public highway" prima facie imported a road for carriages as well as for other purposes, yet it might mean public brideway only; & that being so, the user for eighty-nine years as a brideway was decisive that the road was a brideway only.—*R. v. The fact that a footpath along the top of such sea wall is besides being part of the highway, used as a promenade or esplanade for the purposes of pleasure, does not effect the liability to repair.

(2) Deft. occupied a house adjoining to a public street, with a cellar belonging to it, which cellar had existed before deft. had anything in the house. The mouth of this cellar opened into the footway of the street by a trap door. During the day this trap door was open, but at night it was closed by a flap, which slightly projected above the footway, & it had so projected as long as living memory went back. Pltf., coming along the footway at night, stumbled over this flap, fell, & sustained injury, for which he brought an action:—Held: the jury ought to draw the conclusion that the cellar flap had existed as long as the street, & the dedication of the way to the public was with the cellar flap in it, & subject to its being continued there; & therefore, deft. was not liable, as the maintenance of such an ancient cellar flap was not unlawful.

placing in a public street certain steps, so that the same were an obstruction to persons using the street; & dangerous to persons passing along it at night; & averring that pltf. passing along the street, fell over them & was injured. Plea, that the street was subject to the right of the occupiers of a house adjoining it to have steps standing in the highway & leading up to the outer door of the house, all persons passing along the highway being entitled to pass on foot over the steps as a part of the highway, which steps were part of the house; that, the street being lowered under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), the old steps were necessarily removed, & the present steps placed in their room; that the new steps were placed on the same part of the highway on which the old steps had stood, & caused no greater obstruction or danger than did the old steps.—Held: the plea was good, as the former highway was subject to the right on the part of the occupiers of deft.'s house to keep these steps there, & the lowered highway was subject to a similar right.

(4) It is, of course, not obligatory on the owner of land to dedicate the use of it as a highway to the public. It is equally clear that it is not compulsory on the public to accept the use of a way when offered to them. If the use of the soil as a way is offered by the owner to the public under given conditions & subject to certain reservations, & the public accept the use under such circumstances, there can be no injustice in holding them to the terms on which the benefit was conferred. On the other hand, great injustice & hardship would often arise if, when a public right of way has been acquired under a given state of circumstances, the owner of the soil should be held bound to alter that state of circumstances to his own disadvantage & loss, & to make further concessions to the public altogether beyond the scope of his original intention (per Cur.).—*FISHER v. 67. Occupation road—Public right limited to right of footway.]—Pltf., the owner, & three other persons, his tenants, sought to restrain defts. from further trespassing on their land, & for damages for trespass already committed. Defts. claimed that the land was part of a public highway, & that what they had done was in the execution of their duty. The three lanes concerned ran through the estate, & were known as B. G., & P. respectively. There was an admitted footway down the latter. From the evidence it appeared that these ways were occupation roads merely, which were rendered necessary before all the property came into one estate to enable the local farmers to get to outlying fields. In 1909, B. came to be a nuisance, & the owner destroyed the fences & built a wall down the middle. In 1912 the clerk of the council wrote claiming that this lane was a public highway, & requesting the removal of the wall. After a long correspondence the council, in Feb. 1913, pulled down the wall & cut a quantity of undergrowth, the property of pltf. In May the writ was issued in this action. The judge said that the evidence consisted of documents, etc., & evidence of user. As to the latter, he thought it had been proved that these were mere occupation roads. There was nothing apparently in the documents, maps, tithe maps, award under Inclosure Acts, & so forth, which had been put in, which seemed contrary to the conclusion:—Held: subject to the public footway in P., none of these ways was a highway.—FULLER v. CHIPPENHAM RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1914), 79 J. P. 4.

68. Conversion of turnpike roads into main roads—Under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 13.—Effect of enlargement of area of borough.]—The above sect. enacts that any road which has "between Dec. 31, 1870, & the date of this Act ceased to be a turnpike road . . . shall be deemed to be a main road, & one-half of the expenses incurred from & after Sept. 29, 1878, by the highway authority in the maintenance of such road, shall, as to every part thereof which is within the limits of any highway area, be paid to the highway authority of such area by the county authority of the county in which such road is situate, out of the county rate." The corp. of the town & borough of R. was the highway authority of the R. highway area. Under Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 34), ss. 47–50, such portions of the turnpike roads entering R. as came within the area of the town were taken out of the turnpike trusts, & the obligation to repair the same was imposed upon the corp. By a local Act in 1872, the boundaries of the borough were enlarged & all the provisions of the Acts relating to the "town" were made applicable to the enlarged area of the borough. The effect was that the further portions of the turnpike roads, thus for the first time brought within the area of the borough, were taken out of the turnpike trusts by the operation of Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, & ceased to be turnpike roads:—Held: these further portions, being only parts of turnpike roads, had not ceased to be "turnpike roads," & were not to be deemed to be "main roads" within the close sect.: & the county authority were not liable to pay half the expenses of their maintenance.—*LANCASHIRE J.J. v. 69. — Road absorbed by growth of town.]—A private Act authorised the construction of a turnpike road from W. to S. & the collection of tolls, & provided that "no part of the money arising or to be received by virtue of this Act shall be laid out in repairing, maintaining, or improving any street, highway, or place in any part of the towns of B., S., & W." By the growth of the town of S. a portion of the turnpike road had in fact become a street in the town before Dec. 31, 1870. The turnpike trust created by the private Act expired in 1876:—Held: (1) the effect of the above provision was not to cause the portion of the road in question to "cease to be a turnpike road" before Dec. 31, 1870 [under the above sect.]; (2) an agreement made under Local Government Act, 1858 (c. 98), s. 41, before Dec. 31, 1870, for the removal of turnpikes on a portion of a road, & its repair by the corp'n. of S., did not make it cease to be a turnpike road.—WEST RIDING JJ. v. R. (1883), 8 App. Cas. 781; 53 L. J. M. C. 41; 49 L. T. 786; 48 J. P. 228; 32 W. R. 253, H. L.

70. ——— From what date operative—Expiry of turnpike trust.—In 1855 a portion of a turnpike road was included in an improvement district under a local Act incorporating Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 34). Thereupon by virtue of sects. 47–51 of the latter Act the maintenance of this portion of the road became vested in the improvement comrs. & the turnpike trustees ceased to have power to collect tolls or lay out money upon it. In 1877 the turnpike trust expired. The comrs. were the "highway authority" for the district, & the district was a "highway area" within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 13:—Held: notwithstanding the operation of sects. 47–51 of Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, the road only "ceased to be a turnpike road" & became a "main road," within sect. 13 of Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, upon the expiration of the turnpike trust; & since that event happened after 1870 the county authority was liable to pay to the comrs. one-half the expenses incurred by them in the maintenance of the portion of the road within their district, as provided by sect. 13.—LANCASTER COUNTY JJ. OF THE PEACE v. NEWTON IN MAKERFIELD IMPROVEMENT COMRS. (1886), 11 App. Cas. 416; 50 L. J. M. C. 17; 55 L. T. 615; 51 J. P. 68; 35 W. R. 185, H. L.; affg. S. 71. ——— What are turnpike roads.—The promoters of an intended road by deed declared that the road should not only be enjoyed by them for their individual purposes, but "should be open to the use of the public at large for all manner of purposes in all respects as a common turnpike road," but subject to the payment of tolls by the persons using it:—Held: this was not a dedication of the road to the public, & the road was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150. Semble, an individual cannot, without legislative authority, dedicate a road to the public if he reserves the right to charge tolls for the user; & the mere fact that a number of persons form themselves into a co. for making & maintaining a road, & erect gates & bars & charge tolls, does not make the road a "turnpike road" in the sense of a turnpike road made such by Act of Parliament, & so dedicated to the public.—AUSTERBERRY v. (1885), 29 Ch. 72. ——— Under sect. 150 of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), an urban authority may require owners of premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on streets to sewer, level, & pave such streets as may require to be sewered, levelled, or paved. By sect. 4 "street" includes any highway (not being a turnpike road) . . . & any road, lane, footway, square, court, alley, or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not. App'ts. were the owners of land & premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on a private road leading through a populous part of the district in W. II. The proprietors of the road had erected gates or bars at several places along the road, at which they demanded & had taken tolls for some thirty years from persons using the carriage-way for vehicles, horses, & cattle, out of which tolls they had executed whatever repairs had been done to the road. The tolls were not taken by virtue of any Act of Parliament, & there was no evidence of any authority to erect the gates or to take the moneys, or of there being any obligation on the part of the association to repair:—Held: (1) the road in question, even if it were a private road, was a "street" within sect. 4 of the Act; (2) the road in question was not a turnpike road.

It was also suggested that the road was really a turnpike road; but that is met by the case of Austerbury v. Oldham Corp'n., No. 71, ante, where it was expressly held that a road like this is not a turnpike road (LOPES, L.J.).—MIDLAND RY. CO. v. WATTON (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 30; 55 L. J. M. C. 99; 54 L. The sect. further provides that, "Subject as aforesaid, where it appears to a county authority that any road within their county, which has become a main road in pursuance of this Act, ought to cease to be a main road & become an ordinary highway, such authority may apply to the Local Government Board for a provisional order declaring that such road has ceased to be a main road & become an ordinary highway:—Held: a road which had ceased to be a turnpike road within the period specified by the first of the above-mentioned provisions, & had become a main road, there being no application for a provisional order before Feb. 1, 1879, was not excluded from the operation of the second of the above mentioned provisions, & the Local Government Board had, therefore, jurisdiction to make a provisional order declaring such road an ordinary highway upon an application made subsequently to Feb. 1, 1879.—*R. v. NOTE.—Turnpike roads no longer exist as such. See Annual Turnpike Acts Continuance Act, 1882 (c. 52), s. 8.

76. Meaning.]—The legal meaning of the word "turnpike road," is a road on which parties have, by law, a right to erect gates & bars for the purpose of taking toll, & of refusing the permission to pass to all persons who refuse to pay it.—*NORTHAM BRIDGE & ROADS CO. v. 77. — Within Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 50—Road repairable by tolls.]—The words "turnpike road" in the above sect. mean a road which is repaired by tolls payable by passengers for the use of the road.—*R. v. 78. — Within 4 & 5 Vict. c. 59, s. 1.]—An Act of Parliament authorised trustees to establish a ferry & make certain highways in connection therewith. The trustees were also empowered to take tolls, out of the proceeds of which the ferry & roads were to be maintained. No limit of time was specified by the Act for the expiration of the trust. The Act also provided that, in case the works thereby authorised should not be executed within the space of ten years, all the powers & authorities thereby given should cease & determine, save only as to so much of the work as should have been completed within that time. The trustees established the ferry & made all the roads specified in the Act but one. The funds arising from the tolls becoming insufficient for the repair & maintenance of the roads so made, an application was made by the trustees to justices for an order for contribution to the repair of one of the roads so made, out of the highway rate under the above sect.:—Held: (1) the trust created by the Act was a turnpike trust within the above sect.; (2) inasmuch as the Act merely authorised & did not compel the making of the roads thereby specified & contemplated that all the works might not be executed, the construction of the whole system of roads authorised to be made was not a condition precedent to the roads that were made becoming highways, & consequently an order of contribution to the repair of the road in question might be made under the above sect.

I think that a road is a turnpike road within 4 & 5 Vict. c. 59, when it is made under the authority of an Act of Parliament with that intention, & in contemplation that it should be repaired by tolls to be taken at a turnpike (BRAMWELL, L.J.).—*R. v. 86. ——— Roadway with buildings.]—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 157, enables an urban authority to make bye-laws with respect (inter alia) to the level, width & construction of new streets:—Held: the words "new streets" in that sect. are not confined to streets constructed for the first time, but apply also to an old highway formerly a country lane, which has long been a street within the interpretation clause (sect. 4) of that Act, & which, by the building of houses on each side of it had recently become a street in the popular sense of the term.

In the natural & popular sense of the word "street" or the words "new street," I should certainly understand a roadway with buildings on each side (it is not necessary to say how far they must, or may be continuous or discontinuous); & by "new street," a place which before had not that character, but which, by the construction of buildings on each side, or possibly on one side, has acquired it (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—*ROBINSON v. 88. Whether houses included.]—Though the word "street" may include the houses abutting or fronting upon a public thoroughfare, as well as the actual roadway or footways, yet the strict & primâ facie meaning of the word "street" is confined to the roadway & footways.

Accordingly, in the construction of a local Act, which gave the corpn. of London powers to construct a viaduct over H., & to make certain new streets & to acquire lands for the purposes of the Act; & which enacted that in any case in which the corpn. might require to take any lands already purchased by the L. C. & D. Ry. Co., & that the co. were unwilling to dispose of the same, or required the same for the purposes of their railway, it should be referred to arbitration in manner thereinbefore provided; Provided always that this provision should not be construed to prevent the corpn. taking all such lands of the railway co. as might be required for the construction of the viaduct or raised way of the line of the new streets authorised by the Act:—Held: the latter provision did not apply to a case where the corpn. required to take a piece of land already purchased by the railway co., but did not require the same for the construction of the actual roadway or footways of the viaduct or new streets. The corpn. were accordingly restrained from taking the piece of land till the matter had been determined by arbitration as provided by the Act.—*LONDON, CHATHAM & DOVER RY. CO. v. 90. Unenclosed square in private ownership—Traversable by public.]—The urban sanitary authority of E. made a bye-law that every driver of a hackney carriage when plying for hire shall station his carriage on one of the appointed stands. In the city of E. there was a square in front of a hotel which was not enclosed, & where the public could pass freely except when the hotel keeper's carriages stood there, as the square was let with the hotel, & used for the hotel cabs standing when plying for hire:—Held: the driver when plying for hire there incurred the penalty imposed by the bye-law, as this place was part of the street.—MARKS v. FORD (1880), 45 J. P. 157, D. C.

91. Bridge.]—Declaration, that pltf. was possessed of certain land forming part of the bed of a canal, & that defts. erected a bridge across the canal, & caused it & the walls adjoining to be so constructed that the parts of the same extended & projected over parts of the canal. Plea, that the several acts, matters & things complained of were lawfully done by defts. under & by virtue of powers given to them by an Act, made, etc.:—Held: the plea in these general terms was good.

A bridge may be so situate as to be a "street" within the meaning of a statute.—BEAVER v. MANCHESTER CORPN. (1857), 8 E. & B. 44; 26 L. J. Q. B. 311; 20 L. T. O. S. 226; 4 Jur. N. S. 23; 120 E. R. 17.

SUB-SECT. 2.—STATUTORY DEFINITIONS.

A. Under Public Health Acts.

92. Within 1848 Act, sect. 69—Private road.]—Within the ordinary meaning of the word the magistrate was justified in holding that this road was a street. It was long, & there were portions of it where there were no houses. But there was, on one side, a continuous line of houses, & on the other side there were houses & shops. It was contrary to sense to say that it was not a street, & whether it was private or public property it made no difference (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—MIDLAND RY. CO. v. WEST HAM LOCAL BOARD (1880), 2 T. L. R. 589, C. A.

See, now, 1875 Act, s. 150.

93. Within 1875 Act, sect. 4—Whether co-extensive with streets under sect. 150—Question of fact.]—By sect. 4 of the above Act, "in this Act, if not inconsistent with the context, the following words & expressions have the meaning hereinafter respectively assigned to them," & amongst other definitions, "street includes any road," etc. By sect. 150, where any street within any urban district, not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, is not sewered, paved, & channelled to the satisfaction of the urban authority they may give notice to the owners of the adjoining premises to sewer, etc., the street & in failure to comply with the notice the urban authority may execute the works themselves, & recover the expense of so doing from the adjoining owners in a summary manner. Summary proceedings having been taken by an urban authority to recover, under sect. 150, the expense of sewerage, etc., a road within the district which was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large:—Held: it was a question of fact for the justices to determine whether or not the road was a street within sect. 150, & they were not bound to find as matter of law that it was a street by the terms of the definition in sect. 4.—MAUDE v. BAILDON LOCAL BOARD (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 394; 48 L. T. 874; 47 J. P. 644, D. O.

A., [1891] 2 Q. B. 216.

94. ————]—Sect. 150 of the above Act applies only to streets which are streets in the ordinary & popular sense of the word, & the word "street," in sect. 150, does not necessarily include every meaning given to it by sect. 4 of the Act. In summary proceedings to recover expenses under sect. 150, it is for the justices, having regard to the surrounding circumstances, & to whether there is any intention of building along a road so as to convert it into a street, to find as a fact whether the road in question is a street in the ordinary & popular sense of the word; & it makes no difference that the sect. has been applied or may apply to a portion of the road other than that in question. Where the justices find a road, or a portion of a road, is not a street in the ordinary & popular sense, they will be right in holding that the sect. is not applicable to the road or portion.—R. 96. Within 1875 Act, sect. 16—Private road—Subject to toll.]—By a local Act the O. corp. were generally empowered to lay sewers in streets & courts not being highways, with certain special provisions as to sewerage S. road, which it was admitted had not been complied with. The same Act repealed all the other general Acts on the subject, so far as they applied to the borough, but made no mention of Sewage Utilisation Act, 1865 (c. 75), which was passed a few days before the local Act, & which gave the corp. general powers to lay sewers. The above Act repeals Sewage Utilisation Act, & itself empowers sewer authorities to lay sewers in any "road or street or place laid out as or intended for a street." After the passing of the above Act, the corp. proceeded to sewer S. road, which was a private way, with houses on each side, for the passage along which a toll was taken by ptfs., in whom it was vested.

A motion by ptfs. for an injunction to restrain the corp. was refused:—Held: (1) the corp. had power to sewer S. road, independently of the local Act, under the above sect., as continuing the power given by Sewage Utilisation Act, which it only repealed for the purpose of consolidation & re-enactment; (2) S. road was a street within the Acts.

The term "street" both in its general meaning & by the local [O. Borough Improvement] Act includes a private road, for passage over which a toll is charged, & on which the public have no right of way.—TAYLOR v. OLDHAM CORPN. (1876), 4 Ch. D. 395; 46 L. J. Ch. 105; 35 L. T. 696; 25 W. R. 178.

97. ————]—Ptff. was the owner of a private road in the W. district. Defts. were the urban sanitary authority of the district, & had the control of the streets generally in that district, & also the power of supplying the inhabitants with water. Defts. commenced, without ptff.'s consent, to break up his private road for the purpose of laying down water mains. Ptff. brought an action for an injunction:—Held: the words "where the local authority have not the control of the streets," in sect. 57 of the above Act, which forbids the laying down of pipes in any private road without the consent of the owner, are descriptive of a local authority who have not the control generally of the streets in their district, & had no application to defts.: & defts. had power under sects. 16 & 54 of the Act to lay down pipes in ptff.'s private road without his consent, making him proper compensation under sect. 308 of the same Act.

102. — Strip of land lying between houses & highway repairable by public.—Owners of land adjoining a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large erected houses on their land, & threw open to the highway a strip of land in front of them:—Held: the houses with the strip of land in front together formed a "street" within the above sect. which the urban sanitary authority within whose district it was situate could compel the frontagers to pave, channel, & kerb under that sect.—*RICHARDS v. 103. — Public highway though not formally dedicated.—Applt. was summoned under the above sect. for non payment of expenses incurred by the rural authority in sewerage, paving, etc., a road on which his premises abutted. An order of the Local Govt. Board, under sect. 276 of the Act, had declared the above sect. to be in force as to the road in question, which the order also declared to be a street. The road ran from a turnpike road to a bridge, where it passed into another parish, & was from that point repaired by the local board of that parish as a highway. It was about 900 feet long. It had on the south side several houses, including applt.'s house, abutting on it; on the north there was none for 785 feet from the turnpike road. For the rest of its course it was bounded on that side by a sewage farm belonging to the rural authority, on which were two buildings. It was a public highway. There was no evidence of formal dedication of the road, but there was evidence of its use as a public highway since 1835, & some evidence before 1835, but none inconsistent with its having been then an occupation road or footpath.

The justices held the order of the Local Govt. Board conclusive, that the road was a street, & further held, that, although in their opinion it was not a street in the popular acceptance of the word, it was a street within sect. 4 of the Act. On a case stated:—Held: the justices were wrong in holding that the order of the Local Govt. Board was conclusive that the road was a street, but that by the definition in sect. 4 it was a "street" within sect. 150, & applt. was liable.—*FENWICK v. 105. — Cul de sac—Adjoining premises without means of access.—A passage forming a cul de sac may be a "street" within the above sect. & the owner of premises abutting thereon is liable to pay his apportioned share of the costs incurred by the local authority in making it up, notwithstanding the fact that he has no means of access into the passage from his premises.

I have no doubt I have to see what sort of a passage this is, whether it is a private approach to a man's house—his avenue leading up to his house from the street—or whether it is something which can properly be dealt with by this Act as a passage-way rightly open to any member of the public who is going along an adjacent highway, & as to which DAY, J., said in It. v. Goole Local Board, No. 95, ante, "there is nothing to show that the public cannot pass along it." 106. — Additions to ancient highway.—By an agreement, dated in 1883, the owners of an estate in an urban district through which ran an ancient highway about thirty feet wide, repairable by the inhabitants at large, agreed with the borough council that as & when the estate should be laid out for building, the owners would straighten & lay out the road so as to make it forty feet wide throughout. The agreement recited that it was entered into for the purpose of settling a question which had arisen as to the extent of the public rights over the road. When the whole of the road had been laid out in accordance with the agreement, the council made it up under the powers of the above sect., & sought to recover the expenses from the owners of premises abutting on the road:—Held: the whole of the road was repairable by the inhabitants at large, & consequently, the frontagers were not liable for the improvement expenses.—*PORTSMOUTH CORPN. v. T. was proceeded against under the above sect. for bringing forward his house beyond the line of street without the consent of the urban authority:—Held: this was a street within the meaning of that sect., though it was also a turnpike road, & notwithstanding the definition of street in sect. 4 of the Act.—THOMAS v. ROBERTS (1878), 43 J. P. 574, D. C.

108. Within 1875 Act, s. 157—Footway forming principal access to houses.—In making bye-laws, & insisting on their observance, a local authority is entitled to consider what may happen in the future, when present conditions have been altered & the neighbourhood has developed, even although the present necessity for the bye-laws may not be obvious.

The power to make bye-laws, as regards new streets, given by the above sect. is not confined to streets in the popular sense of the term, namely, roadways, with houses on both sides of them, but applies to streets, as defined by sect. 4 of the Act, which are proposed to be laid out & constructed for the first time.

The bye-laws of an urban sanitary authority required every new street over 100 feet long to be so laid out that its width should be 36 feet at the least & that it should be constructed for use as a carriage drive. W., who was employed, as a builder, by G. the owner of land, to erect some cottages on the land of G., sent to the urban authority plans showing an intended footpath, 202 feet long & 5 feet wide, affording the principal access to the cottages. The proposed footpath being objected to as not complying with the bye-laws, W., without any authority from G., undertook that a roadway, 36 feet wide, should be made as soon as possession of sufficient land on the side further from the cottages to enable a road of the required width to be made could be obtained from a tenant whose tenancy could not be determined for some months. The plans, varied so as to show a roadway 36 feet wide, were approved on the conditions of the undertaking. The cottages were then erected, & the footpath was levelled & surfaced with rubble & sand. It was 5 feet wide & bounded on the further side from the cottages by an ancient hedge, & on the nearer side by a fence in which were openings giving access to the cottages:—Held: defts. had laid out & constructed a street within the meaning of the bye-laws; the bye-laws were intra vires & reasonable; &, although W., by reason of his having no control over the land, was not a proper party to the action, an injunction to enforce the obligations under the bye-laws must be granted against G.—*A.-G. v. 112. ———.]—On Apr. 7, 1924, deposited with the B. Corpn. plans for the erection of a house & shop on a plot of land of which they were the owners fronting on H. Road, a main road 60 feet wide. The plot of land was situate at the corner of H. Road & C. Street, both within the borough of B. On the eastern side of the plot & at a distance therefrom of 700 feet was a steam laundry erected in & fronting on H. Road, the front main wall of which was set back from the road a distance of 12 feet. The land between the site of defts.' proposed building & the laundry was unbuilt upon. According to the deposited plans it was proposed to set back the building from H. Road a distance of 2 feet only. On Apr. 10, 1924, the corpn. disapproved of the plans on the ground that the building was not set back 12 feet from H. Road & that the same was proposed to be erected beyond the front main wall of the laundry. Notwithstanding this disapproval defts. proceeded to erect their building. Thereupon an action was commenced by the A.-G. at the relation of the corpn. for an injunction & for a mandatory order. Defts. contended that the laundry was not in the same street as their building or a building on either side of such building within Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888 (c. 52), s. 3:—Held: (1) in order to be a "street" within the sect. there must be a succession of houses & buildings at least on one side of it, with some degree of continuity & proximity, such as would enable the et., as a question of fact, to hold that what was originally a mere highway had become a street; tried by that test the part of H. Road between C. Street on the west & the laundry on the east had not become a street; &, therefore, defts.' building & the laundry were not in the same street; (2) the expression "house . . . on either side thereof" in the sect. meant a house within some near distance, within some degree of proximity & not one standing a considerable distance away, &, therefore, even assuming that the part of H. Road in question had become a street, the laundry, being situate at a distance of 700 feet from defts.' building, could not properly be described as a "house or building on either side" of it within the sect.—*A.-G. v. Sect. 53 enacts that where any sewer shall be constructed by any vestry in a street in which previously to such construction there had been no sewer, or only an open sewer, but where sewers rates have been levied previously to such construction, the expense of constructing such sewer should be borne & defrayed only in part by the owners of the houses situate in, & of the land bounding & abutting on, such street respectively & the residue by the vestry, out of the sewers rates levied in their parish:—Held: sect. 53 applied to all streets, both old & new; &, therefore, when a sewer was constructed in a new street, but sewers rates had been levied in the street previously to the construction of the sewer, the owners of property in the street could not be charged with the whole expense of constructing the sewer.—*STR. Resps. laid down sewers in the streets & apportioned the whole of the cost between applt., his tenants, & the owners of the cemetery. Sewer rates had for many years been levied in respect of the houses upon applt.'s land, although no sewer had previously existed in the streets thereon:—Held: the word "street" in sect. 53 included "new streets" as defined by sect. 112, as well as old streets, that sect. 52 did not apply, & therefore, the apportionment was invalid, as it did not provide that a portion of the cost of the sewers should be defrayed by resp. out of the sewers rate levied in their district:—Semble: even if sect. 52 had been applicable, the apportionment would have been invalid, since it did not charge any portion of the cost of the sewers upon the owners of the building land bounding & abutting upon the ends of the streets.—*SHEFFIELD v. In 1883 the vestry of the parish in which the road was constructed a sewer & apportioned part of the expense of construction to the owner of lands abutting on the road. Previously to 1883 there had been no sewer in this part of the road. Sewers rates had been levied for five years prior to Jan. 1, 1856, in respect of these lands:—Held: (1) the case fell under sect. 53 & not under sect. 52 of the above Act; (2) the road was a "street" within the meaning of sect. 53 as defined by sect. 112 of that Act, & the lands were under the proviso in sect. 53 exempt from apportionment.—*ST. The Vestry made branches from the drains into a sewer which belonged to them & ran along the centre of the road, & for that purpose they opened the road & footway. The builder declined to repay to the vestry the expenses incurred thereby:—Held: the road was not the less a street within the definitions in sect. 250 of the 1855 Act, & sect. 112 of the 1862 Act, because it came within the definition of a new street in the last mentioned sect.—*ST. A roadway had previously existed on the site with warehouses abutting thereon, the gateway included the site of a former gateway, which had been pulled down & altered to a greater width. The approach did not afford communication with any other public street, & was for the sole use & convenience of the tenants of the dwellings, to the exclusion of the public, no right of way over the same having ever been dedicated to or used by the public at large:—Held: the approach had not been laid out as "a street for foot traffic only" within the above sect., so as to require the sanction of the Metropolitan Board of Works to the laying out thereof.—*METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS v. Prior to the passing of the Act, applt. erected in accordance with the statutes then applicable thereto a building comprising shops on the ground floor with flats above & an archway through the middle of the ground floor. The building fronted or abutted on to a street called V. three sides of the quadrangle. Such buildings were to contain about forty-two flats, & would have two entrances & staircases leading from the quadrangle to the flats. There would also be a one storied building used as an estate office with a separate entrance from the quadrangle. The drains of the building were to be connected with respns. sewer in V. Street. There would be no entrance or exit to or from the quadrangle, except by the said archway in V. Street, which was closed by lofty iron gates, & this archway & the quadrangle were intended for the use of the tenants of the flats in the proposed new buildings, & the tradesmen & others visiting them on business or pleasure, with or without carriages, & the public at large were to be entirely excluded therefrom:—Held: (1) applt. had not commenced to form or lay out a "street" for carriage traffic within sect. 7 of the Act; (2) the question whether the place was a "street" within the sect. was one of law.—*WOOD v. The owner of a building estate, of about four acres in extent, commenced to lay out a road which communicated at one end with a public carriage way the other end of the road ran into a square, about which it was intended to build a continuous line of houses or flats; houses or blocks of flats were also to be built along each side of the road itself, the total length of the road being about 600 feet. It was further intended to erect gates at the point where the road ran out of the public carriage way, & to keep a porter to open & shut the gates. The road was not intended for public use, but solely for the use of the occupiers of the houses in the road & square, & of their visitors & tradespeople. The owner had not obtained the consent of the London County Council before commencing the work:—Held: the road was a street within sect. 7 of the Act, & the owner was properly convicted under that sect. of having commenced to form or lay out a street for carriage traffic without having first obtained the sanction of the London County Council.—*ARMSTRONG v. By sect. 53, "If any street, although a public highway at the passing of the special Act, have not theretofore been well & sufficiently paved & flagged, or otherwise made good," the occupiers of lands abutting on the street are liable for the expenses of paving, etc., & therefore the street is to be repaired out of the rates. A special Act incorporated sect. 53, but provided that "owners" should be substituted for "occupiers."

Pltfs., the local authority, made an agreement with defts. the owners of land abutting on a road, & under this agreement pltfs. purchased land & widened & improved the road. Afterwards pltfs. paved & flagged the footpath beside the road, & sued defts. for the expenses. The jury found that at the time of the paving the road was not a street in the popular acceptance of the term, & that it had been "otherwise made good" by the work which pltfs. had done under the agreement:—Held: (1) the road was a "street" within sect. 53; (2) as it had been "otherwise made good" defts. were not liable.—*PORTSMOUTH CORPN. v. Local Government Act, 1858 (Amendment) Act, 1861 (c. 61)—Question of fact—For jury.]—On the trial of an indictment framed on sect. 28 of the above Act, for bringing forward a house in a street beyond the front wall of the houses on either side, without the consent of the local board of health, it was proved that a house surrounded by a garden alongside a highway had been so brought forward by deft.; that alongside the same highway there were other houses in gardens separated from each other by their respective gardens, & standing irregularly, & at different distances from the highway:—Held: it was a question of fact for the jury whether the houses formed a street.

(2) In order to constitute a street there must be a row of houses sufficiently continuous & sufficiently proximate to one another; (3) semble: a set of detached houses not being in a continuous line, but some facing one way & some another, & having no appearance of uniformity, is not a street within the above Act.—*R. v. 133. Local Act—New roads on building estate.]—By a local Act comrs. were created having duties with regard to streets & buildings within a certain area. In 1878 it was proposed to lay out an estate within such area for building, & plans were submitted to & approved by the comrs. By an agreement between them & deft., deft. was on completion of the roads in question, to throw eighteen feet of his land into the said roads, which was done, but not to make the roads. In 1887 the powers of the comrs. passed to the council on incorporation. In 1892 the council by an order required deft. to sewer, drain, level, flag, & metal the said roads so far as his premises fronted, adjoined or abutted thereon. The order not having been complied with, the council did the work themselves, & on making request for payment, deft.'s agent disputed that the property was liable. On a summons taken out by the council to have the sums expended declared a charge on the property:—Held: (1) the roads were streets as to which the council had power to make the order; (2) they were public streets as well as streets within the ordinary meaning of the term.—*WEST HARTLEPOOL CORPN. v. 134. Question of fact, not of law — Under Metropolis Management Acts.]—A police magistrate, on a summons for an order, under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), ss. 105, 226, upon the proprietor of houses in D., alleged to be a “new street” within the Metropolis, for his share of the expenses of paving it, after hearing the parties & their evidence, dismissed the summons on the ground that D. was not a “new street” within the Act, because it was an old highway. A rule, under Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 11), s. 5, calling on him to hear & adjudicate on the complaint, was obtained, with a view of obtaining the decision of this ct., that D. might be a “new street” within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, though it was an old highway:—Held: this ct. could not inquire whether the magistrate came to a right conclusion or not, but only whether he had adjudicated; & the ct. being of opinion that he had done so, the rule was discharged without any expression of opinion as to whether he was right or wrong in his construction of the Act.—*R. v. In proceedings taken by the P. Board of Works for the paving of the lane as a “new street” within Metropolis Management Acts, the magistrate held that the lane was not a “street” within the Acts, & refused to state a case under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43), as he considered the question one of fact:—Held: the question whether the lane was a “street” or not was a question of fact & not of law, & the magistrate could not be compelled to state a case.—*R. v. 137. ——J.—A street, in order to be a new street within Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, must be a street formed by houses, some of which have been newly built, or by such houses with land.

A road which had been laid out since the passing of the Act of 1862, & was therefore a new street within the definition in sect. 112 of that Act, had upon one side a house & no other building, & upon the other side a house at one end & a chapel & hall at the other; no new buildings had been erected upon either side of the road for more than twenty years, nor was there any probability of the vacant plots of land on either side being built upon for some years:—Held: a magistrate was justified in finding that the road was not a new street for the purposes of sect. 105 of the Act of 1855 or sect. 77 of the Act of 1862, & the local authority could not recover from the frontagers the expenses of paving the road.

The question is whether it is a new street for the purposes of sect. 105 of the Act of 1855 or sect. 77 of the Act of 1862. I cannot feel any doubt upon the language of the sects., although the question is a very important one—important because, as has been pointed out, this particular road is only a section in the middle of a long road, & it may be most inconvenient that a portion of a long road should be imperfectly paved while the rest is properly done; we cannot, however, help that. When sect. 105 is carefully looked at, it is obvious that it not merely begins by treating houses as the essence of what is a street for the purposes of the sect., but later on it goes on to use this expression: “& the owners of the houses forming such street shall, on demand, pay to such vestry or board the amount of the estimated expenses.” Clearly when that sect. was passed the Legislature was thinking of a street composed wholly or partially of houses; & I should say that the question whether there was a sufficient number of houses to make a road a street for the purposes of that Act would be a question of fact for the magistrate (WRIGHT, J.). *ST. 138. What may be a new street.—Under Metropolis Management Acts Railway bridge connecting streets.]—Applts., a railway co., constructed over their railway a bridge 50 feet wide, on which the railway station was built & which connected two streets in the Metropolis. The three lamps on the bridge were erected & lighted by the railway co., & by a deed of agreement, between the railway co. & the New River Waterworks Co., the latter co. had a perpetual easement for the conveyance of its water over the bridge by means of pipes & mains laid under its surface. The bridge had been used by the public uninterruptedly for eighteen months, & a public cab stand, appointed by the Comrs. of Police, was established on a part of the bridge:—Held: the bridge was a new street within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), & applts. were liable to contribute in respect of it to the paving of the road.—NORTH LONDON RY. CO. v. ST. MARY, ISLINGTON, VESTRY (1872), 27 L. T. 672; 37 J. P. 311; 21 W. R. 226.

(c. 102), s. 112, the expression “new street” is not confined to streets dedicated to the public.

Resp. was the owner of houses on both sides of a road, the footpaths of which on each side had been paved by applts., the vestry of the parish, & were used by the public. The carriageway had never been dedicated to the public; applts. paved the carriageway, & sought to recover the expense from resp. under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, on the ground that the carriageway was a new street:—Held: although the carriageway had not been dedicated to the public, it was a new street within Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 112; & resp. was liable to pay the expense of paving it under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105.—*ST. 141. — — — Existing roadway & footpath—Newly made up.]—A vestry sought to charge the owner of houses in a road with the expenses of paving the road, including the footway, which was on Jan. 1, 1856, when Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), came into operation, an ancient footway repairable by the inhabitants at large, & had been from time to time repaired by the vestry at the expense of the ratepayers. The roadway as distinguished from the footway had never been repaired by the vestry & the maintenance of the road had not, previously to Jan. 1, 1856, been taken into charge or assumed by the authorities having control of the pavement or highways. The footway had been tar paved by the vestry at the cost of the ratepayers, but there was no record of it having been kerbed by the vestry, & such tar paving & other work as had been done from time to time was in the nature of repairs of a temporary character:—Held: the road, including the footpath, was a “new street” within Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 112, & the owner of the houses was liable to contribute to the paving expenses.—*WILSON v. Road, which had been paved in 1870 at the sole cost of the owners of houses on the north side, under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, agreed with the vestry to set back his boundary & dedicate a strip 13 feet wide to the public, so as to increase the width of the road. 6 feet in width of this added strip was thrown by the vestry into the carriageway of S. Road, & was metalled & ever since maintained & repaired out of the general rates. The remaining 7 feet was left to serve as a footpath, but was never paved, maintained, or repaired by the vestry. In 1894 the vestry resolved that the footpath, being a new street, should be paved at the cost of the owners of the houses or land abutting upon the street:—Held: no part of the cost of paving the footpath could be apportioned on the owners of the houses on the north side of S. Road, upon whom the whole cost of paving that road as it was in 1870 had then been apportioned.—WHITE v. FULHAM VESTRY (1896), 74 L. T. 425; 60 J. P. 327; 12 T. L. R. 328; 40 Sol. Jo. 439, D. C.

Appls., within whose district the street lay, thereupon decided to pave the street as a new street under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & apportioned the estimated expenses among the frontagers. Resp't., who was one of the frontagers, contended that, as the street had been formed & laid out without the consent of the London County Council, it had been illegally formed & laid out, & that therefore the sect. did not apply so as to entitle appls. to apportion the expenses: Held: as the street was in fact a new street appls. had power under the sect. to pave it & to apportion the estimated expenses among the frontagers.—CAMBERWELL CORPN. v. 146. — — — — — Maintenance of highway by local authority.—The mere fact that the maintenance of the paving & roadway of a road within the Metropolis had not previously to 1862 been taken into charge by the highway authority of the parish is not enough to constitute the road a "new street" within Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & 1862 (c. 102), s. 77.

No doubt if a piece of land were newly laid out for the purpose of being used as a street, & were not repairable by the public at large, it would be a new street although there were no houses along it. Or again, if an old road has houses built along its sides with access to it, & thereby is converted into what is popularly understood by the term "street," it would be a new street within the [1862] Act (CAVE, J.).—ARTER v. 150. Recent change of character essential.] — (1) The fact that the local authority have, under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 98, permanently paved & channelled the footway before a number of houses fronting a country road will not estop them afterwards when that country road has, by having houses built continuously, & nearly continuously on both sides of it, become a new street, from exercising the powers given by sect. 105 of that Act by directing the footways on both sides to be permanently paved & channelled, & apportioning the estimated cost among the frontagers, including among these owners of the houses before which the footpath was previously paved & channelled under sect. 98.

(2) "New street" within Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 112, explained.

When you get the word street qualified with the epithet "new" it at once throws you back upon the popular meaning of the word street, & it means a place which by change of circumstances has within some indefinable period, you cannot say how long, but recently, acquired by building a new character & part of the old (WILLIS, J.).—CROSSE v. WANDSWORTH BOARD OF WORKS (1898), 79 L. T. 351; 62 J. P. 807, D. C.

152. — — — — — (1) The words "new street," as used in the Metropolis Management Acts, include a new street in the ordinary & popular sense of the term; & therefore, a country lane, which was bounded by hedges & fields, & was repaired by the parish time out of mind, becomes a new street within the meaning of that statute when houses are built along the sides of the lane. Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, provides that, where any vestry or district board shall have paved any new street, the owners of the land bounding or abutting on such street shall be liable to contribute to the expense of paving the same:—Held: the words "land bounding or abutting on such street" include the soil of private roads leading out of a new street. (2) Prior to the passing of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), an ancient highway, which was a country lane, & had been repaired by the parish from time out of mind, existed in a district within the Act; after the passing of that statute, & before the passing of Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102),

In 1855 a road in P., within the metropolis, as defined by the 1855 Act, s. 250, ran between an irregular line of houses & market gardens upon the south side & market gardens upon the north. Between that year & 1874, a continuous line of houses was built along the north side & several houses along the south. The district board, within whose jurisdiction the road lay in 1874, paved a footpath by the side of the road & paid for the cost of the work under the 1855 Act, ss. 96, 98, out of the general rate levied upon the inhabitants of P.:—Held: (1) between 1855 & 1874 the road had become a “new street” within the 1855 Act, s. 105; (2) the district board had no power to charge the cost of paving the footpath upon the general rate, but it was compulsory upon them to obtain payment thereof from the owners of the adjoining houses & land, under that sect. as varied by the 1862 Act, s. 77.—*DRYDEN v. A road, which was a turnpike road down to 1805 & previously to 1869 of a rural character, subsequently became a new street in the ordinary sense of the term by the erection of buildings alongside it:—Held: (1) it was within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & therefore the district board might pave it under that sect. & charge the expenses upon the frontagers; (2) the fact that slight temporary repairs had been previously done by the district board to the footway of the road by tar painting it did not prevent them from exercising the powers given by the sect.

The principle on which the expenses of paving a new street have been apportioned by a district board amongst the owners liable in respect thereof cannot be questioned in any ct.—*DAVIS v. 161. — New building on one side only—Opposite sides of street in different highway areas.—The boundary between two parishes, one of which was in the county of London & the other in Middlesex, ran along the middle of an old highway 2993 feet in length. At the time when Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), came into operation, buildings had been erected on the Middlesex side of the highway, along nearly the whole of its length, but on the London side there were only seven or eight buildings situated at various points. A number of buildings having recently been erected along the London side of the highway, the vestry of the parish to which that portion of the highway belonged laid down a sewer under it for the purpose of draining those buildings, & apportioned the expenses of making the sewer among the frontagers upon that side of the highway on the ground that it was a new street. One of the frontagers having refused to pay the amount apportioned upon him, application was made to justices by the vestry for an order for payment by him of that amount. The justices found as a fact that, at the time when the Act came into operation, the highway, as a whole, had already become a street; & that being so, they decided that they could not deal with the London side of the highway by itself for the purpose of determining whether it was a new street, & therefore they dismissed the application:—Held: their decision was right. (CLERKENWELL VESTRY v. EDMONDSON & SONS, [1902] 1 K. B. 336; 71 L. J. K. B. 198; 86 L. T. 137; 18 T. L. R. 218, C. A.)

owners of the houses forming the street. From 1883 to 1899 the district board, & the vestry who succeeded them, repaired the footways & carriage-way of the street as surveyors of highways. In 1899 the vestry resolved to exercise their powers under sect. 105, & required the owners to pay the apportioned expenses of paving the street:—Held: as neither the board nor the vestry had exercised their powers under sect. 105 before 1899, the vestry were then entitled to exercise them, notwithstanding the time which had elapsed since the road became a new street.

A road may become a "new street" within sect. 105 of the Act, although all the land on one side of it is building land upon which no building has been erected.

(2) A highway of which one side is covered with houses along its entire length, & the other consists of building land vacant except for the existence thereon of a temporary iron school is a "street" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102).—*SIMMONDS BROTHERS, LTD. v. Return that P. bridge was paved, repaired & cleansed under a local Act of Parliament:—Held: the return was no answer, as sect. 113 of Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), did not exempt the property from liability to the rate imposed under sect. 37.

The intention of the legislature does not seem to be to exempt any property from the rate imposed by sect. 27, but to exempt ways, bridges, etc., managed under the provisions of local Acts from the regulations of the general highway Act, so as to preserve the powers conferred by the local Acts (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—*R. v. Govt. Act, 1894 (c. 73), is general, & has not the limited meaning given to the same expression in Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77); & highway expenses raised by an acre rate are not defrayed out of any property or funds other than rates within sect. 29 of Local Govt. Act, 1894.

Comrs. of M. had under certain local & private Acts powers of inclosure & drainage, & jurisdiction over the roads in M., a district made up of parts of certain parishes, some of which were in rural & others in urban sanitary districts. Under these Acts the expenses of repairing the roads in M. were raised by an acre rate levied equally on the lands in M., & the lands in M. were exempted from all other highway expenses:—Held: (1) the comrs. were a highway authority within Local Govt. Act, 1891; (2) their authority as to the roads in the rural district was by sect. 25 of that Act transferred to the rural district council, their authority as to the roads in the urban district to the urban district council; (3) the highway expenses of M., after the transfer, were not to be raised by an acre tax, but treated as general expenses under sect. 29 of the Act, & the lands in M. were no longer exempted from general highway rates.—Re MARSHLAND SMEETH & FEN DISTRICT COMRS. & MARSHLAND RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1895), 65 L. CHESTER COUNTY COUNCIL* (1891), 61 L. J. Q. B. 22; 65 L. T. 85; 55 J. P. 808; 39 W. R. 606.

170. Whether district a geographical area.]—By a series of statutes passed to regulate the management of ancient trust funds for repairing certain roads, the roads were divided among the road authorities, who received their due proportion of the funds, so that, in places, one side of the road was local situate in one urban district, & the other side in another district. For purposes of repair, however, the roads were divided across, so that each district council repaired a certain length of road, partly within its own district & partly without. Under the trusts on which the funds were held the councils had the duty of lighting, watching, & watering the roads. The urban district councils claimed to retain the roads as main roads:—Held: (1) the district councils, notwithstanding their additional duties with regard to the roads, might retain, as being main roads within their district, so much, & so much only, of the roads as they repaired, though parts of the road might be locally situate outside the area of the district, on the ground that in this connection "district" means an administrative rather than a geographical area; (2) the existence of the trust funds ought not to be excluded from consideration in settling the amount to be contributed from the county; (3) the amount of the funds usually applicable to lighting, watching, & watering should not be treated as money to be taken into account in assessing the payment to be made by the county towards maintenance, repair, & improvement.—*MIDDLESEX COUNTY COUNCIL v. From 1883 until Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), the highways were repaired & maintained by such comrs. By sect. 12 of the Local Government Act, 1888, turnpike roads were abolished in the Isle, & Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), was made to apply to it. In 1889 the Isle was made an administrative county of itself. Since 1890 the highway comrs. maintained & kept in repair as main roads the highways in the Isle. By sect. 25 of Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), it was provided that there should be transferred to the district council of every rural district all the powers, duties, & liabilities of any highway authority in the district, & that all highway boards should cease to exist, & that rural district councils should be the successors of the highway authority. Sect. 100 of Local Government Act, 1888, provides that the expression "highway authority" shall mean, as respects a highway district, the highway board or authority having the powers of a highway board:—Held: the powers, duties, & liabilities of the Isle of Wight highway comrs. had been transferred to the district council of the rural districts of the island, & the Isle of Wight highway comrs. had ceased to exist by sect. 25 of Local Government Act, 1894, & although the district council had become the actual highway authority, the expenses would still have to be defrayed by the county council.—Re ISLE OF WIGHT HIGHWAY COMRS. (1895), 72 L. ### B. South Wales.

See South Wales Highways Act, 1860 (c. 68); South Wales Highway Act, Amendment Act, 1878 (c. 34).

175. Obligation to repair—How enforced.]—Under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 16, districts were formed & highway boards constituted for the management of highways in South Wales, & district surveyors were appointed. By South Wales Highways Act, 1860 (c. 68), s. 6, the district surveyor is to have "all duties, powers, & responsibilities as regards the parishes in such district, of a surveyor elected under" Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50); "& all acts & provisions not hereby repealed, applicable to such last mentioned surveyor, shall, save as herein otherwise provided, apply in like manner to a surveyor of highways of a district appointed under this Act;" & by sect. 43, except as otherwise provided, all the provisions of Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), were to remain in force & be applicable to the highways to be managed under the later Act, & the two Acts were to be construed together as one Act. Sect. 40 re-enacted sect. 90 of Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), substituting a summons on the district surveyor for a summons on the parish surveyor; but sect. 95 of the earlier Act was not expressly re-enacted:—Held: that sect. remained in force; & therefore where, on the hearing of a summons against the district surveyor for the non-repair of a highway in South Wales, he denies, on behalf of the inhabitants of the parish, the obligation to repair, the justices may direct an indictment to be preferred against the parish.—R. v. JAMES (1863), 3 B. & S. 901; 32 L. J. M. C. 211; 27 J. P. 676; 9 Jur. N. S. 1126; 122 E. R. 337.

SUB-SECT. 3. —OTHER CASES.

176. "Town" —Construction of local Act.]—Sect. 23, of a local Act for better paving, etc., the town of M., required the comrs. appointed by the Act to repair, etc., all or any of the streets, etc., then paved or thereafter to be paved, cleansed, & lighted under the Act; sect. 35 empowered the comrs. to light streets "within the town," although they were not public. The limits of the Act were not defined. In pursuance of Highway Act, 1862 (c. 61), s. 7, the county of K. was divided into highway districts, one of which included that part of the parish of M. "not within the town of M." Since 1862, certain highways in the parish of M. had been lighted by the comrs.; before they were so lighted they were not within the town. Upon complaint before justices against the highway district board for not repairing them:—Held: (1) the word "town" in the local Act meant the town of M. not as it existed at the time of the passing of the Act, but as it extended from time to time; (2) a highway was within the town of M. if there was a continuous series of houses in it so contiguous as to form a congregation of human habitations; (3) the fact of lighting the highways was not conclusive as to their being in the town of M.—MILTON COMRS. v. FAVERSHAM DISTRICT HIGHWAY BOARD (1867), 10 B. & S. 518; 32 J. P. 37.

In 1808, the comr. appointed to carry the Act into execution made an award whereby & by the map deposited therewith a public road forty feet wide was directed to be made from A. to B. This road was accordingly set out, & was duly fenced by the allottees of the land adjoining it; but it was never formed & completed so as to satisfy the requirements of Inclosure Act, 1801 (c. 109), ss. 8 & 9, & to become a highway repairable by the parish; & there was no evidence that it had ever been used except by the owners or tenants of the allotments on the side of it, & in two or three instances by other persons shortly after it was so set out. About the year 1822, S., who was the lord of the manor of Effingham East Court, & who had purchased some allotments abutting on a portion of the road, planted along the whole length of it, about nine or ten feet from the fence separating it from Rammore Common, a row of fir trees; & the rest of the forty feet was overgrown with briars, brambles, & furze. Pltf. in 1852 became the owner of an estate abutting on the other portion of the road, & had for more than twenty years exercised repeated acts of ownership over the whole of the 40-foot space, such as, shooting over it, cutting down some of the fir-trees when they wanted thinning, & repairing the fences; though these it appeared had occasionally been repaired by other persons, to prevent sheep & cattle from straying on to their lands from the adjoining common. Deft., in 1869, purchased the estate which had formerly belonged to S.; & in 1870 she cut down & converted several of the trees growing upon the 40-foot space opposite pltf.'s land; & to an action against her for this alleged trespass she pleaded, amongst other pleas, that the locus in quo was a common & public highway for all the Queen's subjects, & justified the cutting down & removing the trees in the exercise of such right of way. Neither in the conveyance to pltf., nor in that to deft., nor in the respective plans thereto annexed, was any mention made of the 40-foot road. The jury found that deft. did the acts complained of in assertion of a claim of property, & not of a right of way; that the 40-foot road was never taken to as a public highway by the public; & that pltf. had had twenty years' uninterrupted possession of the locus in quo :—Held : the evidence did not support the plea.

(2) Acceptance by the public is ordinarily proved by user by the public; & user by the public is also evidence of dedication by the owner. Both dedication by the owner & user by the public must concur to create a road otherwise than by statute (BRETT, J.).

182. — — — — —.]—In 1830, A. projected the formation of a seaside town, to be built on his lands, & a plan was prepared which showed the sites of various streets, roads, & squares, proposed to be made & formed on such lands. In June, 1833, a private Act of Parliament was obtained by which the lands described on the plan were made a distinct parish for the purposes of the Act, & by which comrs. were appointed in whom were vested all roads, streets, & ways, then made & used by the public, or thereafter to be made & adopted by the comrs. as public ways under the Act. The Act also conferred plenary powers on the comrs. with regard to the paving, lighting, draining, & repairing, of such streets, roads, & ways. In Feb. 1833, A. had sold & conveyed to B. who was one of the principal promoters of the Act, & one of the first comrs. appointed thereunder, several of the plots of land described on the plan & on which were delineated the sites of certain of the proposed roads, streets, & squares. Previously & subsequently to the Act numerous houses had been built, & some of the roads, streets, & ways shown on the plan had been wholly or partially formed, & had been adopted by the comrs., but no houses were at any time erected on the lands conveyed to B., & the same, including such parts as comprised the sites of the proposed roads, streets, & squares, were from 1833 to 1867 uninterruptedly held & enjoyed & cultivated as arable & pasture lands by B. & his lessees. In 1868, the comrs. gave B.'s devisees notice of their intention to take possession of the sites of the proposed streets, roads, & squares shown on the plan, & in 1871 they proceeded to mark, grip up, & stamp out such sites on the ground that the

183. Actual dedication necessary—Abandonment of scheme.—In Jan. 1850, the owner in fee of a plot of land near a town demised the coals under it for six years to K., the owner in fee of the adjoining land; & in the lease was an agreement that a street, to be called Union Street, should within five years be made across the land under which the coal lay & K.'s land; that a sewer should be made under such road; that the lessor & lessee should, at their own cost, construct & repair so much of the said road & sewer as should extend along their respective lands; & that the road should be used as a public road for all purposes for ever thereafter, & should be maintained by each of the parties so far as the same should extend over his land, until the same should be adopted by the surveyor of highways. The road & sewer were never made, & there was no dedication of a highway to the public by notice under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50). A brickfield, & afterwards, in 1851, a colliery, were opened on K.'s land, & gaps were opened through which access was obtained to the premises for carts & foot-passengers. In 1869 posts & chains were placed across one of the openings, but after a few months the chains were removed. In 1870 K.'s land was sold, & in 1871 conveyed to plff. in fee, & in 1872 the local board of health called upon him to sewer & pave the alleged street under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63):—Held: the agreement in the expired lease had been abandoned & could not be enforced, & it did not amount to a dedication of a right of way to the public.—*HEALEY v. The public had occasionally used the road from 1865 up to 1880, when the urban authority required H., as the owner of the houses abutting on the road, to sewer, flag, & pave the same, & on the lessee declining to comply with this request, the urban authority executed the works:—Held: the mere setting-out of an intended road was not such an irrevocable act as that the person who did it, & allowed the public to traverse & use the road, was to be held to have dedicated the same to the public, & the urban authority had no right to cast upon the lessee the whole of the expense of sewerage &

The footpath was diverted, an order authorising its diversion having been obtained from the ct. of quarter sessions in accordance with the provisions of Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), but the proposed new roadway was not mentioned to the ct., & the new roadway was made. A lease of the land was subsequently executed to B., the land being described in the lease by the reference to a plan, on which the roadway was marked "private road," & being devised "subject to the existing rights of way" over it. B. assigned the lease to a co., & it afterwards became vested in W., as an assignee for value without notice of the existence of any public right of way over the land, & from him it passed to defts., whom the present information & suit sought to restrain from obstructing the new roadway:—Held: (1) if there had been an actual dedication of the roadway to the public, which the ct. held on the evidence there had not been, the public would have been entitled to have kept it open against all persons, whether they took with notice of the existence of the highway or not; (2) the making of the new road could not, under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), be made a condition of the diversion of the old footpath, & the public could not be parties to the arrangement made between B. & the vestry of the parish, & although there was a moral obligation on B. to make & throw open the new roadway to the public, & an animus dedicandi on his part, that could lead to no inference of an actual dedication so as to bind a purchaser for value without notice

186. Dedication question of fact—For jury.—On indictment for encroaching on a public highway, it appeared that in 1771, comrs. under an Inclosure Act had been empowered to set out public & private roads, the former to be repaired by the township, the latter by such persons as the comrs. should direct. The public roads were to be sixty feet wide between the fences. The comrs. in their award described a road as private, & eight yards wide; but in setting it out a space of sixty feet was left between the fences; & they directed both the public & private roads to be repaired by the township. The centre only of the sixty feet was ordinarily used as a carriage road, & the township repaired it. The space said to be encroached upon was at the side of this road, & there was a diversity of evidence as to the use made of this space by the public, & its condition, since the time of the award:—Held: the comrs. had exceeded their authority in awarding that private roads should be repaired by the township, but on the whole of this evidence it was a proper question for the jury, whether or not the road in question, though originally intended to be private, had been dedicated to, & adopted by, the public.

Semble: when a road runs through a space for fifty or sixty feet between enclosures set out by Act of Parliament, it is prima facie to be presumed that the whole of that space is public, though it may not all be used or kept in repair as a road.—*R. v. 187. ———.]—Public user of a road for some time is sufficient prima facie evidence of a dedication by an owner of the freehold to the public, & it is not necessary to show by whom the dedication was made.

A road had been used by the public from 1829 to 1835, & in 1835 defts. obstructed the passage of the public over a part of it. The land at the part obstructed was settled in 1822 upon the marriage of G., the owner of the fee, in strict settlement. The tenant for life, under a power in the settlement, granted, in 1823, a long building lease of land adjoining the part obstructed, to one of defts.; & under a further power in the settlement, the reversion in fee expectant upon the determination of this lease was conveyed, in 1829, to L. The settlement also empowered the trustees & G. to sell; & G., who was examined as a witness, stated that in 1829 all the settled property adjoining R. Street had been conveyed away. The son of G., to whom an estate of inheritance was limited by the settlement in 1822, attained the age of twenty-one in 1811. The judge at the trial left it to the jury to say, whether there had been a dedication in 1829 by L. or by any other person in whom the fee then was, & declined to direct them to find by whom the dedication had been made; & the jury found that there had been a dedication in 1829 by L., or whoever was the owner in fee, & a verdict was entered for the Crown:—Held: the case had been properly left to the jury.

I take the principle to be that, when there is satisfactory evidence of such a user of the road, as to time, manner & circumstances, as would lead to the inference that there was a dedication by the owner of the fee, if it was shown who he was, it is not necessary to inquire who the individual was from whom the dedication, necessarily repealed from such a user, first proceeded (COLERIDGE, J.).—*R. v. uninterrupted user of a way by the public, though it is evidence from which dedication may be inferred, does not create a presumptio juris in favour of dedication which, unless rebutted, must prevail.

An objection to a provisional apportionment in respect of certain proposed private street works on the ground that the street in question was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large was overruled by the justices of the borough, subject to a case stated for the opinion of the K. B. Div. By a private estate Act of 1825 R., a tenant for life of settled lands, was empowered to let the lands on building leases, & to set out a competent part thereof for public squares, roads, streets or otherwise for the convenience of the occupiers of the houses to be erected thereon. The road in question was made by R. in 1827 on waste land over which the public had previously been allowed to wander, & on the completion of the road, residential houses were built along its course. It did not appear that the road was required for any other purpose than the use of the occupiers of the houses. A toll gate & a bar were placed across the road, but with a space left on either side for foot passengers, & at the toll gate & bar were notice boards headed "private road." Tolls were charged for horse & wheeled traffic, but there had been a free user of the road by foot passengers for upwards of eighty years without interruption. The road was repaired by the owner & not by the local authority. There had been no formal dedication of the road under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50). Upon these facts the justices came to the conclusion that R. did not intend to dedicate the road as a public highway & that there was in fact no dedication of the road as a highway for foot passengers or otherwise prior to 1836, when above Act came into operation; they therefore decided that the road was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large: Held: there was evidence to support the conclusions of the justices, & the ct. had no jurisdiction to interfere with their decision.

from use & enjoyment on the part of the public ; but such use & enjoyment must be use & enjoyment as of right known to the owner & acquiescent in by him. Further, this knowledge & recognition on the part of the owner may itself be inferred from the fact that the use & enjoyment has been so open & notorious as of right as to give rise to the presumption that the owner must have been aware of it & has acquiesced in it, or during living memory the use & enjoyment has been such that had there been an absolute owner capable of dedicating the way, dedication would have been inferred. If at the same time the circumstances are consistent with such use & enjoyment having been still more ancient, dedication may be inferred by some owner before living memory ; but if it is shown that before a definite date the rights could not have existed, & since that date there has been no owner who could dedicate, then it would be impossible to infer any dedication. —WEBB v. 192. — — Onus of proof.—At the trial of an action & information in which a declaration was claimed that the portion of Shire Lane between Swillett Corner & Newlands Corner was a public highway for carts & carriages repairable by the deft. council, it was admitted that Shire Lane commenced towards the south in the main road from Rickmansworth to Uxbridge, its extreme limit northward being at a point where the lane formed a junction with an old road called Greener Street, which was a public highway for all purposes repairable by the inhabitants at large. Between the two extreme limits of the Rickmansworth to Uxbridge road on the south & Greener Street on the north, running southwards from Greener Street, was Swillett Corner, & between these points Shire Lane was admitted also to be a public road for all purposes similarly repairable. From Swillett Corner running south to Newlands Corner, Shire Lane was admitted by the deft. council only to be a public footpath. From Newlands Corner southwards for a considerable distance, & again between two points still further south, Shire Lane was once more a highway for all purposes, repairable by the inhabitants at large. Shire Lane varied considerably in width, & was bounded on each side by the banks & ditches of old inclosures, the centre line between the ditches forming until recently the county boundary, & the boundary between adjacent parishes & manors & ecclesiastical districts. Although very narrow in places, the lane was throughout its entire length sufficiently wide to admit of vehicular traffic. It was an open road without cross-gates, & formed a convenient route between Denham on the south & Chenes on the north. The lane was an old one, one map showing that it existed physically in 1788. At the beginning of the nineteenth century in one part of the lane a strip of land extending from the old ditch on the east to beyond the centre line of the lane had been inclosed, & the person inclosing it was admitted tenant of the manors on either side of the county boundary. In most parts of Shire Lane there existed cart ruts, pointing to its use for cart traffic till comparatively recent times, but the ruts were consistent with a private user. At one time the lane had been a metalled road, the metalling throughout being of sufficient width to accommodate carts & carriages. In & prior to 1865, & for some years afterwards, the lane was in as good a state of repair, so far as metalling was concerned, as most of the other roads in the neighbourhood, & there was then no difficulty in driving a cart or carriage throughout its entire length. There was no direct evidence how or when the portions admitted to be highways were dedicated to the public or became repairable, although they existed physically as roads before the passing of Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), & the evidence was consistent with dedication having been made long before 1835 ; but there was no evidence that these portions of Shire Lane were roads to which sect. 23 of above Act applied if they were dedicated after the passing of the Act, or whether the formalities required by that sect. had been complied with, & there was no evidence of the private user of the lane or pointing to its being a mere occupation road or otherwise inconsistent with its having been dedicated to the public for all purposes. The evidence of actual user of the lane by the public was meagre, owing probably to the facts (a) that for many years the lane between the points in question had been overgrown with underwood as to make its use for carts or carriages difficult if not impossible, & (b) that even before this growth the lane had been little used because the country through which it passed was then sparsely populated, but the evidence of living witnesses, which went back to 1865, showed that they had driven through the lane as of right, & had been told by persons since deceased that Shire Lane was a public highway both on foot & with carts & carriages, & also that by general reputation the lane was a highway. There was also evidence from which it appeared that the surveyors of the local authorities interested & those authorities had, in correspondence & in arrangements as to the repair of Shire Lane, & in or in relation to proceedings before the Local Govt. Board, shown no trace of having considered the portion of Shire Lane between Swillett Corner & Newlands Corner, the portion in dispute, as being in any different condition, with regard to liability for repair or otherwise, from any other portion of the lane. The only evidence against public liability to repair Shire Lane was that its repair had been neglected, & the only evidence of dedication for foot passengers only was that in recent years no cart or carriage traffic had been possible by reason of that neglect : —Held : (1) the evidence, positive & negative, justified a finding that Shire Lane, throughout, was a public highway for carts & carriages repairable by the deft. council ; (2) although the onus of proving that the lane was a highway lay on plffs., proof of user of such a nature that dedication might be reasonably inferred therefrom was sufficient without proving that during the period of user there was a person capable of dedicating — the onus probandi that there was no such person being on the inhabitants ; (3) the absence of evidence that the inhabitants had ever repaired the lane, though relevant on the question of whether the lane was or was not a public way, did not rebut the inference based on public user & was not by itself evidence to displace the inhabitants' liability to repair, though, coupled with evidence that some one else was liable, it might have some weight ; (4) plff. need not give evidence of the inhabitants' liability, before 1835, to repair ; (5) sect. 23 of above Act gave the inhabitants a new method of displacing their liability to repair at common law & did not impose on the Crown a new onus of proof, & therefore, it was for the inhabitants to prove that a road was one to which the sect. applied, & not for the Crown to prove that sect. 23 did not apply, although, in case of proof that sect. 23 applied, the onus of proving that the formalities required by that sect. to make the inhabitants liable might be shifted ; (6) the decision of the ct. was without prejudice to the right of the deft. council to raise the point whether the portion of

193. Necessity for.]—(1) On an issue whether or not certain land, in a district repairing its own roads, was a common highway, it is admissible evidence of reputation, though slight, that the inhabitants held a public meeting to consider of repairing such way, & that several of them, since dead, signed a paper on that occasion, stating that the land was not a public highway, there being at the time no litigation on the subject.

(2) In determining whether or not a way has been dedicated to the public, the proprietor's intention must be considered. If it appear only that he has suffered a continual user, that may prove a dedication; but such proof may be rebutted by evidence of acts showing that he contemplated only a licence resumable in a particular event. Thus, where the owner of land agreed with an iron co., & with the inhabitants of a hamlet repairing its own roads, that a way over his land, in such hamlet, should be open to carriages, that the co. should pay him 5s. a year & find cinder to repair the way, & that the inhabitants of the hamlet should lead & lay down the cinder, & the way was thereupon left open to all persons passing with carriages for nineteen years, at the end of which time, a dispute arising, the passage was interrupted, & the interruption acquiesced in for five years:—Held: the evidence showed no dedication, but a licence only, resumable on breach of the agreement.

A dedication must be made with intention to dedicate. The mere acting so as to lead persons into the supposition that the way is dedicated does not amount to a dedication, if there be an agreement which explains the transaction (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).

It is said that an intention to dedicate must be inferred from the acts of a proprietor; & it is true that the question is not decided by what he says. A man may say that he does not mean to dedicate a way to the public, & yet, if he had allowed them to pass every day for a length of time, his declaration alone would not be regarded, but it would be for a jury to say whether he had intended to dedicate it or not. The facts may warrant them in believing that the way was dedicated, though he has said that he did not so intend; & if his intention be insisted upon, it may be answered that he should have shown it by putting up a gate, or by some other act. The intent is a proper ingredient in the decision of such a question as this (LIDDLEDALE, J.).—BARRACLOUGH v. JOHNSON (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 99; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 233; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 162; 7 L. J. Q. B. 172; 2 Jur. 839; 112 E. R. 773.

Semble: user by the public over land belonging to a non-resident owner is less cogent evidence of dedication than where the user is necessarily brought to his personal notice; & further, the weight to be attached to user must depend somewhat upon the nature of the land itself, whether it is cultivated land or rough & unproductive land.—*CHINNOCK v. 196. —J—(1) Under letters patent in the seventeenth century the owner of land adjoining the river Ouse between St. Neots & St. Ives, which was there a public river navigable only in sections, made in his own land cuts from the river & locks in the cuts & took tolls from the vessels passing through the locks. In 1720 by a local Act, the then landowner was empowered to rebuild a stanch in the river below St. Ives & to repair & maintain it & to take tolls on vessels passing through it. Tolls were collected at the locks for more than two hundred years & at the stanch for a long period by the predecessors in title of applt.:—Held: there was no evidence that the locks had ever been dedicated to the public as a highway, & applt. was not bound to maintain or repair or allow the public to pass through the locks or the stanch.

A dedication must be made with intention to dedicate, & the mere acting so as to lead persons into the supposition that a way is dedicated to the public does not of itself amount to dedication (LORD MACNAUGHTEN).

(2) It is laid down in books of great authority that a river common to all men is called a highway, or is in the nature of a highway, but there are many important differences between water highways & land highways (LORD LINDLEY).

203. —J—Difficulty & expense of controlling traffic.—By 41 Geo. 3, c. xxxi, s. 66, the incorporated co. of the Proprietors of the Grand Surrey Canal were required to make & maintain bridges over the canal for the use of the owners & occupiers of adjoining lands, & also where the canal was carried across any common highway, public bridleway or footpath. In 1801, the co. erected a swivel bridge at a spot where there was a public bridleway, & footpath, which bridge, as a carriageway, was intended to be for the exclusive accommodation of the tenants of an adjoining estate, called the Rolls estate. From 1810 to 1812, the public occasionally used the bridge with carriages. In 1822, a church was built near to the canal, streets were formed, & the neighbourhood became very populous. From 1822 to 1832, the bridge was used by the public as a carriageway without interruption. In 1832, the co. began to exact a toll from persons, not tenants of the Rolls estate, crossing the bridge with carriages, & in 1834, they removed the swivel bridge, & built a stone bridge in its stead. In trespass by the co. against doft. for passing along the bridge with a horse & chaise, without the leave of the co.; the judge after reading the evidence to the jury, told them that, supposing the bridge in question to have been originally built, as a carriageway, for the exclusive accommodation of the tenants of the Rolls estate, still if in consequence of the acts of the co., an idea grew up in the minds of the public that they intended to dedicate the bridge to the public use, such acts would amount to a dedication:—Held: (1) taking all the summing up together, there was no misdirection, & the evidence warranted the jury in finding that there had been a dedication; (2) there was nothing in the constitution of the co., or in the nature of their property, to prevent them from dedicating the bridge in question to the public.

It seems to me that the circumstance of the bridge being originally erected, as a carriageway, for the accommodation of a considerable number of individuals, inasmuch as the co. must either have permitted the bridge to be used indiscriminately, or have put themselves to great expense in employing some person to see that those passing had a right to do so, furnishes a strong reason why they should have intended to dedicate the bridge to the public (MAULE, J.). *GRAND SURREY CANAL CO. v. 215. General rule.—(1) On the trial of an indictment, for non-repair of a road, against a tithing, bound by custom to repair all public roads therein, it appeared that the road had formed part of the waste of a manor, & had been set out as a private road by award of comrs. under a Private Inclosure Act, & had been used by the public generally ever since it had been so set out. A portion of the waste had been allotted to the lord, as the Act directed, in respect of his interest in the soil. After verdict for the Crown, it was argued, for defts., on motion to enter a verdict for them, that the soil of the road had been taken from the lord, & transferred to no other person, & therefore there was no owner, or none against whom a dedication to the public could be presumed; & that, if the Crown were the owner, the jury should have been directed that stronger evidence was necessary to raise a presumption of dedication than if the owner had been a private person:—Held: dedication might be presumed against the Crown from long acquiescence in public user.

The Crown certainly may dedicate a road to the public, & be bound by long acquiescence in public user. . . . Enjoyment for a great length of time ought to be sufficient evidence of dedication, unless the state of the property has been such as to make dedication impossible (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).

(2) The jury was rightly directed to consider whether the owner, whoever he might be, had consented to the public user in such a manner as to satisfy the jury that a dedication to the public was intended.

Accordingly, where land was thus settled & was under the control & management of the remainderman, & a new road was laid out by him across the land & was treated by him as a public road, & since the date of its construction, more than sixty years ago, the road had been used by the public in such a way as would have compelled the ct. as against an owner in fee to infer dedication, but there was no evidence that the tenant for life, who had been dead for fifty years, had any knowledge of the user of the road by the public:—Held: the ct. ought to infer from the facts that there had been a dedication to the public by the tenant for life & remainderman.

225. General rule.—Dedication compatible with statutory duties.—(1) Where land is vested in fee in trustees for certain public purposes, they may dedicate the surface to the use of the public as a highway, provided such use be not inconsistent with the purposes for which the land is vested in them. By an Act for draining fen lands, comrs. were authorised to make drains & other works therein prescribed, & also to make a new cut or main drain as therein mentioned, & to dispose of all earth & soil arising from the drains directed to be made, in forming banks, at certain distances, on each side thereof; & the banks, drains, etc., were to remain under their control, for the purposes of the Act. The comrs., under the powers of the Act, made a drain according to the Act, & with the earth taken from it made a bank on one side of it, of the average breadth of forty feet; this drain & bank were never part of the fen, but were old inclosed land, & bounded by old inclosures on both sides; & the land upon which they were respectively made, was purchased by the comrs. for the purposes of the Act. The bank had been used for about twenty-five years as a public highway, & was a convenient & useful road for the public. Upon a special case, stating these facts:—Held: the dedication of this part of the bank as a road to the use of the public was not inconsistent with the purposes to which the comrs. were bound by the Act to apply it, it not appearing by the case that the cleansing of the drains or any other purpose of the Act had been or was likely to be interfered with by such user of the soil.

(3) On an inquiry whether part of a continuous strip of land has been dedicated to highway purposes, evidence that portions of the strip at each end of the part in dispute have been inclosed to the knowledge of or without interference from the highway authority is not admissible.

(4) In appreciating the true effect of acts of ownership as rebutting an intention to dedicate, it is important to observe whether they are referable to the ownership of the soil rather than to any intention to exclude the passage of the public. In the former case they may tend to confirm the owner's general acquiescence in the continuous user of the surface by the public for highway purposes.

(5) When an owner, alive to the necessity of evidencing his continued possession by periodical perambulations, & active in preventing encroachment upon or interference with his soil & in warning off trespassing wayfarers from parts of his land, at the same time permits, without protest or interference, the unrestricted passage of the public over the surface of the very soil of which he is asserting his ownership, there are cogent grounds for attributing to the public user an origin which, as against the owner of the soil, has established public rights.—*COATS v. 241. — Public road along burgh golf links.]—Magistrates for a burgh held the links from time immemorial for behoof of the inhabitants, & (inter alia), subject to the obligation of preserving the same for the purposes of the game of golf & for the recreation & amusement of the inhabitants. They had from time to time exercised powers of administration & management over the links, such as the letting of the pasturage, the regulation of bleaching clothes on the links, the construction of a sloping walk, & the levelling & filling up other portions of the ground. The magistrates proposed to make a macadamised road along the outside boundary of the links, where that boundary adjoins certain feus let off by them in 1820, which feus are no longer, in point of law, part of the links. P., an inhabitant of the burgh & member of the principal golfing club there, & others, applts., sought by note of suspensions & interdict to restrain the magistrates either from making the road or from permitting any road to be used in that place for wheel traffic:—Held: the evidence proved that the proposed road would have no substantial interference with the obligation of golfing, etc., & the road might be reconciled with its due observance; but it was inconsistent with that obligation for the magistrates to alienate any part of the solum of the ground in question, or abdicate their existing powers of administration either by granting private easements to particular individuals, or, having made the road, to create a public easement by dedicating it to the public.—PATERSON v. ST. ANDREWS PROVOST (1881), 6 App. Cas. 833, H. L.

242. Power to contract to dedicate road—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55).]—A petition was presented by ptfs. & defts. to the Local Govt. Board, stating an agreement whereby ptfs. were to transfer to defts. certain land forming part of ptfs.' district, on condition that defts. should adopt a certain road & dedicate it as a public highway. The agreement referred to was not under seal, but the petition was sealed with the common seals of ptfs. & defts. The cost of completing the road was estimated at over £50. On action for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: (1) under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 174, the agreement must be under seal, & the petition, though under seal, was not a deed, & therefore was not a contract under seal within the sect.; (2) if the deed were valid, the local authority had no power to enter into an agreement for the dedication of a road or street as a highway.

The power to dedicate a road which arises under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), where the road comes under the definition of a street, is a power given to a public body for public purposes. . . . They are not at liberty to contract that they will dedicate or that they will not dedicate. . . . This is a discretionary power given to them for public purposes, & they have no right to bind themselves in any way as to the exercise of that power (KAY, J.).—TURNBRIDGE WELLS IMPROVEMENT COMRS. v. The offer being accepted, the land was conveyed to the corpn., & they covenanted to appropriate forty acres of it at the least for the purpose of a public park & recreation ground. The corpn. now proposed to appropriate part of the fifty-three acres, nearly all of which had always been used as a public park or recreation ground, for the purpose of widening a road by the side of the park:—Held: (1) the corpn. did not originally acquire the whole fifty-three acres for park purposes & never definitely appropriated the whole to park purposes, & therefore they were still entitled to appropriate part of the land to other purposes, more than forty acres being still left for park purposes; (2) even assuming the whole fifty-three acres were acquired for park purposes, the ct. would not interfere with the discretion of the corpn. in deciding that the widening of the street was partly for the improvement of the park.—A.-G. v. Defts. amended by alleging that the road had for many years been used by the public as of right & was a highway, having been dedicated to the public by plff. & her predecessors in title or some of them. The judge on the application of plff., then made an order that defts. should deliver to plff. full particulars of the nature of all acts of dedication relied on by defts., & if defts. claimed by acts of dedication other than permissive user, particulars of such acts of dedication, with dates, & by whom made. The rural district council had never repaired the footpath & the report recommended that no order throwing the repair on them should be made by the county council. The report was adopted by the county council, & the borough council then obtained a rule nisi for a mandamus directing the county council to order the rural district council to repair the footpath: — Held: as the land had been in strict settlement since 1628 & therefore could not have been dedicated as a highway since that date, & as the footpath had been found by the county council to have been in fact a highway in 1851, the legal presumption was that it must have been dedicated before 1628, & consequently before 1835, & was therefore now repairable by the rural district

(2) To enable a plff. to maintain an action for obstruction of a highway, he must show a particular damage resulting to a particular person; it must not be such a damage as would naturally or necessarily arise to all Her Majesty's subjects, or, in other words, such as would result to all persons entitled to use a particular road. In an action for obstructing a footpath across deft's farm, alleged by plff. to be a public path, the only damage to himself that plff. proved was, that on several occasions he was delayed in passing along the way, & was, as all other persons using the way would have been, obliged either to turn back & proceed by a more circuitous route, or else to remove the obstruction at his own expense, both of which courses he had on different occasions adopted: — Held: this was not such a special & particular damage peculiar to himself beyond that suffered by the rest of the public as would entitle plff. to maintain the action.—WINTERBOTTOM v. DERBY (LORD) (1867), L.  (1) In 1834 the tenant in tail of the land over which an alleged highway ran barred the entail, & between then & 1842 was capable of dedicating. In 1842 he conveyed the land to trustees upon a settlement which was assumed to be strict. In 1875 he died, bequeathing the land to trustees for sale. In 1879 the trustees sold the land, & the purchaser immediately mortgaged it to the trustees of the will of another testator. In 1899 plffs., the trustees of a third testator, bought the land, & from then until the date of the action the land was admittedly in strict settlement. Two small scale maps, each a hundred years old, showed a road on the line of the alleged highway. It was not shown on the ordnance surveys until 1913. In the survey of that year it was shown as a foot-path on the same line:—Held: upon the evidence, both oral & as shown by the maps, plffs. had failed to establish that there was no right of way.

It seems to me that there may be a number of cases in which the public have a need to go to a particular point, & there may well have been a dedication to them for their use for the purpose of reaching that point, although the return journey might be precisely the same route from the terminus ad quem to which the right of access is granted (POLLOCK, M.R.).—MOSER v. 263. —.]—In an action in which a highway authority alleged that deft. had unlawfully obstructed a public highway opposite his land by inclosing three roadside strips partly overgrown by trees & underwood, plffs. alleged that the whole of the land between a straight artificial hedge to the north & an old irregular hedge on the top of a steep bank to the south of the strip had been dedicated to public use, & they relied upon the legal presumption to that effect, upon evidence of a considerable body of acts of user by the public, & on the taking of gravel for road purposes, deft. proving numerous acts of ownership by himself & his predecessors in title. Plffs. also relied upon tithe, ordnance & other maps as showing the extent of the highway:—Held: (1) the old hedge to the south having been originally planted naturally had no connection with the laying out of the highway, & there therefore arose ab initio no presumption that the two hedges constituted the boundaries of the highway; (2) deft.'s evidence as to acts of ownership outweighed that of plffs. in support of dedication through user by the public, & plffs.' action therefore failed.—A.-G. v. LINDSAY-HOGG (1912), 76 J. P. 450.

See, also, Nos. 177, 191, 194, ante.

264. Sufficiency of user—User by one or two persons—As representing public.—Upon a question whether a road was public or private, there was considerable evidence of user by persons connected with the houses on each side of it, & some evidence of its being used by a few other persons as a thoroughfare. There was also evidence of an intention to dedicate by the acts of a mtgor. with the knowledge of the mtgee., such as the setting out of the road & the like. For two years the road was repaired by the mtgor., & then application made to the parish surveyors under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 23, but nothing done. The judge told the jury that if there had been a dedication, it was immaterial what was the extent of public user, for user by one or two persons was as good as user by one or two hundred:—Held: no misdirection.

Two or three other persons had used it as a thoroughfare, & if they did it, as representing the public, & without any interruption, it was evidence of a complete dedication, which involves an acceptance by the public, & I concur in the observation of the learned judge. The acts of the mtgor., with the knowledge of the mtgee., were clearly binding on him; & the evidence shows that the mtgee. was fully aware of what the mtgor. was doing. There was, therefore, good evidence of dedication on the part of the owner of the soil (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—R. v. SOUTH-EASTERN RY. CO. (1850), 16 L. T. O. S. 124.

road, is not deemed a highway nor dedicated to the public, though it had been used for twelve years by persons having occasion to travel in the direction to which the public road extended.—R. v. VAIL (1826), N. B. Dig. 401.—CAN.

265. — Road set out as private road—Under Inclosure award.—(1) On the trial of an indictment against a township for the non-repair of a highway, it appeared that the road had originally been set out in 1789 as a private road by an award under an Inclosure Act, & the adjoining landowners or occupiers were ordered by the award ever after to keep the road in repair. There was enough evidence given of user by the public to support the presumption of a dedication in an ordinary case, before the passing of General Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 23:—Held: there was nothing in the fact of the road having been set out by the award, which directed the repair to be by the adjoining landowners, to prevent the road becoming a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.

There was nothing whatever that I can see to prevent the owners from dedicating it [an occupation road] to the public (BLACKBURN, J.).

(2) In the case of a road originally set out as an occupation road, the degree of user by the public should be more narrowly watched than in a case where the way had never been private (BLACKBURN, J.).—R. v. 266. — Thinly populated district.—In an action claiming a public right of way over a track or natural mountain pass about fourteen miles long, running through a thinly populated district of the Highlands of Scotland & connecting by the shortest route Braemar & Clova, it appeared from the evidence of user that the track in question had been used by the public on foot; by drovers twice a year driving sheep from a market held at Braemar to one held near Clova; that public subscriptions had been collected for a bridge in line of the track; that some distance up the disputed track there was an old milestone, & that a proprietor in planting trees had specially left a space for the track: Held: the amount of user, having regard to the character of the district, was such as might have been expected if the track had been admittedly a public way & not the subject of mere tolerance, & the evidence was sufficient to establish the right of way.—MATHERSON v. 270. — Right of public to deviate.—There can be no dedication of a way to the public for a limited time, certain or uncertain: if dedicated at all, it must be dedicated in perpetuity. Neither can the public, by non-user, release their rights.

An ancient highway over a common or down was, without authority or interference from the owner of the soil, diverted by an adjoining proprietor, who substituted for it a new road, which was used by the public for more than twenty years. After the lapse of that period, the original road was re-opened to the public, & the then owner of the soil over which the substituted road passed built a wall & planted trees across the road which had been so substituted. In an action against deft. for pulling down the wall & cutting down the trees:—Held: the above facts afforded no reasonable evidence of a dedication of the substituted road to the public, the public user thereof being referable to the right of the public to deviate on to the adjoining land whenever the owner of the soil illegally stops a highway, or suffers it to become foundrous.

It is also an established maxim. Once a highway always a highway; for the public cannot release their rights, & there is no extinctive presumption or prescription (BYLES, J.).—*DAWES v. While on the one hand little weight ought to be attached to occasional user by the public of a road systematically used for occupation purposes, it is on the other hand necessary to remember that user for occupation purposes may have arisen precisely because the road was a public road, it being open to every one with a field adjoining a highway to open from the highway a gate into his field & to use the highway for his own accommodation as owner of the field (PARKER, J.).—*A.-G. v. o. Forty years.—Where a road had been originally made by the proprietor of the land as a private approach for his own use:—Held: the use of it by the public for forty years, as a footpath, did not, in the circumstances, establish a right of way along it for passage of the public over the footway & the justices found that the user of the footway by the public since 1852 until the cottages were turned into shops, a period of thirty-eight years, was a dedication of the land the subject of the lease to the public, & that such user had been so notorious as to lead to the presumption that the lessor had acquiesced in the dedication, & that the obstruction since 1890 was not sufficient to rebut the presumption of dedication. The shopkeeper was accordingly convicted, & on appeal by special case:—Held: (1) the conviction must be affirmed; (2) the question was one of fact for the justices who were entitled upon the statements in the case to find that the early user of the footway by the public was evidence upon which they could presume dedication, & the user subsequent to 1890, when the showcase was first erected, did not rebut the evidence of dedication at an earlier date.—*OPENSHAW v. A cul de sac dedicated to the public is for this purpose in the same position as a public street. Plff. was the owner of a piece of ground with two rows of houses, which had existed more than twenty years, with a passage between them ending in a cul de sac, the whole of the soil of which was conveyed to him. A railway co., under the powers of their Act, gave notice to treat for some of the houses on each side, but the soil of the passage between the houses was expressly excluded from the notice. The railway was to be carried in a tunnel under the property. Evidence tending to show dedication being given:—Held: an injunction to restrain the co. from entering on the cul de sac without giving notice to treat would be dissolved.—*SOUCH v. The corpn. consented to alter the plans of a purchaser so that the air space required by the bye-laws was provided

It had never been paved or repaired by the local authority:—Held: there was under the circumstances no building scheme which the corpn. was not at liberty to alter, & although a cul de sac may be a highway, no dedication of the square to the public had been proved, & the user proved was only that of private rights of way to the houses in the square.—*A.-G. & LONDON PROPERTY INVESTMENT TRUST, LTD. v. 286. ——— But cleansed, lighted & patrolled.]—In 1907 the plans of a building estate deposited by the owner were passed by the local authority. The plans showed an intended new street with a southern outlet into a highway & extending northwards therefrom some distance without an outlet, so that it was a cul de sac. The plans also showed the land on the east side of the new street plotted out for the erection of houses. The new street was constructed, kerbed & channelled on its eastern side with a footpath, at the cost of the owner & to the satisfaction of the local authority, who, as the water authority, laid a water main in the new street. A gas main was also laid therein. By 1910 the owner had disposed of all the plots except the two northernmost plots, & had granted to his purchasers or lessees a right of way over the new street, & houses were built. In Sept. 1910, K. bought the two remaining plots & the north end of the new street so far as it was continuous with the two plots, with a right of way over the new street up to the two plots, & erected a fence with an opening for gates across the new street in a line with the southern boundary of the two plots, thus inclosing the north end of the new street he had bought. The local authority had not taken over the street or expended any public money upon it, but alleged that the new street throughout its entire length had been dedicated to the public & had become by user a highway, & threatened to pull down & remove the fence. In an action by K. to restrain the local authority from interfering with or pulling down his fence:—Held: (1) on the evidence, the new street had not by dedication or user become a highway, but was a private road; (2) the bye-laws & special Act of the local authority dealt only with the width & level, & not with the length, of new streets, & therefore in the absence of an order under Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (c. 53), s. 17, the owner was entitled to deviate from the plans & to inclose the north or dead end of his private road; (3) an injunction would be granted accordingly.

(4) The fact that the road has been cleansed, lighted & patrolled by the authority makes no difference [as to presumption of dedication].

(5) User of a cul de sac by persons going up it for the purpose of knowingly committing a trespass on land beyond will not raise any presumption of dedication.—KIRBY v. PAIGNTON URBAN COUNCIL, [1913] 1 Ch. 337; 82 L. J. Ch. 198; 108 L. T. 205; 77 J. P. 169; 57 Sol. Jo. 266; 11 L. G. R. 305.

287. ——— Road to back yards of cottages.]

—Defts. were the owners of a plot of land within pltf.'s urban district abutting upon the H. Road, in which was laid a public sewer. In or about the year 1861 defts. erected on this plot of land two rows of cottages, for occupation by their servants, with a road about twenty feet wide between them. The road was a cul de sac & formed the only access by road & for vehicles to the back yards of the cottages. The entrance to the road was originally closed by gates, but these were removed between 1865 & 1870 so that any member of the public might use the road, but it had never been repaired, cleansed, or lighted at the public expense. In 1877, in consequence of a requisition by the local authority, defts. laid a line of pipes in the centre of the road to take the drainage of the cottages, which were connected with it in pairs by means of Y-shaped pipes, into the public sewer in H. Road. Defts. subsequently constructed gullies & pipes whereby the surface water of the cul de sac road was conveyed into the line of pipes in question. Pltfs., purporting to act under Kingston-upon-Hull Corp'n. Act, 1903, s. 49, & Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41, having required defts. to abate a nuisance in respect of the drainage of the cottages & roadway, & having executed the necessary works themselves, claimed a declaration of charge upon the property for the cost of the work in connection with the main line of pipes:—Held: there was not sufficient evidence of dedication to constitute the cul de sac a highway, but whether that was so or not, the line of pipes was a "single private drain" within sect. 49 of the former Act, & pltfs. were accordingly entitled to the declaration of charge which they claimed.

First of all I think it convenient to consider whether the space between the backs of the houses, though never repaired by the local authority, has been so dedicated to the public as to constitute it a highway. In my opinion, the evidence does not establish such a dedication. It is a cul de sac. It leads only to the back gates of these houses. Nobody except the co. & their tenants can use it or require to use it. Originally there was a gate at the end. . . . In or about 1878 the gate was taken down, or fell down, & it has not been replaced, but this circumstance seems to me to be altogether inadequate to establish a public right of way in this cul de sac (LORD COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—*KINGSTON-UPON-HULL CORPN. v. 288. ——— Public user.]—Pltf. was the owner of a house built on a plot which formed part of an estate laid out by a building society in accordance with a scheme. On the sale of this plot by the society to pltf.'s predecessor in title, it was shown on a plan of the estate as bounded on one side by a vacant space which though not named in the plan as a road had been in fact roughly made up by the society as a road. This road ran from the street on which pltf.'s house fronted to a level crossing on a railway over which there was a private right of way for the benefit of the owners of a field on the opposite side of the line. The building society having acquired the field & released the right of way fenced off the road & sold the site to deft.'s predecessor in title. All the plots on the building estate were conveyed subject to a condition reserving to the building society the power of allowing a variation of the plans & conditions. In an action to restrain deft. from digging up the road on the ground that it was a violation of the building scheme & that the road had been dedicated to the public by user:—Held: under the conditions the society had an absolute power to alter the building scheme by closing the road & there was no sufficient evidence of user or dedication to entitle pltf. to succeed.

It is very difficult to make out dedication by user where the road so far as the public are concerned is a cul de sac (ROMER, L.J.).—WHITEHOUSE v. HUGH, [1906] 2 Ch. 283; 75 L. J. Ch. 677; 95 L. T. 175; 22 T. L. R. 679; 50 Sol. Jo. 615, C. A.

289. ———.]—Where courts which are cul de sacs are proved prima facie to have been dedicated by the owners to the public as highways, the mere fact that the owners have executed certain improvements & repairs on the property, or that it would have caused great inconvenience to the tenants of houses in the ets. to exclude the public from them, is not sufficient to negative the inference of dedication. There is no presumption of law against a cul de sac in a town being a highway, sufficient user by the public being proved.—A.-G. v. CHANDOS LAND & BUILDING SOCIETY (1910), 74 J. P. 401.

The mere fact that the owner intends to use the adjoining land for building purposes, & has seen the public using the land for purposes of recreation, & has good-naturedly refrained from interfering with their enjoyment of it, is not evidence of an overt act of dedication of the piece of land in question as a highway for foot passengers.—*A.-G. v. 293. Farm road—Used by strangers for pleasure purposes.]—(1) The occasional user of a farm road by strangers, chiefly for purposes of pleasure, is evidence of a public rather than a private way, & may be evidence of a dedication to the public as a highway, but must be well weighed with reference to permission, repair, & all other circumstances, tending to show whether the owner ever intended such a dedication, especially if it leads to a place of resort for mere purposes of pleasure.

If all the Queen's subjects had used the way at their free will & pleasure, & at all times, that is strong evidence of a dedication to the public as a highway. . . . Beyond all doubt there might be a user of a highway for purposes of pleasure (FRILE, C.J.).

(2) A witness having produced an old plan in reference to the locus in quo:—Held: its admissibility depended on the object with which it was put in, or the use which was to be made of it. The common course is to shut it up one day in the year.

313. Non-tidal river—Above mill-dam.]—The river M. was a non-tidal tributary of the Thames. The flow of the M. on its course to the Thames was obstructed by a mill-dam, & in order to bring boats from the Thames on to the part of the M. above the dam, it was necessary to take them out of the water & carry them over private land. The M. above the dam flowed under bridges, first at C., & then at E.; & the part of the river between the bridge at C. & the dam was not a way from one public place to another, had never been used as a waterway except for purposes of pleasure & recreation, & its depth & capacity for boating traffic depended on the existence of the dam. Pltf. who was the owner of an estate lying on both sides of this part of the M., obstructed the waterway of the river where it flowed through his land with posts & chains. Deft., who was not a riparian proprietor, but who had for eight years previously kept boats on a piece of land not belonging to him & let them out for hire, pulled down the obstruction & justified this act on the ground that this part of the M. was a highway. Pltf. brought this action for an injunction to prevent his obstruction being interfered with, & deft. counterclaimed for an injunction to restrain any hindrance to the passage of his boats. From the evidence it appeared that there had been no maintenance of the waterway by any person, with the exception of dredging by the owner of the mill, that as far back as living memory went there had been boating upon this part of the river by the riparian proprietors & their friends, that subsequently, by degrees & at first quite secretly, a few persons living on the bank began to take remuneration for lending their boats, not making any charge but receiving what the borrower chose to give, that thenceforth the growing practice of boating for pleasure, including fishing, had not been effectively interfered with until pltf. put his obstruction across the stream, though notices had been put up near the river warning persons against trespassing in boats for fishing or otherwise: but there was no evidence which could establish any public right of fishing:—Held: (1) the claim of deft. must be treated as if it were a claim to establish a right of highway on dry land; so considered, the claim in effect was to impose on land a new servitude, or establish a highway on conditions which were inconsistent with a right of that kind; the true inference from the evidence was that the use made of this part of the river had been permissive & not as of right; even if the boating of the public was not permissive deft. had not proved that this part of the river was a highway; pltf. was therefore entitled to maintain his obstruction as against deft., & an injunction must be granted to restrain deft. from interfering with it. A right of recreation by custom upon the land of another cannot exist as a right in the public generally, but must be confined to the inhabitants of a particular district. (2) The riparian owners might possibly be able to establish a private right of way, or a right of boating for recreation for themselves & their friends by custom, but the existence of such a right or custom, if established, would not entitle the public to boat on the river or support the claim that it was a highway. Qu.: whether a lake in private grounds, touched at one point only by a public road, can be subjected to a right which will make it a highway by persons launching boats from the road on it for pleasure.

(3) Consideration of the circumstances under which a cul de sac may be a highway.

I must treat the claim of deft. as if it were a claim to establish a right of highway on dry land. Now in the case of such a claim, a very material consideration is by whom has the roadway been metalled, repaired, & maintained in order. In a dispute as to the alleged right, the answer to this question may be decisive. Here there has been no maintenance of the waterway by any one except that the millowner, I suppose to ensure the flow of water to his mill, seems to have employed men to dredge out the silt or ballast, as it is called (KAY, J.).

It is agreed that a cul de sac may be a highway. That is so in a street in a town into which houses open & which is repaired, sewered & lighted by the public authority at the expense of the public

A pier co., which ceased to carry on business in 1907, had obtained an Act of Parliament under which the public had a right of access to a harbour, on payment of tolls, & the principal means of access to the harbour was over the path:—Held: on the evidence, the public had been allowed without discrimination to pass freely over the path, & the path must be deemed to have been permitted to become a public highway.

They relied on a public right of way. The matter having come to the knowledge of the district council they passed a resolution to defend the action. Pltfs. then took out a summons to add the council as defts., which was allowed by the master. On motion that they might be struck out pltfs. obtained leave to amend the pleadings by alleging that the council threatened & intended to use the said alleged right, & on this the motion was refused. The council then put in a defence in which they neither asserted nor denied the right of way. Pltfs. moved to strike this out as embarrassing, but it was allowed. On the action coming on for trial after hearing the evidence & the arguments on behalf of defts.:—Held: there was no sufficient evidence of the right of way claimed; the user which had been shown was, if anything, referable to licence; there had been no dedication by the owners, & pltfs. were entitled to succeed.

A declaration was made against all defts. that there was no public right of way, & an injunction was granted against defts. other than the council.—THORNHILL v. WEEKS (1914), as reported in 78 J. P. 154; 12 L. G. R. 597.

¶ 333. — Public allowed to use bridge over railway line.—Near a station on defts.' railway line, & passing over the line from north to south there was a level crossing, with gates for carriage traffic, which formed part of the highway, but which defts. were bound by statute to maintain. Defts. had voluntarily constructed close to the station & to the level crossing & parallel to the latter a foot-bridge, with staircases. The bridge stood entirely on defts.' land, & had been maintained by them, but the footway over it at each end communicated directly with the highway, & only indirectly by means of the highway with defts.' station premises. Defts. had never closed the footway or taken any steps to prevent the public from using it, & the public in fact used it without hindrance. Pltf. was crossing over the bridge from north to south with a view of catching a train at the south platform of defts.' station. On the morning of that day there had been a blizzard, & snow had fallen on the footway of the bridge, which in consequence of the traffic had become caked on the steps, rendering them slippery. As pltf. was descending the stair on the south side she warned her young daughter who accompanied her to be careful, & she herself made use of the handrail. She nevertheless slipped on a mass of frozen snow & fell, & was hurt. Pltf. brought an action against defts. for damages for personal injuries. It was found that there had been no contributory negligence on her part:—Held: the facts showed that the footway over the bridge had been dedicated by defts. & accepted by the public as a highway, & that defts. were under no duty to persons using the footway to maintain or cleanse it, & therefore were not liable to pltf.—*BRACKLEY v. Plea, that there was a public footway over the locus in quo, & because the gate was wrongfully erected across the same, deft. pulled it down. It appeared in evidence that the gate in question had been recently put up in a place where a similar gate had formerly stood, but where for the last twelve years there had been none. It was thereupon contended for deft. that from suffering the gate to be down so long & permitting the public to use the way without obstruction for so many years, pltf. & those under whom he claimed must be considered as having completely dedicated the way to the public & that the gate could not be replaced:—Held: verdict for pltf.—*LETHBRIDGE v. 337. — Closed at night.—By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. xviii., for paving, lighting, etc., among other places, the liberty of Saffron Hill, Hatton Garden, & Ely Rents, in Middlesex, the inhabitants of the liberty entitled to meet in vestry or other public meetings were empowered to elect comrs. who were to have the sole superintendence of the paving, lighting, & preventing nuisances & obstructions in "the several squares, streets, lanes, courts, ways, footways, carriageways, passages, & places" within the liberty: the comrs. were empowered to pave & repair all the "squares, streets," etc., "& places," within the liberty; power was given them to light the squares, etc., & places, & to set up lamps & other works for lighting, but not to affix them to any private premises without leave: the comrs. were authorised to rate every holder & occupier of land, etc., in the liberty for the purposes of the Act: & they were enabled, at their option, to act under the powers conferred by this Act, or those given by 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix. Ely Place, Holborn, was within the liberty; its site was formerly that of the Bishop of Ely's palace, but became vested in the Crown, & was afterwards, in 1776, conveyed, by the Lords of the Treasury, under an Act of Parliament, to a private person in fee; & houses were built upon the site, with a carriageway & footways between them. The footpaths were paved & the carriageway gravelled, by the inhabitants, voluntarily & at their own expense, & were so from the time when the houses were built. The ways were never repaired by the public, nor in any manner dedicated to the public use. Ely Place communicated with public thoroughfares by gateways, formerly entrances to the palace; the inhabitants closed the gates at night, & at other times when they thought fit; & porters employed by them kept out objectionable persons. The gates were generally open in the daytime; & the public passed in & out, but had no right of way. The inhabitants paid poor rate, for the liberty, & sewers' rate:—Held: Ely Place was not a "square, street," etc., or "place," which the comrs. for the liberty could assume jurisdiction to pave, under the above statutes.—*PAUL v. 343. By railway line—Presumption against evidence to dedicate.—In an action against a local authority by the landowners on each side of a lane claiming a declaration that the lane was not a public right of way, it appeared that the lane originally formed part of the waste of a manor, & was in 1817 set out as a private occupation road by the award of comrs. under a private Inclosure Act, that in 1855 a railway was constructed across the lane, since when the railway line had been permanently fenced on both sides & that there was some evidence of user of the lane

by the public for all purposes prior to 1855, & since that date as a footway:—Held: (1) the user prior to 1855 was insufficient to raise the presumption of dedication to the public; (2) the construction of the railway line across the lane was strong evidence against any intention to dedicate; (3) the subsequent user was immaterial, & therefore the landowners were entitled to the declaration & to an injunction restraining the local authority from trespassing on the lane.—*HOLLOWAY v. 345. Users occasionally turned back.]—Pltf. claimed an injunction to restrain defts., their servants, & agents, from trespassing upon a farm of his. Defts., by their defence, acting under Local Govt. Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 26, claimed that there was a public right of way, & that formerly there was a stile at one end thereof, which was placed there & maintained by pltf. & his predecessors in title, & they counterclaimed for a declaration of a public right of way. The question turned on whether there was, or must be deemed to have been, dedication of a public footway along the track shown on the pleadings prior to 1822. At that time the farm was leased to one G. & remained in his occupation or that of his family until 1889. It was then occupied by other tenants until 1910, when it became vacant until 1912, & the present tenant entered, & placed the obstruction which gave rise to the action. Evidence of reputation was given as to user by the public ever since 1822, & several witnesses proved user by the public, but the evidence also showed that G. had been in the habit of turning people back from time to time. The evidence, however, further showed that G. had practically recognised the path or admitted to others that it existed & that he was unable to stop the user thereof. In the case of the later tenancies there would have been apparently no desire to stop people had it not been for the opening of rifle ranges, which brought a number of soldiers & others to the place, many of whom used the path. In these circumstances:—Held: a dedication prior to 1822 must be presumed, & pltf.'s claim accordingly failed, & defts. were entitled to a declaration as asked by the counterclaim subject to the rights of ploughing & sowing.—SHEARBURN v. CHIERTSEY RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1914), 78 J. P. 289; 12 L. G. R. 622.

346. Reputation.]—In a matter in which all are concerned, reputation from any one appears to be receivable; but of course it would be almost worthless unless it came from persons who were shown to have some means of knowledge, as by living in the neighbourhood or frequently using the road in dispute. Where, on the trial of an indictment for driving a carriage along, & thereby obstructing, a public footway through a narrow lane, the question was, whether deft.'s private right of carriageway, preceding the public user, & inconsistent therewith, had been released or abandoned, & the jury were directed that no interruption by the public for a less period than twenty years could destroy the private right, a new trial, for misdirection, was granted, after verdict for deft.

(2) In order to prove a grant of an occupation way through a lane to deft.'s premises, he offered two deeds, which purported to be grants by the owners of the soil of an occupation way through the lane, to tenants of premises situated on the opposite side of the lane from deft.'s premises:—Held: the deeds were wrongly admitted for that purpose.—*R. v. 361. Report & estimate of deceased surveyor—In course of duty.—About the year 1835, under the powers of a local Turnpike Act, a new turnpike road was constructed & was carried over a canal, now owned by plffs.' by a bridge erected by the road trustees. This road ceased to be a turnpike road in 1875. The bridge, which was situate in a county borough, of which defts. were the highway authority, replaced an accommodation bridge erected by plffs.' predecessors in title. Owing to mining operations the bridge & the canal subsided, & plffs., acting reasonably for the protection of the canal, raised the banks, with the result that the level of the water came so near to the under-surface of the bridge that the latter became an obstruction to the navigation; the bridge was also dangerous to traffic passing over it. In an action by plffs. in effect to compel defts. to abate the nuisance, it was agreed between the parties that the bridge should be reconstructed at its original level, the cost of the work to be ultimately borne by the parties according to their respective legal liabilities:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the obligation to reconstruct did not authorise defts. to create a nuisance, they were liable for the cost of raising the bridge to its original level as well as for the cost of reconstruction; (2) a report & an estimate prepared by the then surveyor of the road trustees with reference to the construction of the turnpike road were in the circumstances admissible in evidence as entries made by a deceased official in the discharge of his duty.—NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. One of the occupation roads was a soft road, it had no gate at either end, & the public used it without any interference. The way was claimed as appurtenant to a messuage in general terms, without reference to any obligation to repair. On the trial of an issue joined on a traverse of the right of way, the easement proved was a right to pass forwards & backwards over every part of the close, & not merely between the termini specified in the declaration; & it was shown that the easement was enjoyed under a grant thereof to D., his heirs, tenants & assigns, & to certain other persons. The easement was granted in 1675; there was evidence that, for ten years next before the commencement of the action, part of the way claimed had become public:—Held: not necessary to state in the declaration that such part had become public.

374. Footpath set out under Inclosure Act—Whether capable of dedication as roadway—Effect of user.]—A lane in the seaside town of S., which ran from the High Street to the top of the cliff, & varied from six feet to four feet four inches in width, had in 1811 been set out under an award by the Inclosure Comrs. under the S. Inclosure Act, 1809, as a public footpath. In 1903 the S. Urban District Council erected in the centre of the footpath an iron post to prevent the lane being used for wheeled vehicles. Deft. having overthrown the post, the district council brought an action against him in respect of the alleged trespass, claiming damages & an injunction; & claiming further a declaration that the lane was a public footpath vested in the council & under the council's control, & that it was not a carriage-way. Deft. contended that the land was a public highway for all persons to go & return on foot, & with all manner of beasts & vehicles, & alleged that since the award of the comrs. there had been a dedication of the way as a cart road. Alternatively, he contended that before or since the award there had been a private right for the class consisting of the owners & occupiers of S. to use the way for carts. The evidence showed, on the one hand, that when carts were driven through the land the foot-passengers were obstructed, & had to wait until the carts had completed their passage, & on the other hand, that for more than forty years past barrow carts, sometimes drawn by donkeys or ponies, had been continuously used in the lane:—Held: (1) the action, being in substance one for damages for interference with plffs.' property, could be maintained without the A.-G. being made a party; (2) the user for wheeled traffic was in its inception & all along a public nuisance, & no length of time could legalise it, & as regards dedication, no one had the power to dedicate even with the consent of the local authority.—SHIRINGHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. HOLSEY (1901), 91 L. T. 225; 68 J. P. 395; 20 T. L. R. 402; 48 Sol. Jo. 416; 2 L. G. R. 744.

By their Act of Parliament a co. was authorised to make a railway on & over the pier, & the devisees in trust of the manor were authorised to grant a lease of the pier to the co., subject to the sanction of the Ct. of Ch., but upon an application to the ct. for that purpose, the ct. refused to sanction the lease, as not being beneficial to the cestuis que trust. The co. then, without proceeding in the ordinary way, under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), to take possession upon paying compensation, or otherwise, entered on & took possession of the pier & proceeded to make a railway thereon. The trustees then filed their bill, & by motion sought an injunction to restrain the co. from taking such possession & constructing such a railway:—Held: the lord of the wastes of a manor did not, by dedicating it to the public for special purposes as a way, constitute it a highway for all purposes, & the railway co. had no authority to enter on the land so dedicated for the purposes of their line, without proceeding regularly under Lands Clauses & Railway Clauses Consolidation Acts, & an injunction was granted on that ground to restrain the co. from continuing in possession of the land without taking the steps required by above Acts, & making compensation.—THOMPSON v. 393. Right to support building—Exposed party wall.—Pltfs. & defts. were the owners of two adjoining houses in London. The houses were very old & had been built together so as to be mutually dependent upon one another for support.

They were separated by a party wall. Defts., having resolved to rebuild their house, served upon pltfs. a party wall notice under London Building Act, 1894 (c. cexiii), & the parties, in accordance with the provisions of sect. 91 of that Act, appointed their respective surveyors. The house was pulled down & rebuilt thirteen feet further back from the street, & defts. conveyed the vacant thirteen feet strip to the County Council, who dedicated it to the public. The effect of setting the house back was that the party wall was left exposed to a depth of thirteen feet & rendered unsafe by the withdrawal of the support of deft's house. Subsequently to the dedication the surveyors made an award ordering defts. to erect on the edge of the strip so dedicated a pier for the support of the exposed portion of the party wall. In an action brought to enforce the award, & also to recover damages at common law for the withdrawal of the support afforded by the building pulled down:—Held: the award, in ordering the building of a pier on the vacant strip of land, was not bad, either by reason of the fact that the site had been dedicated to the public as a highway, or that, subject to the rights of the public it was the property of third persons, for the public by the dedication, & the County Council by the conveyance, took subject to the statutory rights of pltfs. under the above Act. — *SELBY v. Evidence was given that previous occupiers had not exercised any such claim or right to put goods there, except on a few late occasions. II. claimed the right to put goods there, & the justices thought, as this claim was bond fide, they were bound to hold their hands, & dismissed the summons:—Held: the justices were wrong, & no claim of right was admissible unless & until II. proved that the pavement had been dedicated subject to his claim.—*LEICESTER URBAN SANITARY AUTHORITY v. There was no pavement on the side of the mews, & the dung pits & folding doors extended one-third across the mews. S. was charged with not removing carriages from the street or mews when requested by the vestry:—Held: the statutes [Metropolitan Management Acts] did not apply to mews which were not streets, but passages dedicated by the owners subject to the uses which were made by S. of the passage.

It may be very true that vestries have the powers of surveyors of highways, but all such powers refer to highways including streets which are dedicated absolutely to the public, & not as taking away the rights of those who have dedicated their lands to the use of the highway subject to certain uses. The best proof of the terms of the dedication is the usage which has prevailed in the use of this street (COCKBURN, C.J.).

There had been only a dedication by the owners of this land as mews, & subject to the uses which are made by those who have stables in the mews (LOSH, J.).—CHILSEA VESTRY v. STODDARD (1879), 43 J. P. 782, D. C.

As to surface of road—Road on building estate—Half only of road made up.]—Deft.* in the action, now applt., laid out & developed his property as a building estate in accordance with a plan approved by plffs., the local authority. The plan showed a proposed road bounded on the north by the boundary fence of a park belonging to plffs., & having, on either side of it, dotted lines indicating intended footpaths forming part of the road, which, in accordance with the by-laws, was of the total width of forty feet. Deft. built houses on the southern side of the road overlooking plff.'s boundary fence & made up & metalled the road for one half of its width next to the houses. The further or northern half of the road next to plff.'s fence was left unmetalled & untouched. The evidence showed that for some three years before action brought the road, which connected two public highways, had been uninterruptedly used as a thoroughfare by pedestrians, cyclists, & carts, the metalled part being used in preference to the unmetalled part. Plffs. had recently opened a gate in their boundary fence & were carting building materials across the unmetalled portion of the road & the part intended to be appropriated for a footpath. Deft. objected on the ground that the unmetalled portion was not subject to any public right of way & that, even if it were, plffs. were not entitled to take their carts over the path appropriated solely for the purposes of a footpath. The judge found as a fact that there had been a dedication of the whole width of the road as a highway, & held that plffs., as adjoining owners, were entitled at reasonable times & to a reasonable extent to cross on foot or with vehicles the portion of the highway appropriated as a footpath, & the Ct. of Appeal affirmed his decision:—Held: as regards dedication, there was no sufficient ground for disturbing the decisions of the Cts. below upon a question of fact, & plffs. as adjoining owners were entitled to the access which they claimed.—*ROWLEY v. an agreement made in that year, between C. & the steward of pltf.'s predecessor, that C., in consideration of repayment by the steward, should repair a road, which, according to pltf.'s case, was the road now in question. Deft.'s counsel objected, because it did not appear that the steward, in that character, had authority to make such agreement. The judge received the evidence, which was not further objected to; & pltf. had a verdict. On motion for a new trial, on account of the improper reception of evidence, the former objection was renewed, & it was urged also that the evidence, when given, did not show that the road to which the agreement related was the same as that now in question:—Held: (1) assuming the roads to be identified, the agreement, even if the steward had no sufficient authority, was evidence to explain the fact of repair, & was properly admitted; (2) if the evidence failed to identify the roads, that objection should have been made at nisi prius, when the defect appeared, & the judge should have been requested to strike the evidence out of his notes, & the point could not now be raised.—*FERRAND v. 428. Scavenged by local authority—Expenses of making up recovered from frontagers.—In 1898 a passage, intended as a means of access to the backs of houses which had just been built, for the removal of house refuse, etc., was constructed in pursuance of the by-laws of the local authority. It was a cul de sac six feet wide. The local authority kept it scavenged, but had never adopted it as a highway, though they had made it & charged the expenses on the frontagers. It was used by some thirty or forty people a day, but there was no evidence of user of it by any member of the public as such:—Held: the public had no right of way over the passage.—VINE v. WENHAM (1915), 84 L. J. Ch. 913; 79 J. P. 423; 14 L. G. R. 180.

429. Draw-up in front of public-house—Occasional repairs by local authority—Frequent repairs by tenants.—The proprietor of a public-house with a “draw-up” in front of it which also belonged to him offered by letter to the corp. of the borough to permit such draw-up to be thrown into the public road on condition that his signpost was allowed to continue at a convenient spot on the widened highway, & that certain front gardens belonging to other frontagers were also thrown into the road. The corp. did not reply to this letter, but subsequently it did throw the said gardens & the draw-up into the public road. The proprietor of the public-house thereupon erected his signpost in the highway some forty-five feet from the site of the draw-up. The corp. threatened to have it removed:—Held: the proprietor was entitled to restrain such removal, as the facts constituted an agreement between him & the corp. in the terms of his letter, & such agreement was part performed by the action of the corp. & was not an illegal agreement as sanctioning the erection of an obstruction in the highway, but was within the powers conferred on the corp. by Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 144.

The first question that arises is whether the draw-up was dedicated to the public as a highway or whether it continued the private property of pltf. There was evidence that on two occasions the public authority had placed stone on it, & that on one of those occasions the steam-roller had gone over it. On the other hand there was evidence which showed that repairs to the draw-up had been repeatedly done by the tenants. I find, as a fact, that taking the position of the draw-up in question & the manner in which it was used, it never formed part of the highway & was never dedicated to the use of the public (LAWRENCE, J.).—HOARE & CO., LTD. v. LEWISHAM CORPN. (1901), 85 L. T. 281; 67 J. P. 20; 17 T. L. R. 774; affid. (1902), 87 L. T. 404, C. A.

430. Ditch piped & filled in—By consent of owner.—In pursuance of an Inclosure Act allotments were made to the predecessors in title of pltf., & the allottees were directed to make & for ever maintain a sufficient fence & ditch on the south side thereof. The inclosure award set out a public highway on the south side of the allotments of the breadth of forty feet between & exclusive of the ditches & fences. Pltf. purchased the allotments in 1889, & upon several occasions he cleaned out the ditch. From time to time houses were built on portions of the allotments alongside the said highway, & the ditch in front thereof was filled in & enclosed. In 1901 the remaining length of the ditch was piped in & filled up by defts. with the assent of pltf. The road had a seven feet wide pavement alongside the site of the ditch, & inclusive of the footpaths, was about forty-seven feet wide. Many persons, however walked over the site of the ditch, & it was used for purposes of passage without protest for nearly four years,

S. avenue as having a width throughout of 59 feet; & the avenue is accepted as a public highway:—Held: the memorandum executed by the city

corp. amounted to an assumption by the city corp. of the avenue for public use, & the corp. had thereby, in the most formal way, accepted the avenue as a public highway.—Re CITY OF TORONTO PLAN M. 188 (1913), 28 O. L. R. 41; 4 O. W. N. 663; 11 D. L. R. 424.—CAN.

when plff. enclosed the site of the ditch with a temporary paling fence. The council objected to this fence, but it remained until 1907 when it was replaced by a wall, which defts. pulled down:—Held: the site of the ditch belonged to plaintiff, & there had been no dedication thereof as a highway.—WALMSLEY v. FEATHERSTONE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1909), 73 J. P. 322; 7 L. G. R. 806.

SECT. 3.—HIGHWAYS BY STATUTE.

431. Creation—Public way interfering with private rights—Must be express.—Great Yarmouth Haven Act, 1835, s. 76, subjects to a penalty any person who shall place on any space of ground immediately adjoining to the Haven, & within ten feet from high water mark, any goods, materials, or articles so as to obstruct the free & commodious passage through or over the same, or who shall break down or remove any quay head or river bank next adjoining such Haven, for the purpose of forming a dock, without making & maintaining a foot bridge over the same. By Great Yarmouth Haven Improvement Act, s. 18, the Comrs. of the Act shall, twice in the year, inspect the public right or rights of way in & along both shores of the Haven, & shall take all necessary proceedings to abate or remove every encroachment made on such right or rights of way. Upon appeal against a conviction under the former enactment, a case for the opinion of this Ct. stated that applt., who occupied a boat building yard which sloped down to the Haven, placed three boats on the part of the yard immediately adjoining the Haven, & within the space of ten feet from high water mark, so as to obstruct the free & commodious passage over the same. There was no public right of passage there:—Held: a right of way was not given by Great Yarmouth Haven Act, 1835, s. 76, & the sect. only applied where a right of way existed, & therefore applt. was not properly convicted.

But it is a canon of construction of Acts of Parliament that the rights of individuals are not interfered with unless there is an express enactment to that effect, & compensation is given to them. It would militate against that canon & seriously interfere with private rights, if we held that the enactment in sect. 76 carried into it by implication a right by the public to pass over the space in question (COCKBURN, C.J.).—HARROD v. WORSHIP (1861), 1 B. & S. 381; 30 L. J. M. C. 105; 25 J. P. 581; 8 Jur. N. S. 153; 9 W. R. 865; 121 E. R. 757.

432.—Strip along wharf-edge to be kept clear.—Plff. comrs. were empowered under Great Yarmouth Port & Haven Act, 1866 (c. cxxvii), to conserve & regulate the port & haven. By sect. 72 of the Act no person might make any building or erection on any wharf within ten feet of the head of the wharf or on any land adjoining the haven, within ten feet of high water mark, so as to break down or damage any wharf or bank within the haven. Any offence under the sect. was subject to a penalty, & the comrs. had power to remove any building or erection which contravened the provisions of the Act. Deft. owned & occupied a wharf on the banks of a river within the haven. It was separated from an adjoining wharf by a fence coming down to the head of the wharf which had been erected by deft.'s predecessors in title by leave of the comrs. & subject to the payment of a nominal rent. Deft. having refused to pay the nominal rent or to remove the fence, the comrs. took proceedings against him for an injunction & consequential relief:—Held: (1) the fence in question was not a "building or erection" within the sect., which was intended to prohibit the placing on the wharf or adjoining land of any permanent structure calculated to break down or damage the wharf or river banks within the defined limit if ten feet; (2) the Act did not operate to create a statutory right of public passage along the space of ten feet in front of the wharves & banks of the haven where no such right had previously existed.—*A.-G. & GREAT YARMOUTH PORT & HAVEN COMRS. v. #### SUB-SECT. 1. —IN GENERAL.

442. General rule.—Right extends over whole road.]—A private right of way over waste land, or a line between two points, is not necessarily a right over every part of the land, & the owner of the soil may enclose on each side of it, leaving a convenient way.

It is a question of law, whether, if there is a private right of way over any land the owners of the land can define or confine it within reasonable limits. There is this distinction between a private & public right of way, that the former is not necessarily, as the latter is, over every part of the land, across or along which there is the right of way (COCKBURN, C.J.).—HUTTON v. HAMBORE (1860), 2 F. & F. 218, N. P.

443. ————]—The owner of a building estate granted to the purchaser of one of the lots the right for himself, his heirs & assigns, & his & their families, tenants, servants, & workpeople & others, by his, their, or any of their authority, in common with all others entitled thereto, with or without horses, cattle, carts, & carriages, to pass over the several roads made or to be made through the estate, in the same manner & as fully as if the same roads were public roads. Two of the roads were forty feet in width, of which twenty feet in the middle was gravelled for cart & carriage traffic,

& there was a strip of grass land ten feet wide on either side. Pltf., who was an assign from the original purchaser, was accustomed to walk along these grass strips to & from his house. The owner of the estate caused the grass strips to be intersected by ditches, called "grips" made at right angles to the road, for the purpose, as he alleged, of draining the road, but really, as the ct. held upon the evidence, for the purpose of preventing persons from passing along the sward. The grips were about fifteen inches wide & ten inches deep, in addition to the height of the earth taken out of them & stacked upon their edges; & the owner of the road claimed the right to make such grips, though admitting that the earth ought to be spread over the grass, & not stacked upon the edges. In support of this alleged right he produced evidence showing that on rural roads in the same neighbourhood it was usual to make such grips for the purpose of drainage:—Held: pltf.'s right was to have the use of the whole road, & not merely the part which had been used as the via trita, for the purposes mentioned in the deed; this right was subject only to the owner's right to make such grips & trenches as might be necessary for the drainage of the roads, & not dangerous to the persons using them; the custom attempted to be set up was unreasonable; & the grips amounted to an obstruction.—*NICOL v. All the space between the fences is presumably dedicated as highway unless the nature of the ground or other circumstances rebut that presumption, & the owner of the adjoining lands is not entitled to inclose any portion of it.

Mere disuse of a highway for any length of time cannot deprive the public of their rights in respect of it. The mere consent of a highway authority to an obstruction or encroachment upon the highway is ineffectual for the purposes of legalising that obstruction or encroachment.—HARVEY v. TRURO RURAL COUNCIL, [1903] 2 Ch. 638; 72 L. 455. ———.]—Fences by the side of a highway are primâ facie the boundaries of the highway so as to raise a presumption that the public right of way extends over the whole space of ground between the fences. But the mere existence of fences on either side of a highway is not conclusive. In order to raise the presumption it must be proved that there is nothing to show that they were not put up as boundaries of the highway. Pltf. claimed that a triangular piece of land abutting on & not fenced off from a highway belonged to him:—Held: in the absence of anything to show the contrary, it must be assumed from the nature & position of the fence surrounding the land that it had been put up as a boundary of the highway; the presumption therefore arose that the land formed part of the highway; &, on the evidence, there was nothing to rebut that presumption.

Pltf. erected a fence round the piece of land. The local authority pulled down the fence & afterwards wrote a letter asserting their claim to the land. More than six months after this letter pltf. brought an action against them for a declaration that the land belonged to him & an injunction to restrain them from trespassing on it. By his statement of claim he alleged that defts. had pulled down his fence; that they claimed that the land formed part of the highway, & that this claim prevented him from selling the land:—Held: the assertion of defts.' claim to the land gave plff. no cause of action, & therefore, he could not take advantage of the power given to the ct. by R. S. C., Ord. 25, r. 5, to make a merely declaratory judgment; the only act of defts. which gave him any cause of action was the pulling down of the fence; Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, applied; the action was brought too late, & must be dismissed with costs as between solr. & client.—*OFFIN v. 456. ————J.—A highway ran through the lands of the manor of 11. for a distance of a mile & a half. Upon its north side was a strip of land in width varying from 12 ft. to 33 ft., which was separated from the main land of the manor by an ancient fence. At one point, cottages had been built in 1901, facing the strip, & the cottagers had used the strip for the purpose of reaching the road. Moreover for forty years the public had used the strip as part of the highway, & had worn a footpath along it. On the other hand, the lord of the manor had between 1866 & 1910 exercised various acts of ownership in connection with the strip. Disputes arose in 1892 between the council & the lord of the manor as to the rights of the council over the strip, but the council then made an admission which led plff. to believe that they admitted that it belonged to the lord of the manor. In 1904 the council acting as the highway authority made up the path & gravelled it, & in 1910, without any intimation to plff. they began to make up & gravel the whole strip. The lord of the manor then took proceedings to establish his rights of ownership:—Held: there was a presumption that the highway extended to the fence on the north side which the acts of ownership alleged by the lord of the manor were not sufficient to rebut.—*EAST v. 461. ————J.—Acts of ownership—Acquiesced in for years.]—On one side of a metalled road, which was a public highway, was an irregular shaped piece of land, formerly part of the waste of the manor, beyond which was an ancient hedge inclosing private property. On the other side of the road was another ancient hedge. In 1864, by the licence of the lord of the manor, one of the copyholders dug up & carried away several cartloads of soil from the surface of this piece of land. In 1872 in accordance with the customs of the manor, the lord granted a licence to inclose the land & admitted the licensee as copyholder thereof. In 1874 the copyholder inclosed the land by erecting a fence by the side of the metalled road at a distance of 15 ft. from the centre of the road, the surveyor of the highway board assisting in setting out the line. In 1884 the fence, being decayed, was restored. In 1880 the lord of the manor enfranchised the land. No objection was made by any one to any of these acts until in 1897 defts. threw down the fence alleging that it was an obstruction to the highway:—Held: assuming that there was a prima facie presumption that the whole space of land between the two ancient hedges was part of the highway, such presumption was rebutted by the evidence before the ct., & therefore the land inclosed in 1874 was not part of the highway.—*NEELD v. Pltfs. claimed this strip as part of the highway:—Held: the fence was not put up in reference to the highway, but was an original boundary of a close of land through which the highway had been made & the presumption that the lateral fence of a highway is its boundary was therefore rebutted; & the acts of user proved did not amount to a dedication to the public, & pltfs.' claim failed.—A. G. & CROYDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. MOORSOM-ROBERTS (1908), 72 J. P. 123; 6 L. G. R. 470.

469. Application of rule—Whether to public footpath through private occupation road—Depends on circumstances of each case.—Where a public footpath passes through a lane of irregular shape containing a private occupation road & of a varying breadth between the fences, there is no presumption, as there is in the case of an ordinary public highway bounded by fences, that the public right extends to the whole space between the fences. The question how far in such cases the public right extends depends upon the evidence in each particular case, & the mere fact that the public in passing through the lane have been accustomed, without exception, to walk upon the greensward or strips of grass land between the fences, does not show that any such presumption exists, or that the public right extends to the fences.—FORD v. HARROW URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1903), 88 L. T. 394; 67 J. P. 248; 1 L. G. R. 256.

470. — Fence along one side only.—A road across the edge of a waste of a manor was separated on one side by a fence from the adjoining land, & on the other side was open to the waste. Between the metalled road & the fence there was a narrow strip of grass land:—Held: there was a presumption that the lord of the manor had dedicated the land up to the fence as part of the highway.—EVELYN v. MIRRIELES (1900), 17 T. L. R. 152, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 3.—WHERE THERE IS A DITCH.

471. Whether ditch part of highway.—A ditch by the side of a highway or roadside waste is not necessarily part of the highway or waste. It may belong to & be the private property of the adjoining owner & he may lawfully enclose it.—CHIPPENDALE v. PONTEFRAC T RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1907), 71 J. P. 231.

472. — Where property adjoins a highway, & is separated from the roadway by a fence, & a ditch on the highway side of the fence, the presumption is that the ditch is not part of the highway, but it is not impossible in point of law that the ditch should be part of the highway even though it may from its nature be incapable of being used as part of the road for purposes of passage. In a case of the kind where a county ct. judge had held that the ditch did form part of the highway:—Held: on the facts, there was evidence on which he could come to that conclusion.—CHORLEY CORPN. v. NIGHTINGALE, [1907] 2 K. B. 637; 76 L. J. K. B. 1003; 97 L. T.

SUB-SECT. 4.—HIGHWAYS SET OUT UNDER LOCAL STATUTES.

475. General rule—Right to whole width set out.—R. v. WRIGHT, No. 186, ante.

476. — ——In 1811, a public road was set out across L. common by the R. Inclosure Comrs. of a width of fifty feet, & allotments, of the land on either side of the road, were at the same time made. About twenty-five feet only of the fifty feet allotted by the comrs. had been used as the actual road; the sides which were left uninclosed having become covered with furze & heath, & fir trees had been allowed during the last twenty-five years to come up through the furze. In 1808, the Highway Board commenced cutting down, & advertised a sale of some of these fir trees growing within the fifty feet allotted by the comrs. in 1811 for the public highway. On bill by the owner of the adjoining land to restrain such cutting: Held: the right of the public was to have the whole width of the road, & not merely that part which had been used as the via trita, preserved free from obstructions; & such right had not become extinguished by the fact that the trees had been allowed to grow up within the fifty feet for the period of twenty-five years.

Semble: the Highway Board were only entitled to remove the trees which were an obstruction to the road, & not as against the owner of the soil to sell the timber of the trees when cut.—TURNER v. RINGWOOD HIGHWAY BOARD (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 418; 21 L. T. 745; 18 W. R. 424.

477. Application of rule—Public footway used also as private carriage way.—A public bridle road & footway, fifteen feet wide, had been set out by an award which provided that the same should also be used as a private carriage & drift way by the owners of certain adjoining allotments. Pltfs., owners of these allotments, placed a bar across eleven & a half feet of the width of the way in order to preserve their exclusive right to the use of the way as a carriage & drift way, & brought an action for injunction against the surveyor of highways who had removed the barrier for the purpose of repairing the way:—Held: the public had the right to the use of the whole length & breadth of the way as

478. — Width delineated on plan—Public entitled to width shown.—A local Act, after reciting that certain roads were “intended to be made in the courses & directions as shown” on a certain plan, enacted that the said roads should be made & constructed “as shown or laid down on the said plan.” The width of the roads was delineated on the plan, but in the Act nothing was said regarding the width:—Held: the roads must be made of the width as shown on the plan; & also an indictment would lie in respect of their being made of a less width when such width was tendered as sufficient, although the time for completion of the roads under the Act had not expired.

local Act, inclosure comrs. are to set out, ascertain, & appoint public highways in the parish, in, over, & through lands & old inclosures, of the breadth they should think necessary, so that all such roads should be of the width of 60 feet at least:—Held: this clause imposed upon the comrs. the duty of setting out, to the width of 60 feet, all ancient highways existing at the time of the Act, & which might then be of less width than 60 feet.—R. v. PEGG (1856), 4 W. R. 256; 20 J. P. Jo. 99.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

481. Right to walk in carriage-way.—A foot-passenger, though he may be infirm from disease, has a right to walk in the carriage-way, & is entitled to the exercise of reasonable care on the part of persons driving carriages along it.—BOSS v. LITTON (1832), 5 C. & P. 407, N. P.

SUB-SECT. 2. RIGHT OF PASSAGE.

482. General rule.—In the King's highway, the King has only the right of passage for him & his people, but the freehold & all the profits such as trees are in the lord of the soil (per C.R.).—ANON. (1108), Y. B. 8 Edw. 1, fo. 9, pl. 7.

486. Whether an easement.—A plea in bar of an advowry for taking cattle damage-feasant, that the cattle escaped from a public highway into the locus in quo, through the defect of fences, must show that they were passing on the highway when they escaped; it is not sufficient to state that being in the highway they escaped.

The law is . . . that if cattle of one man escape into the land of another, it is no excuse that the fences were out of repair, if they were trespassers in the place from whence they came. If it be a close, the owner of the cattle must show an interest or a right to put them there. If it be a way, he must show that he was lawfully using the way; for the property is in the owner of the soil, subject to an easement for the benefit of the public (HEATH, J.).—*DOVASTON v. n. What right includes.—Whether confined to strict right of passage.—Moving buildings.—While the moving of a building along a highway may be a lawful use of that highway it does not necessarily follow that the moving of a building comes within the words favour of the public, & that expression has occasionally been repeated since that time. That, however, is hardly an accurate expression. There can be no such thing according to our law, or according to the civil law, as what I may term an easement in gross. An easement must be connected with a dominant tenement. In truth, a public road or highway is not an easement, it is a dedication to the public of the occupation of the surface of the land for the purpose of passing & repassing, the public generally taking upon themselves, through the parochial authorities or otherwise, the obligation of repairing it. It is quite clear that that is a very different thing from an ordinary easement, where the occupation remains in the owner of the servient tenement subject to the easement (LORD CAIRNS, L.J.).—*RANGELEY v. 492. ———.]—Pltf. was possessed of land which was crossed by a highway. A trainer of race-horses had agreed with pltf. for the use of some of his land for the training & trial of race-horses. A view of the land so used was obtainable from the highway on pltf.'s land. Deft was one of the proprietors of a publication which gave accounts of the doings of race-horses in training. On the occasion in respect of which the action was brought, deft. walked backwards & forwards on a portion of the highway on pltf.'s land, about fifteen yards in length, for a period of about an hour & a half, watching & taking notes of the trials of the race-horses on pltf.'s land. Pltf. having brought an action of trespass against him in respect of his user of the highway as aforesaid, & the jury having found for pltf.:—Held: deft.'s acts had exceeded the ordinary & reasonable user of a highway as such to which the public are entitled, he therefore was guilty of a trespass on pltf.'s land.

The right of the public to pass & repass on a highway is subject to all those reasonable extensions which may from time to time be recognised as necessary to its exercise in accordance with the enlarged notions of people in a country becoming more populous & highly civilised, but they must be such as are not inconsistent with the maintenance of the paramount idea that the right of the public is that of passage (COLLINS, L.J.).—*HICKMAN v. A claim on the part of persons so minded to assemble in any numbers, & for so long a time as they please to remain assembled, upon a highway, to the detriment of others having equal rights, is in its nature irreconcilable with the right of free passage, & there is, so far as we have been able to ascertain, no authority whatever in favour of it. It was urged that the right of public meeting, & the right of occupying any unoccupied land or highway that might seem appropriate to those of her Majesty's subjects who wish to meet there, were, if not synonymous, at least correlative. We fail to appreciate the argument, nor are we at all impressed with the serious consequences which *it was said would follow from a contrary view. There has been no difficulty experienced in the past, & we anticipate none in the future, when the only & legitimate object is public discussion, & no ulterior & injurious results are likely to happen. Things are done every day, in every part of the kingdom, without let or hindrance, which there is not & cannot be a legal right to do, & not infrequently are submitted to with a good grace because they are in their nature incapable, by whatever amount of user, of growing into a right (WILLS, J.).—Exp. ## SECT. 2.—RIGHTS OF OWNER OF SOIL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—PRESUMPTION AS TO AND EVIDENCE OF OWNERSHIP OF SOIL OF HIGHWAYS.

A. General Presumption.

516. General rule.—In owner of adjacent land.—ANON. (undated), No. 1, ante.

517. ———.]—As to the presumption, I think the principle of the more modern authorities is rightly taken, that the presumption is in favour of the lord of the manor, even though the highway may be more ancient than the grant of the manor. If no body can say they have any argument or proof of property in them, then it belonged to the Crown, & passed with the rest of the lands. But if the roads passed through the property of others, & are so ancient that no body can say when they were made, or speak to property, the only question is, where is the first presumption upon that naked, strict, abstracted case. I think the reason of the thing is, when the naked presumption stands stripped of evidence, that it is in the owner of the land on each side. But this is only such a presumption as is not like a title. Acts of ownership against a title once clearly established, would not have been set up, so as to avail against the title. For the sake of certainty, & it does not matter here how it is determined, if there be a certainty, the presumption is in favour of the owners on each side (LOUI MANSFIELD).—ANON. (1773), 1001, 358; 98 E. R. 602.

518. ———.]—The G. N. Ry. Co., in 1848, purchased of pltf. certain freehold land adjoining a turnpike road to be used partly for the site of their railway & works, & partly for the purpose of diverting a portion of an existing road. Having made a substituted road, the co., with the knowledge of pltf., & of the trustees, inclosed & took possession of the portion of the old road which had ceased by the diversion to form part of the turnpike road. The soil of the road was not noticed in the conveyance, all the parties being under the impression that it was vested in the trustees. By several acts regulating the turnpike road, the trustees had power from time to time to purchase land for the widening of the road; but there was no evidence that the freehold of the diverted portion of the road had ever been acquired by them:—Held: the presumption that the soil of the road was in pltf. as owner of the adjoining land, was not rebutted by the local turnpike Acts, so as to cast upon pltf. the onus of showing that the soil of the road had not been purchased by the trustees.

The soil of the old road did not pass by the conveyance to the co.; & there was nothing in the General Turnpike Act, 1822 (c. 126), or in the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), to place the co. in the position of trustees of the substituted road, so as to transfer to them the soil of the old road.

Sect. 2.—Rights of owner of soil: Sub-sect. 1, A. & B.]

In the ordinary case, where a man who is the owner of two pieces of land conveys them to a purchaser, if a turnpike road lies between them, the soil of the road passes by the conveyance, although the conveyance is silent as to its existence, & although the particular measurement of each piece is given, & would exclude the road. The argument on the part of pltf. is, that there are particular circumstances in this case which require a different decision, & show that the road in question did not pass. I consider it to be perfectly clear that the road did not pass by the conveyance. Before the conveyance it is manifest that the co. themselves thought that the soil of the road was in the trustees, & not in pltf. The plans & book of reference required by the standing orders in Parliament, & set out in the special case, are evidently framed upon that footing; & it seems to me that the conveyance exactly carries out that view of the case. It mentions two pieces of land numbered respectively 75 & 79, & describes their exact contents, & makes no mention whatever of No. 47, either in the conveyance itself, or in the schedule or plan, which by reference are imported into it. Taking the whole together, therefore, it seems to me to be perfectly clear that the three pieces of land thus numbered & described are treated as distinct, & that the effect of the conveyance is to pass two of them only to the co. (WILLIAMS, J.).—SALISBURY (MARQUIS) v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. (1858), 5 C. B. N. S. 174; 28 L. J. C. P. 40; 32 L. T. O. S. 175; 23 J. P. 22; 5 Jur. N. S. 70; 7 W. R. 75; 11 E. R. 69.

555. — Road adjoining single building site on estate.]—The right of the owner of land abutting on a highway to the soil of the highway ad medium filum viae is founded on a presumption of law which exists only in the absence of evidence of ownership. Qu.: whether such presumption has any application to a street in a town:—Held: in a suit between the lords of the manor & the corp'n. of L., that the soil of the B., an ancient street in the borough of L., belonged to the lords of the manor, there being sufficient evidence to rebut the presumption of ownership in the owners of the adjoining houses.

I should myself, if it were necessary to determine it, be very slow to come to the conclusion that where there is a road going through an estate, & a site is granted by the road side for the erection of a cottage or house, & a cottage or house is built upon that site, the mere conveyance or grant, or demise of a piece of land as the site of & for the purpose of building a house is, in presumption of law, a grant to the middle of the highroad, the frontage of which is probably the origin of the house being built on that space. It appears to me that a great many inconveniences might arise from the notion that a mere grant or demise of such a site would of itself raise a presumption of law which deprives the owner of the estate of his possessory title or of his freehold in respect of the half of the highway (JAMES, L.J.).—BECKETT

558. — Highway not included in measurements on plan.]—In a conveyance by deft. to pltf., a wood which abutted on a highway called C. Lane was described by its acreage, which was given with great minuteness, & by reference to a map which did not include any part of the lane. The property was also described in a schedule to the deed, by reference to the numbers in the ordnance map, in which the wood & the lane were marked with different numbers. By the recitals in the deed it was stated that it was one of the conditions of the contract for sale that the trees on the land sold should be paid for as part of the consideration at a valuation, & that such valuation had been made & the amount paid by pltf. The lane was very little used as a highway, being a grassy lane with trees & underwood on the side adjoining the wood; but evidence was given showing that none of these trees were included in the valuation:—Held: evidence of the trees being omitted from the valuation was properly admissible as proof of the circumstances in which the conveyance was executed; & the fact of such omission, coupled with the fact that the lane was not included in the measurement or the map, was sufficient to rebut the presumption that the soil of the lane, ad medium filum viae, passed by the conveyance. —PRYOR v. PETRE, [1894] 2 Ch. 11; 63 L. J. Ch. 531; 70 L. T. 331; 42 W. R. 435; 10 T. L. R. 303; 38 Sol. Jo. 286; 7 R. 424, C. A.

559. — Land acquired under statutory powers for street improvement.]—The Comrs. of Woods & Forests acquired a tract of land under an Act of Parliament passed for the purpose of executing a scheme of street improvements in the metropolis. Under this Act they made Regent Street & leased the houses in the street as they were built, including a house now sub-demised to pltf. Pltf. claimed to be entitled to the soil of the moiety of the street next to his house for the residue of his interest therein by virtue of the presumption that the conveyance of a house adjoining a highway passes the soil of the highway usque ad medium filum. The head lease of pltf.'s house described the property by dimensions & abutments & by a map, & referred to it as abutting on a street then forming. Upon the construction of the Act it was doubtful whether the Comrs. had any power to lease the soil of the streets:—Held: apart from any question as to the powers of the Comrs., the presumption was rebutted by the surrounding circumstances, regard being had to the terms of the lease & the provisions of the Act. Semble: the presumption does not apply to building estates or schemes.

Qu.: whether the presumption applies to leases or to grants from the Crown.—MAPPIN BROTHERS v. LIBERTY & Co., LTD., [1903] 1 Ch. 118; 72 L. J. Ch. 63; 87 L. T. 523; 67 J. P. 91; 51 W. R. 264; 19 T. L. R. 51; 47 Sol. Jo. 71; 1 L. G. R. 167.

560. General rule—Property of owner of adjoining land.]—Primâ facie* the presumption is, that a strip of land lying between a highway & the adjoining inclosure, is, as well as the soil of the highway ad medium filum viæ, the property of the owner of the inclosure. If the strip of land communicate with open commons or other larger portions of land, the presumption is either done away, or considerably narrowed, for the evidence of ownership which applies to the larger portions, applies also to the narrow strip which communicates with them.—*GROSE v. 564. ———.]—The ordinary presumption is, that strips of land lying along a highway even though indirectly connected with parts of the waste belong to the owner of the adjacent inclosed land between which & the actual beaten road they lie & not to the lord of the manor, especially if the adjacent owner has done acts of ownership without interruption upon the land. Such strips of land might well pass under a conveyance of the adjacent inclosure though the deed purported to state the quantity of acres, within the fences that were therein passed, if it had the words "more or less" added.—DENDY v. SIMPSON (1861), 7 Jur. N. S. 1058; 9 W. R. 743, Ex. Ch.; affg. S. C. sub nom. SIMPSON v. DENDY (1860), 8 C. B. N. S. 433.

565. ———.]—A local board of health were empowered by a local Act, when they should think fit, to cause the ditches at the sides of, or across public roads to be filled up, & to substitute pipe or other drains, & from time to time to amend the same; & the surface of the land gained by the filling up such ditches might, if the board thought fit, be thrown into the roads & ways, etc. Pltf. was owner of a close adjoining a public highway, & between the close & the highway was a strip of land averaging nine feet in width. Upon this strip of land ran a ditch, the bank of which, on pltf.'s side, was three feet in width, & covered with grass, & the bank on the road side was one foot in width, & covered with grass. At the side of the road were posts & rails about two feet high. Pltf. & his predecessors, the owners of the adjoining land, had from time to time, & the surveyors of highways two or three times during the last forty years, repaired the posts & rails:—Held: this was not a ditch at the side of, or across a public road within the Act, & the local board had no power to fill it up & substitute a pipe or other drain, the presumption being that the ditch belonged

566. Application of rule—Land of any tenure.]—The presumption is, that waste land, which adjoins to a road, belongs to the owner of the adjoining inclosed land, whether he be a freeholder, leaseholder, or copyholder, & not to the lord of the manor.

It is a primâ facie presumption, that waste lands on the sides, & the soil to the middle, of a highway belong to the owner of the adjoining freehold land. The rule is founded on a presumption that the proprietor of the adjoining land at some former period gave up to the public for passage all the land between his inclosure & the middle of the road. I think that rule applies not only to freehold but to copyhold lands also (BAYLEY, J.).—DOE d. PRING v. PEARSEY (1827), 7 B. & C. 304; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 908; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 310; 108 E. 587. ———.]—The owner, who dedicates to public use as a highway a portion of his land, parts with no other right than a right of passage to the public, & may exercise all other rights of ownership not inconsistent with such dedication; & the appropriation, made to & adopted by the public, of a part of the street to one kind of passage & another part to another, does not deprive him at common law of any rights as owner of the land which are not inconsistent with the right of passage by the public; & the provisions of the Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), & Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), so far as they apply to roads & streets, are subordinate to the paramount rights reserved by the owner. Resp. was owner & occupier of premises contiguous to a public highway, several feet of the highway immediately adjoining to his premises being flagged pavement, which had been used as a footway for sixty years. Resp.'s premises consisted of a warehouse, yard, & railway arches, with a gateway opening on to the pavement; the site had formerly been occupied by shops & houses; but, owing to the erection of the railway, was now unfit for houses. Resp. used the premises for the deposit of heavy machinery, etc.; & he at first unloaded the machinery from the carriage or trolleys in the roadway, & moved it across the pavement by rollers & levers into his premises; but this took much time, & was objected to as causing a nuisance by the obstruction to the foot pavement. Resp. then applied to appts., who were the surveyors of highways under Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 96, & under sect. 98 were empowered from time to time to cause the streets to be paved & the ground or soil to be raised or lowered, for permission to take up the flags & make a proper paved carriage access across the footway to his premises. This they refused. Resp. then conveyed his machinery across the pavement in the carriage or trolleys; & the weight crushed & injured the flags. Upon this appts. took out a summons against resp. under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72, for doing damage to a highway. The magistrate dismissed the summons, finding that the "freehold premises in question could not be reasonably enjoyed without access across the existing footway, & that the rights of ownership & those of the public might be jointly exercised consistently with the general welfare"; & he stated a case for the opinion of the Queen's Bench as to whether he was bound to convict. Held: the magistrate was justified in dismissing the summons.—ST. Secl. 2.—Rights of owner of soil: Sub-sect. 2, A. & B. (a) & (b).]

588. ——— No right in owner to interfere with surface.]—(1) Where water-pipes had, without the consent of the owner of the soil, been laid in the soil of a highway, an injunction to restrain the continuance of the pipes was granted; the owner of the soil not being left to his remedy at law, & not being required to establish his right at law. The facts that the soil under the highway was of no value to the owner, & that his motive for applying to the ct. was not connected with the enjoyment of his land, were held not to be reasons against the granting of the injunction.

(2) Pltf. is the owner of the soil through which these pipes have been laid. At the same time, pltf. has not the right of an unlimited owner in respect of that soil, because the upper surface is dedicated to the public for the purpose of a public highway, which is under the management of local authorities; & pltf. cannot use the soil, or deal with it by breaking it open, or in any other manner, so as to interfere with the use of it by the public for the purpose of a highway (LORD SETHBORNE, C.).—*GOODSON v. The urban authority objected, & in an action brought by the A.-G. at the relation of the authority & by the authority to restrain deft. from so breaking up the street:—Held: the rights of deft. under the sect. did not extend to breaking up the street for the purpose in question, & granted an injunction to restrain deft. from breaking up the street except for the purpose of the exercise of his rights under that sect.—*A.-G. v. The pavement at that point, & the soil beneath it, were the property of pltf. subject to a right which had been acquired by the public to use the pavement as a public footpath. The post was erected without pltf.’s consent, & he brought an action for trespass to his land against the corp.:—Held: the placing of the post in pltf.’s soils was not a taking of his land so as to make Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 18, apply, & as defts. had erected the post under their statutory powers, the action could not be maintained.—*ESCOTT v. 598. —Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 15).—By above Act, s. 6, the undertakers were authorised to break up the soil of streets within the limits of their special Act, & to lay down pipes & other works therein for supplying gas to the inhabitants of the district. Sect. 7 provided that nothing therein should authorise the undertakers to lay down any pipe or other works “in any land not dedicated to public use, without the consent of the owners & occupiers thereof.” Pltf. was the owner of land on either side of a road dedicated to public use, & had bored a tunnel thereunder for his own purposes. In pursuance of their statutory powers, defts. proposed to lay gas pipes & works extending to a depth of five feet below the surface of the road on either side of the tunnel such pipes being carried up at right angles to the tunnel, & passing over it at a depth of three inches from the surface. It was agreed that eighteen inches was the thickness of soil under the road reasonably necessary for the proper maintenance of the road. The question raised in the action was whether the soil to a greater depth than eighteen inches from the surface was “land not dedicated to public use”:—Held: the dedication of the road to public use brought it within above Act, & no part of it could, for the purposes of gas or water undertakings, be properly held to be land “not dedicated to public use” under sect. 7. The proviso in that sect. extended only to land of which no part was dedicated to public use. Dedication, as between the owner of the soil on the one hand & the controlling authority on the other, involves not merely the occupation by the public of the surface, but also the dedication of so much of the adjacent soil as is necessary for the proper maintenance of the surface as a road or street.—*SCHWEDER v. 601. —Lessees of minerals under highway.—A limited gas co., acting without any statutory authority, & without the authority of the landowner, but with the permission of the highway authority, laid pipes under the soil of the highway. Subsequently, a gas co. was constituted by a private Act which incorporated the Gasworks Clauses Acts, 1847, & 1871. The private Act of this co. provided for the dissolution of the limited co., & enacted that all the lands, gasworks, easements, mains, pipes, plant, & apparatus placed by, vested in, or which were the property of the limited co. immediately before the passing of the Act, should be similarly vested in the incorporated co., & the incorporated co. were empowered to maintain the existing gasworks, & to lay down & maintain additional mains & pipes. The Gasworks Clauses Acts, 1847, gives power to undertakers of gasworks to open the soil within their district, to lay & repair pipes therein, & to do other Acts necessary for supplying gas, making compensation for any damage done in the execution of such powers. The Gasworks Clauses Act, 1871, renders it compulsory on undertakers of gasworks to supply gas on certain conditions & within certain limits. Defts., the lessees of the minerals under & adjacent to the highway under which plffs. had laid their pipes, had by working the coal thereunder let down the soil of the highway & caused injury to plffs.' pipes:—Held: plffs. were entitled to support for their pipes, & the landowner was entitled to compensation for the burden thus imposed upon him; plffs. could therefore recover damages by action for any injury caused to their pipes, while the owner of the minerals could recover compensation in an arbitration for the limitation thus put upon the user of his land.—*NORMANTON GAS CO. v. An electric lighting co. had illegally broken up the surface of a street within the district of a vestry in the metropolis, & placed their pipes & wires at a depth of about two feet below the surface:—Held: the vestry were not by virtue of sect. 96 the owners of the soil of the street at that depth, & although the co. had acted illegally in breaking up the street, the vestry could not maintain an action for a mandatory injunction to compel the co. to remove their pipes & wires, there being no continuing trespass upon or interference with any right of the vestry.—*BATTERSEA VESTRY v. Defts. caused damage to the letting value of the grass & herbage by wrongfully permitting cattle to graze in the road, & an action was brought against them by the A.-G., on the relation of the rural district council, & by the district council for an injunction & damages:—Held: the action failed, as regards the district council, because the right of property in the grass & herbage was vested in the parish council & not in the district council; & as regards the A.-G. because the right of property which had been injured was one enjoyed by only a limited section of the public, namely, the parishioners, & not by the public at large.—*A.-G. & SPALDING RURAL COUNCIL v. 608. — Under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55).]—Under above Act, s. 149, which provides for the vesting in the urban authority of the streets within their district, the question how much above & below the surface of the street vests in the urban authority is determined by reference to what is necessary for the user of the street quod street without regard to the circumstances in which the site of the street was originally acquired. Where, therefore, the site of a street which ultimately vested in defts. as the urban authority under this sect. was originally conveyed to turnpike trustees in fee simple for the purposes of making a road under the Turnpike Roads Acts:—Held: the property of defts. in the site of the street was not thereby enlarged, so as to entitle them to prevent electric wires being carried over the street at a height above the area required for the user of the street.

It has been decided by a long series of cases that the word “vest” means that the local authority do actually become the owners of the street to this extent: they become the owners of so much of the air above & of the soil below as is necessary to the ordinary user of the street as a street, & of no more. Deft. was at the trial found guilty, & he now moved for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the evidence:—Held: deft. had not been injured by the enlargement of the new bridge, & he was able to prevent, if he so wished, cattle crossing over into his land by the erection of a stile.—*R. v. See Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55); Metropolitan Management Act, 1854 (c. 120).

616. Extent of ownership—Sufficient for control & management as highway.]—By an award made under an Inclosure Act, passed in 1766, two private roads, E. & H., were set out. About 1818, the road E. became a public highway. Down to 1863, the surveyors of highways for the parish of C., within which E. & H. were situate, had from time to time let the pasture upon E. & H. to various persons. A local board was formed in 1863 for the parish of C., who in 1876 let the pasture upon E. & H. to pltf.. He thereupon commenced to depasture the herbage with his cattle on the roads. Deft. interfered with pltf.'s enjoyment of the pasture. By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, a street includes any highway. By sect. 144, every local board are within their district surveyors of highways. By sect. 149, all streets shall vest in & be under the control of the local board:—Held: by above enactment the property in the soil of E., being a "street," so far vested in the local board that they could demise the right of pasturage thereon to pltf., who was entitled to maintain an action; the local board having no power to demise H., being a private way, pltf. had not sufficient exclusive possession as occupier to enable him to maintain an action.

The words of this sect. [Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149] vest the property in the street. It comprises a depth which enables the urban authority to do that which is done in every street, namely, to raise the street & to lay down sewers; for, at the present day, there can be no street in a town without sewers, & also for the purpose of laying down gas & water-pipes (BRETT, L.J.).—(*COVERDALE v. Therefore where a local Act authorised the urban authority to erect & maintain "in any street or public place, or on land belonging to them or under their control," lavatories for the use of the public:—Held: the urban authority had no power to excavate the soil & erect lavatories below the surface of a street which had vested in them within 1875 Act.—TUNBRIDGE WELLS CORPN. v. a part of A. Street, & opening the new street in lieu thereof. The vestry of the parish gave notice to pltf. that he must not convert to his own use the stopped up part of N. Street, nor stop up A. Street, or convert any part of the soil of it to his own use till he had purchased the same from the vestry:—Held: under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 98, all streets being for the time being highways are vested in the vestry, but only so long as they are highways, & when they cease to be highways, by being legally stopped up or diverted, the interest of the vestry determines, therefore pltf. was entitled to convert to his own use the stopped up part of N. ### 623. Remedies for interference—Injunction—Grounds for granting—Interference trifling.]

Defts. being in the use & occupation of a railway bridge over a certain highway, & being owners of the soil on either side of the road, commenced the construction of buttresses in the road, on a line with the existing abutments, for the purpose of widening their bridge. Pltfs., in whom the soil of the road was vested under Metropolitan Local Management Act, as surveyors of the highways, filed a bill to restrain defts. from further narrowing the road, on the ground of public inconvenience:—Held: the alleged inconvenience was not of sufficient magnitude for the interference of the ct.—WANDSWORTH BOARD OF WORKS v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1862), 31 L. J. Ch. 854; 20 J. P. 821; 8 Jur. N. S. 691; 10 W. R. 814.

629. ——— Damages.]—Surface let down by mining operations.]—A railway co. constructed a railway on the level across a highway in the district of which relators were the urban sanitary authority. Subsequently defts. worked coal mines in a proper & usual manner beneath the highway, with the result that a gradual & uniform subsidence to the extent of about ten feet vertically took place of the highway, railway, & surrounding land. No actual damage was done to the highway thereby, nor was it rendered less convenient; but the railway co. placed ballast under the railway so as to maintain it at its original level, with the result that an embankment was formed obstructing the use of the highway. In an action against defts. for damages for the obstruction to the highway:—Held: (1) defts. were not liable; (2) assuming the highway to be repairable by the inhabitants at large, & therefore vested in relators under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149, the subsidence of the highway having been substantial, relators, notwithstanding that they had suffered no appreciable damage by reason of such subsidence, were entitled to judgment with nominal damages for the injury to their proprietary right.—*A.-G. v. While working the mine the owners let down the surface of the highway, which the local authority in good faith & on the opinion of skilled advisers, restored to its former level at great cost. An equally commodious road might have been made at less cost:—Held: the local authority were not entitled to raise the road to the old level, cost what it might & whether it was more commodious to the public or not, & were only entitled to recover from the mine owners what it would have cost to make the equally commodious road.—*LODGE HOLES COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. ### SECT. 3.—RIGHT TO ACCESS BY OWNER OF ADJOINING PREMISES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

632. General rule.—(1) Pltf. erected a street, leading out of a highway, across his own close, & terminating at the edge of deft.'s adjoining close, which was separated from the end of the street for twenty-one years, during nineteen of which the houses were completed, and the street publicly watched, cleansed, & lighted, & both footways & half the horseway thereof paved at the expense of the inhabitants, by deft.'s fence:—Held: this street was not so dedicated to the public, that deft. pulling down his wall might enter it at the end adjoining to his land, & use it as a highway.

(2) No particular time is necessary for evidence of a dedication: it is not, like a grant, presumed from length of time: if the act of dedication be unequivocal, it may take place immediately: for instance, if a man builds a double row of houses opening into an ancient street at each end, making a street, & sells or lets the houses, that is instantly a highway (CHAMBERLAIN, J.).—*WOODYER v. Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149, gives power to the local authority to cause the soil of any street which is or at any time becomes a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large within any urban district to be raised, lowered, or altered as they may think fit, & to place & keep in repair fences & posts for the safety of foot passengers, defts. could not be restrained by injunction from keeping up the raised footpath for the accommodation of the public, & any remedy, except on the ground of unreasonable conduct on the part of the local authority, ought to be sought by way of compensation under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 308.—SELLORS v. MATLOCK BATH LOCAL BOARD (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 928; 52 L. T. 762.

639. — Whether owner of soil of highway or not.—An owner of land which runs right up to a public highway is entitled to access to that highway from his land, & that is so whether he is the presumptive owner of the soil of the highway or not. Where, therefore, a landowner, whose land adjoined a public promenade which had been also for many years used as a public highway for foot passengers, was deprived of his access to the promenade by a fence erected by a local board in whom the promenade had been vested:—Held: a mandatory injunction must issue to compel the removal of the fence, & an inquiry as to damages be directed.—RAMUZ v. SOUTHEND LOCAL BOARD (1892), 67 L. T. 169; 8 T. L. R. 700.

640. Whether right limited to right of passage.—In an action, in which the claim was admitted, deft. counterclaimed an injunction in the following circumstances. Pltf. & deft. were the respective owners & occupiers of two adjoining houses abutting on a street which was a public highway. The side wall of deft.'s house projected into the street a short distance beyond the front of pltf.'s house. There was no door or other opening in the side wall. Pltf. affixed boards at right angles to the front of his house & close to deft.'s side wall covering the wall to a height of twenty-two feet from the pavement. The boards did not constitute an obstruction to the street but they prevented deft. from having access to the wall from the street for the purpose of repairing it, & from exhibiting advertisements upon it:—Held: the right of access to a highway enjoyed as a private right by the owner of premises adjoining the highway is not limited to the right to pass from the premises to the highway & vice versa, but includes the right of access to a wall of the premises in which there is no door or other opening, & the right to have advertisements on the wall displayed to the uninterrupted view of the members of the public using the highway: the act of pltf. was a wrongful interference with the private right of deft.; & the deft. was entitled to an injunction restraining pltf. from maintaining the boards in the position above described.—*COBB v. It would be the height of absurdity to say that a private right is not interfered with when a man who has been accustomed to enter his house from a highway finds his doorway made impassable, so that he no longer has access to his house from the public highway. This would equally be a private injury to him, whether the right of the public to pass & repass along the highway were or were not at the same time interfered with (WOOD, V.-C.).—*A.-G. v. 649. ——An owner of premises abutting on a highway enjoys as a private right the right of access from his own premises to the highway, & any interference with that access is an interference with a private right. But his right to transfer goods from vans in the public roadway across the public pavement to his premises is a right enjoyed by him as one of the public entitled to use the highway. It is an individual interest in a public right, but is not a private right which entitles him to restrain a local authority, acting bonâ fide under statutory powers, from obstructing the highway adjoining his premises in a manner which affects his personal convenience.

Deft., a public authority, in the exercise of the statutory obligation to light streets, erected a lamp-post on a highway in a place which it was proved was most convenient for the public. Pltfs., the owners of premises abutting on the highway, complained that the lamp-post interfered with the carrying on by them of their business:—Held: pltfs. had no right to restrain defts. from exercising their statutory authority to obstruct the highway by the erection of lamp-posts where they thought it necessary.—*CHAPLIN (W. The abstraction of salt from a bed beneath them caused from time to time a subsidence of the ground upon which the houses & highways were situate. The houses were rebuilt in 1870 on timber, so that they might be raised by screw-jacks. In 1876 the surface of the highway in front of the houses had subsided considerably, & the houses had subsided with it. The surface of the roadway remained continuous, so that traffic could pass along it as before; but the roadway was in a curved hollow, & at the level to which it had subsided was liable to be flooded, & in fact was flooded at times, so as to render traffic impossible. Defts. put materials on the roadway so as to make the surface immediately above the point of the lowest subsidence about four feet three inches higher than it was at the commencement of the work. Ptfs., having had notice from defts., raised their houses simultaneously with the works to the roadway, & then claimed under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 308, & were awarded compensation for the cost of raising the houses. Having regard to the obstruction to traffic caused by floods, the raising of the road was reasonably necessary to put it in a proper state for traffic; but, excluding the consideration of floods, the raising of the road to the extent described, though a reasonable & prudent act, was not necessary to put the road into a proper state for traffic:—Held: as the highway was vested in defts., no action of trespass could have been maintained by ptfs., even if more materials had been placed on the road than a surveyor of highways could justify, & ptfs. had no right to have the road maintained at the level to which it accidentally & recently sank; & the works of defts. were not done "in exercise of any of the powers" of the Act within the terms of sect. 308, which means powers created by the Act, & not simply powers transferred by sect. 144 from the surveyor to the local board, but were done, if not

670. ————]—Imposition of new tolls—By lessee—Construction of lease.—By a bridge Act it was enacted that tolls not exceeding the tolls specified in the schedule to that Act be demanded & taken by such person as the comrs. should appoint for each & every time of passing over the bridge; provided that tolls should only be payable once on the same day in the case of foot passengers, private carriages, not plying for hire, & carts, notwithstanding that they might pass or repass more than once on the same day. By the schedule to the Act a toll of tid. was payable for every horse drawing a carriage. Deft. tendered for the tolls on the footing, as he alleged, of the above provisions; & the comrs., by lease demised to deft., at an annual rent, the tolls which were or could then be demanded & taken, subject to all statutory restrictions & exemptions, & so as such tolls to be taken during the demise should not be increased beyond the tolls then levied. At the date of the lease one toll only was demanded in respect of a hackney carriage passing over the bridge with passengers & returning with the same passengers or without passengers on the same day, & no toll was demanded in respect of a hackney carriage passing without passengers. Deft. proposed to charge a toll in the case of a carriage plying for hire every time it crossed the bridge. Thereupon the comrs. brought an action claiming an injunction to restrain him from so doing. Deft. counter-claimed that the lease might be rectified on the ground that it did not give effect to the contract between the comrs. & himself by their acceptance of his tender for the tolls:—Held: the proposed increase of the tolls was not permissible, having regard to the terms of the lease.—CONWAY BRIDGE COMRS. v. JONES (1910), 102 L. T. 92; 26 T. L. R. 259, C. A.

671. Renting tolls—Effect of—Whether confers settlement.—Renting the tolls of a bridge vested by Act of Parliament in a co. of proprietors who are declared a corp'n., will confer a settlement although the tolls are made personal estate & the renting is not stated to be by deed. 13 Geo. 3, c. 84, which prohibits persons from gaining a settlement by renting the tolls of turnpike roads, does not extend to the tolls of a bridge, which bridge does not appear to be part of the turnpike road.—R. v. BURWITH (INHABITANTS) (1813), 1 M. & S. 511; 105 E. R. 192.

By another act, it was made lawful for the trustees, at a meeting to be held for that purpose, whereof notice in writing was to be affixed on all the turnpike gates erected on the road, to lessen & reduce, & again to raise & advance all or any of the tolls thereby granted, & such tolls so reduced or advanced were to be collected as the tolls thereby granted:—Held: under this Act, the trustees were authorised to reduce or advance any one of the four descriptions of tolls at all the gates, but not to reduce or advance them at one gate & not at another.—*R. v. 680. How far dependent on ownership of soil.]—A wooden bridge was constructed across a river which divided the parishes of W. & A. from each other, one bank & part of the bridge being in W., the other bank & other part of the bridge in A. The bridge was supported by piles driven into the ground at the bottom of the river, & by abutments of brickwork on each bank. On the A. side of the bridge was a toll house supported on piles also driven into the soil of the river. Tolls were taken, at this house only, for carts with merchandise passing the bridge. S. was the owner of the tolls, deriving title from a grant from the Duchy of Lancaster. In a document of the reign of Edward II., & in other documents down to the time of Charles I., the tolls were called traverse; & it appeared that the tolls had passed by grants conveying likewise the manor & castle of H. of which S. & those preceding him were also owners. S., & those preceding him, had for twenty years performed the repairs of the bridge, including excavations in the soil at the bottom of the river, & the planking of the carriage way, but had not repaired the carriage way: Held: (1) this was prima facie evidence that S. had the tolls as tolls traverse, in respect of ownership of the soil on which the bridge stood; (2) this was a beneficial occupation by him of land in W. for which he was rateable in W.

The tolls were actually received by E., who paid rent for them to S., under a parol agreement by which E. contracted with S. for the receipt of the tolls at such rent: Held: S. was nevertheless the rateable party, since the agreement did not profess to demise the lands, & the tolls, as such, could not pass from him without deed.—R. v. 681. —.]—Goods carried by a railway co. upon their railway, or to their railway station, entirely upon land belonging to them, & not upon any highway or in the enjoyment of any easement or other right reserved by the former owners of the land or those under whom they claim, cannot be the subject of a claim to a toll thorough or toll traverse arising either by prescription or grant. A local Act vested in the market co. certain tolls which had been immemorially received by the corp. of Brecon for cattle, goods, & carriages passing to, through, or from the borough. A railway co., under the sanction of an Act of Parliament passed in the same session, acquired land, not being a highway, on which they constructed a railway & station within the borough of Brecon, whence passengers, goods, & cattle were conveyed by other lines of railway to other places beyond the limits of the borough. The rights of the corp. & of the market co. were expressly reserved by the railway Act, but there was no provision either in that or in the railway Act enabling them to levy tolls on the railway:—Held: the Brecon Market Co. were not entitled to toll in respect of cattle, goods, or carriages passing along the railway.

Tolls for passing upon land are granted by the Crown in respect of a consideration to be enjoyed by the persons who are to pay them; & they cannot be effectually granted without such a consideration, or so as to extend or be taken beyond the place in which such consideration arises. They consist of two sorts, toll thorough, & toll traverse. Toll thorough may be taken upon land not belonging to the grantee, & consequently no consideration can be implied for such grant. It is ordinarily taken upon a highway, & is granted to some one who undertakes some public work for the benefit of those who use the highway, as, for instance, in making the road or keeping it in order & repair for the use of the passers by; & it can only be taken in the way or ways to which such obligation applies. Therefore, if a person were entitled to a toll thorough in a town, in consideration of keeping certain streets in order, the toll would apply only to such streets; & persons using other streets could not be made subject to the toll. A toll traverse is said to differ from a toll thorough in this, that no consideration for it need be averred. This does not, however, mean that there need be no consideration for it; it merely expresses that, as there can be no toll traverse except in respect of going over the land of the grantee, the consideration of using the land is implied from the character of the toll, & need not be further averred than by stating that it is a toll traverse. The consideration is the giving up the land of the grantee. This does not make it necessary that the grantee should actually retain the soil in the land. It is enough that he should have the land at the time of the grant, & allow the use of it to the persons who are to pay the toll; & it is not necessary that he should be the lord of a manor, though such grants have usually been made to lords of manors. Whilst the grantee has the land, he is entitled to the toll in respect of the use of it. If he part with the land, he may still retain the right to the toll (WILLES, J.).—BRECON MARKETS (O. v. NEATH & BRECON RY. CO.) (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 555; 41 L. J. C. P. 257; 27 L. T. 316; 36 J. P. 744; affd. (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 157, Ex. Ch.

685. — — — Toll claimed under grant.]—By a local Act, comrs. were appointed for building a bridge, & after compensating the proprietors of then existing ferries, a toll was granted & vested in the comrs. By another local Act, the comrs. were empowered to contract with persons to build & maintain the bridge, & to convey & assign to them in perpetuity the tolls, profits, or income to arise from or belonging to the bridge. Accordingly they contracted with thirty persons to build & maintain the bridge, & in 1729, conveyed the bridge & tolls, & all the ground & soil adjacent & belonging to the ancient ferries & bridge as they had power to convey to trustees for the thirty persons. The management of the property had become vested in a committee appointed annually by the shareholders, whose title was derived from the thirty persons. Thames Navigation Act, 1870 (c. cxlix), s. 101, vested the bridge & the lands thereunto belonging, & the tolls, etc., in the committee of management "subject to the trusts on which same were held at the passing of the Act."

The tolls for passage of this bridge, in place of the ancient ferry, must, to answer the common law description of toll, be considered as toll traverse or toll thorough. In respect of toll thorough, that is toll paid for the privilege of passing over land not in the ownership of the person claiming the toll, it is necessary that there should be some consideration for it, but here no consideration exists. In respect of toll traverse no consideration is required to be proved, because the passage over the land of the owner of it is a sufficient consideration (WILLES, J.).—WADMORE v. On July 18, 1842, his son, in charge of the gate, allowed a person driving a cart to pass through the gate on payment of the sum of 4d., the sum which he ought to have charged being 6d. Proceedings were thereupon taken against pltf. under Turnpike Roads Act, 1823 (c. 95), s. 30, which imposes a penalty, not exceeding £5, on a collector who "shall demand & take a greater or less toll from any person than he shall be authorised to demand & take, by virtue of the powers of any Act, or of the orders & resolutions of the trustees or comrs. made in pursuance thereof." One day C., having paid the toll, refused to pay a second toll on the return, as a return toll had not been claimed for forty years, but on protest paid the toll & summoned the toll-keeper, who was convicted by justices: Held: the conviction was wrong, & this being a case of disputed toll, the remedy was under the special sect. as to disputes. *DIXON v. 698. Exemption from payment for return journey—Horses & vehicle differently constituted on return.]—A turnpike Act, imposing a toll on every carriage & on every horse passing through the gate, & exempting any person from paying more than once in a day for passing or repassing with the same carriage or horse exempts the traveller from paying a second time in the day for the passage of the same carriage, though drawn by different horses, being the same in number, & another clause providing that in all cases of carriages travelling for hire, the traveller or passenger therein shall be considered as the person paying the toll, & that such payment shall not exempt such carriages repassing with a different traveller or passenger, does not extend to stage coaches; the carriage itself not being there hired by the respective passengers, but only a conveyance by it: & therefore such stage coaches are freed of toll under the former clause by one payment in the day, although returning with different passengers & different horses, the horses being the same in number.—*WILLIAMS v. By another local Act, applying to the same turnpike, & reciting the former Act, the old tolls were repealed, & the new toll, when carriages passed, was imposed, not on the carriages, but on the horses drawing them: In the latter Act, all the provisions, regulations & clauses of the former were continued as fully as if they had been re-enacted:—Held: where the toll imposed by the latter Act had been paid for horses passing with a carriage, those horses were exempted from toll on returning the same day, though with a different carriage.—*GRAY v. The statute then provided that no person should be liable to pay toll more than once in any one day at any toll gate for passing & repassing in any one day with the same horses & carriages through the same, but all persons having paid toll once, & producing a ticket denoting the payment of such toll, were afterwards to pass & repass with the same horses & carriages toll free during the same day. A stage coach, drawn by four horses, passed through a gate erected under this Act of Parliament, & paid the toll. In the evening of the same day, a different coach, called by the same name, belonging to the same proprietor, driven by the same coachman, & drawn by the same four horses, but carrying different passengers & different parcels for hire, passed through the same gate:—Held: a second toll was payable in respect of this carriage & horses.—*LOARING v. By a subsequent Act, reciting that it was expedient to increase the tolls, the provisions in the former Act, except with certain alterations, were re-enacted. One of the alterations was, that the former tolls should cease, & that instead thereof there should be paid for every horse or beast of draught drawing a carriage 6d. The trustees let the tolls, with power to collect them according to the Act, & subject to such rules & restrictions as should be made by the trustees: & the lessee covenanted with the trustees, to permit the owners of stage-coaches, waggons, etc., to pass in the following manner: viz., horses drawing any such carriage, as thereinbefore mentioned, to be respectively allowed to pass along the road on payment of full toll going, & quarter toll returning, at any time during the same day. Horses passed through a gate, drawing a stage-coach, & full toll was paid for them; they returned the same day, drawing another stage-coach, & the lessee exacted full toll: Held: the lessee ought, by his covenant, to have demanded quarter-toll only. —*FENTON v. By sect. 11 it is provided, that, "except as hereinafter provided to the contrary," only one full toll shall be payable for horses passing & repassing once in the same day. By sect. 12, "all horses, etc., except horses or cattle drawing any stage-coach, waggon or other stage carriage," returning the same day, shall, on the production of a ticket denoting payment, pass toll free. By sect. 13, no horse which shall have paid the toll once, shall be permitted to return toll free when drawing "another or different waggon, wain, cart, or other such carriage." By sect. 14, horses drawing any post-chaise or other carriage travelling for hire, shall pay as often as a new hiring takes place. Sect. 15 provides that no additional toll shall be payable in respect of any stage-coach which shall be freed by such ticket on account only of their conveying other passengers, or of the horses or cattle drawing the same having been changed:—Held: in respect of the same horses passing through the toll-gate with a stage-coach, & returning the same day with a different stage-coach & passengers, only a single toll for each horse was payable, the horses & both coaches belonging to the same proprietor.—*EKIN v. 711. Act comprising several roads—How far one payment frees other gates.]—By a local turnpike Act, the road was divided into three separate districts or divisions, a different set of trustees being appointed for each. Sect. 14 enabled "the trustees," or any person or persons by them appointed, to demand & take, at the turnpikes or gates erected or to be erected by virtue of the act, amongst others, a toll of 4*d.* "for every horse, etc., drawing any waggon, etc., with four wheels, having the felloes of the wheels thereof of the breadth or gauge of four & a half inches." Sect. 15 provided that any person having paid the toll for the passing of any horse, carriage, etc., upon producing a ticket should be permitted to pass & re-pass toll free through the same gate or through such other gate or gates, if any, as the ticket for such payment should free, at any time during the same day; & sect. 16 enacted "that no more than one full toll should be demanded or taken for or in respect of the same horses, etc., for passing on the same day through all or any of the toll-gates, etc., along the whole line of the roads":—Held: a single toll of 4*d.* paid for passing a toll-gate in one of the three districts or divisions cleared all the gates in the three districts.—*JOHNSON v. from C. to D.; two full tolls, & no more, upon the road from E. to F.; one full toll, & no more, upon all the other roads comprised in this Act"; & sect. 14 enacted that "all horses, beasts, & cattle in respect whereof the tolls hereby authorised to be taken shall have been paid at any toll-gate on the roads or on the sides thereof, shall, upon a ticket being produced denoting such payment, be permitted, in returning through the same toll-gate, & in going & returning through such other toll-gate, if any, as the ticket for such payment shall free; to pass toll-free at all times on the same day:—Held: (1) sect. 13 did not authorise the trustees to demand two full tolls from a traveller passing through only one gate on a line of road upon which two full tolls were chargeable; (2) where a party has paid one full toll on passing through a gate, he was not chargeable with two full tolls on passing on the same day through another gate on another of the roads on which two full tolls were demandable; but he was liable to a second single toll, there being nothing on the ticket to indicate that it freed any other gate; (3) a traveller who had paid one full toll on passing through a gate on one of the roads on which one full toll was payable, was not entitled to pass toll-free on the same day through a gate on another of the roads upon which one full toll was payable, the one full toll being by sect. 13 payable upon "each" of the roads comprised in the Act; (4) sect. 11 of the local Act specifically providing for progressive charges in respect of the diminished breadth of wagon wheels, virtually repealed Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 7; & consequently, the toll is limited to the sums mentioned in the local Act.—JAMES v. DICKINSON, WILLIAMS v. WILLS, LOVERING v. LIMPANY (1863), 14 C. B. N. S. 416; 143 E. R. 508.

The toll-gates were, sometime after erection at a point near the bridge, removed, & others erected at a spot distant nine hundred & two yards from the bridge:—Held: the new toll-gates were not placed at a reasonable distance from the bridge under the statute, & toll could not be legally demanded thereat.—*ROYAL v. For a period of between eighty & ninety years before Feb. 1885 the persons in the employ of the Postmaster General duly paid the tolls but since that date exemption for such persons had been claimed & the tolls not paid. The proprietors then presented a petition of right, the object of which was to show that the persons in the employment of the Postmaster General were liable to pay the tolls in question. The Crown demurred to the petition of right. The alleged liability depended upon whether there was an express enactment still subsisting & exempting the mails from the tolls imposed by the local Act:—Held: (1) upon the construction of 25 Geo. 3, c. 57, the local Act, Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126); Turnpike Roads Act, 1823 (c. 95) & 1 Vict. c. 32, the express exemption of the mails from tolls, contained in 25 Geo. 3, c. 57, was made applicable by sect. 53 of the local Act to the bridge & roads in question; (2) 25 Geo. 3, c. 57, although partially, and to a limited extent repealed by Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), & Turnpike Roads Act, 1823 (c. 95) was not by the two last-mentioned Acts repealed as to such bridge & roads; (3) the mails were specially exempted from the payment of tolls to the proprietors of the bridge & roads, 1 Vict. c. 32, s. 19, & the suppliants were not entitled to any relief under their petition of right; (4) neither usage nor long continued practice could have any effect upon the Acts in question.—NORTHAM BRIDGE CO. v. R. (1880), 55 L. T. 759.

720. Police Application of exemption.]—The words “any turnpike road or bridge” in County Police Act, 1840 (c. 88), s. 1, are not limited to a “turnpike trust road or bridge,” or to a road or bridge where tolls are authorised to be taken in respect of “horses & carriages only,” & therefore the exemption, in that sect., of the county police from toll applied to the tolls which “the Northam Bridge & Roads Co.” were by their Act authorised to demand & take from persons passing, on foot or with horses or carriages, etc., over the bridge built by the co. across the River Itchen, at Northam, in the county of Southampton, or through the toll-gates erected by the co. on the roads made & maintained by them leading to the bridge.—*LONGLAND v. 723. Charcoal—Whether “firewood.”]—Charcoal is not firewood within the meaning of a statute, exempting firewood from the payment of toll at a turnpike.—TYLER v. BROWNING (1751), Say. 4; 96 E. R. 783.

724. Carts carrying manure.]—A cart drawn by horses laden with manure for the manurance of land is exempt from toll.—R. v. ADAMS (1817), 6 M. & S. 52; 105 E. R. 1162.

725. — — —.]—By a sect. of a turnpike Act, carriages laden with materials for repairing roads were exempted from toll in the parishes in which the materials were to be used, or were procured; & by the same sect., carriages laden with manure or lime were also exempted. By the following sect., the trustees under the Act were empowered to compound with persons residing in one parish & occupying lands in an adjoining parish:—Held: the exemption in favour of carriages laden with manure or lime was general, & not confined or restricted by the preceding part of the sect. containing the exemption, or by the following sect.—HICKINBOTHAM v. TUCKER (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 224; 39 L. J. M. C. 72; 22 L. T. 124; 34 J. P. 678.

727. — — — “Anything used in manuring land” —Lime.]—Under an exemption from toll in an Act of Parliament for carts carrying compost, etc., or anything whatever used in the manuring of land the carriage of lime is not exempt. The words “or anything whatsoever used in the manuring of land” were considered as only applying to the carriage of ploughs, harrows & such like instruments.—KING v. GOUGH (1773), 2 Chit. 655.

728. — — — Ploughs, harrows, etc.]—KING v. GOUGH, No. 727, ante.

729. — — — Carts going empty to fetch manure.]—An Act of Parliament, exempting carts, etc., loaded with manure from toll, exempts them from toll, if they are going empty to fetch manure.—HARRISON v. JAMES (1787), 2 Chit. 517.

730. — — — Material for—Partly for use & partly for sale.]—Uncrushed bones, which are taken through a turnpike to a farm, to be there crushed, & part of them there used as manure, & the residue to be afterwards sold, & to be used as manure at

732. — Carts containing manure & other articles—Empty vegetable baskets.]—The provision of stat. Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), ss. 28, 32, which exempts from toll on turnpike roads carriages employed only in carrying manure, & enacts that toll shall not be demanded for them "by reason only of any basket or baskets, empty sack or sacks, or spade, shovel, or fork necessary for loading or unloading such manure, etc., being in or upon any such carriage, etc.," is not repealed by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 18, s. 1, which enacts, that "no toll shall be demanded or taken on any turnpike road for or in respect of any horse, beast, cattle, or carriage, when employed in carrying or conveying only dung, soil, compost, or manure for land, save and except lime, & the necessary implements used for filling the manure, & the cloth that may have been used in covering any hay, clover, or straw which may have been conveyed." A person drove through a turnpike gate a cart laden with garden produce, packed in baskets, paying the toll, & returned the next morning with the cart laden with manure for land, on the top of which were the baskets empty:—Held: no toll was demandable on account of these baskets being on the cart.—RICHENS v. WIGGINS (1863), 3 B. & S. 953; 2 New Rep. 66; 32 L. J. M. C. 114; 8 L. T. 384; 27 J. P. 599; 9 Jur. N. S. 1055; 11 W. R. 617; 122 E. R. 356.

733. Cattle going to or returning from pasture—Horse ridden to fetch them from pasture.]—In a turnpike Act imposing tolls on horses, etc., "cattle going to or returning from pasture" & "horses attending cattle returning from pasture" are exempted:—Held: a horse, ridden by the owner of the cattle at pasture in order to fetch them from pasture did not come within either of the exemptions.—HARRISON v. BROUGH (1796), 6 Term Rep. 706; 101 E. R. 783.

Annotation:—Refd. Norris v. Poate (1825), 3 Bing. 41.

734. — Cattle driven from one pasture to another.]—1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 25, s. 1, enacts that "no toll shall be demanded or taken for any horse, sheep, or other beast or cattle going to or from water or pasture, etc., & passing on any turnpike road, provided that such horse, etc., do not pass upon such turnpike road more than the space of two miles in going to or returning from water or pasture." A., who carried on the business of a farmer & cattle-dealer, had two pasture-fields, one on each side of a toll-bar. Having purchased beasts & sheep at a market, he drove them to the one pasture, & after keeping them there a day, drove them through the toll-bar to the other pasture, intending the next day to send them to another market on that side of the bar, for sale.

The distance between the two pastures along the turnpike-road was less than two miles:—Held: the animals were exempt from toll.—WARMBY v. DEAKIN (1863), 14 C. B. N. S. 124; 2 New Rep. 75; 32 L. J. M. C. 201; 8 L. T. 319; 10 Jur. N. S. 98; 11 W. R. 669; 143 E. R. 392.

735. Material for repair of highway—Whether repair of bridge included.]—A bridge is not a highway within 13 Geo. 3, c. 81, s. 60, by which carriages employed in carrying materials for the repair of any turnpike road or public highway, are exempted from toll; & therefore toll is payable for a carriage employed in carrying materials for the repair of a bridge along a turnpike road.—OSMOND v. WIDDICOMBE (1818), 2 B. & Ald. 40; 106 E. R. 285.

736. — Whether repair of public footway included.]—(1) Where a road has been found to have been used for a length of time as a footway to the adjoining lands:—Held: it was a public highway, & under Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 32, materials for the repair of same are exempt from tolls.

(2) When under a local Act cos. had power to convert streets within their districts into public highways, & to pave, flag, & maintain same, & were entitled to bring materials for that purpose free of tolls:—Held: they were entitled to bring materials to repair such streets before these were declared public highways, if they had previously been used as highways either for foot passengers only or for carriage traffic generally.—R. v. LORD (1855), 4 W. R. 83.

737. — Whether other goods wares & merchandise.]—(1) Where, by an Act of Parliament for substituting a new channel, "the Eau Brink cut," for the old course of an ancient navigable river, the comrs. were empowered to levy certain tolls for the navigation of the new cut on certain enumerated articles, & "other goods, wares, & merchandise":—Held: gravel destined for the reparation of certain adjacent turnpike roads was liable to toll, though not specified, by virtue of the general words.

(2) Where by a turnpike Act, the trustees were empowered to "make use of any public or parish drains leading to or near their roads, or any ditch contiguous to them for the conveyance in boats of materials for the reparation of the roads, & to hale on the brinks of such drains or ditches, & also to have free passage over certain bridges therein named, for all horses, carts, & carriages bringing or going for such materials without paying any toll for same":—Held: the drains therein contemplated were such as might be thereafter cut, & the Eau Brink cut was not a public or parish drain within the meaning of that sect.; but merely a new channel for the old river. COULTON v. AMBLER (1841), 13 M. & W. 403; 3 Ry. & Can. Cas. 724; 14 L. J. Ex. 10; 9 J. P. 153.

738. "Implements of husbandry"—Steam engine - For working threshing machine - Though capable of other use.]—Under Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 32, & 14 & 15 Vict. c. 38, s. 4, a steam engine used exclusively for working a threshing machine belonging to the same owner, & passing a turnpike gate at the same time with the threshing machine, but in a separate cart, is exempted from toll as an implement of husbandry. Although the steam engine be capable of being applied to other purposes.—It. v. MALTY (1858), 8 E. & B. 712; 27 L. J. M. C. 59; 30 L. T. O. S. 256; 22 J. P. 575; 4 Jur. N. S. 237; 6 W. R. 213; 120 E. R. 265.

739. — — For working plough.]—By Locomotive Act, 1861 (c. 70), s. 1, tolls are imposed on "every locomotive propelled by any power containing within itself the machinery for its own propulsion"; by sect. 10 all carriages drawn by any locomotive are entitled to the same exemption as they would be if drawn by animal power; & by sect. 12 all provisions of any general or local Acts relating to turnpike roads are to apply to all locomotives propelled by other than animal power, & to carriages drawn by such locomotive. By Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 32, "no toll shall be demanded . . . for any horse, or beast, or carriage employed in carrying or conveying . . . any ploughs, harrows, or implements of husbandry, or for any horses or other beasts employed in husbandry, going to or returning from plough or harrow, not travelling more than two miles on the turnpike road." A locomotive engine, propelled by its own steam power, having on it gear necessary for working a plough, passed through a turnpike gate on its way to a place more than three miles from the gate, to drive a plough which, from its construction, could not be used without a steam engine & gear:—Held: the steam engine was not within any of the above exemptions from toll. SKINNER v. VINGER (1873), 1 L. R. 9 Q. B. 199; 43 L. J. M. C. 49; 38 J. P. 534.

740. — For use by others than owner.]—A local turnpike Act declared that no exemption should be allowed in respect of "any agricultural implement or machine let to hire or travelling for the purpose of being used by any other person than the owner thereof." Resp.'s threshing machine was taken by his men to another person's farm, there to be worked by them for the purpose of threshing such person's corn at so much per quarter. On its way thither it passed through a turnpike gate which was within the district governed by the Act:—Held: the threshing machine was liable to toll.—RAPLEY v. RICHARDS (1861), 4 New Rep. 238; 28 J. P. 486; 12 W. R. 804.

741. — Threshing machine - Local Act overriding general Act.]—Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 4, enacted that all its provisions should extend to all turnpike Acts that should be thereafter passed, except as to things expressly referred to & varied by such Acts: & sect. 32, that all implements of husbandry should be exempt from toll. By 9 Geo. 4, c. 77, s. 19, it was provided that Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), shall extend to every local Act as fully as if it were re-enacted in such Act. By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 38, s. 4, it was provided that implements of husbandry, when mentioned in the Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), should include threshing machines. By a local Act it was provided in the interpretation clause that cart should include threshing machine; & in a subsequent sect., which was the only sect., in the Act to which this interpretation could apply, that a toll of 6d. should be payable on every horse drawing a cart:—Held: the local Act did expressly refer to & vary the provisions of the general Act, & threshing machines were liable to toll. Semble: any provisions in a local Act repugnant to those in the general Act would override them, even though not expressly referring to the things & matters in the general Act.—ABLETT v. PRITCHARD (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 210; Har. & Ruth. 274; 35 L. J. M. C. 101; 14 L. T. 16; 30 J. P. 108; 12 Jur. N. S. 211; 14 W. R. 331.

742. "Fodder for cattle"—Barley meal or barley to be ground for pig-food.]—Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 32, enacts "that no toll shall be demanded or taken" on any turnpike road, for "any horse, beast or other cattle or carriage employed in carrying or conveying, having been employed only in carrying or conveying on the same day," "any hay, straw, fodder for cattle, & corn in the straw, which has grown or arisen on land or ground in the occupation of the owner of any such hay, straw, fodder or corn in the straw, potatoes or other agricultural produce, & which has not been bought, sold or disposed of, nor is going to be sold or disposed of." A horse & cart passed through a toll gate, carrying threshed barley, which had grown on land in the occupation of the owner, to a mill to be ground into meal for feeding the owner's pigs. They repassed on the same day laden with barley-meal obtained from the mill, the produce of another parcel of barley grown by the same owner on the same land, & previously sent to be ground into meal for the same purpose. The horse & cart had not been employed in any other way on the same day:—Held: they were exempt from toll under the above enactment on each journey: for both the barley & the barley-meal came within the description of "fodder for cattle."—(CLEMENTS v. SMITH (1860), 3 E. & B. 238; 30 L. J. M. C. 16; 3 L. T. 295; 25 J. P. 246; 6 Jur. N. S. 1149; 9 W. R. 53; 121 E. R. 431.

743. "Agricultural produce"—Milk.]—Milk does not come within the meaning of the words "or other agricultural produce," in Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 32, so as to be exempt from toll.—ORAM v. GAIT (1860), 1 L. T. 326; 24 J. P. 70.

744. "Timber"—Larch poles for hurdles.]—A local turnpike Act authorised a certain toll to be levied on carts laden with timber. R. was driving a cart having larch poles about twenty feet long & ten inches medium circumference to be used for making hurdles, but they were not of twenty years' growth. The turnpike trustees had for ten or twelve years at their toll gates demanded & received the toll for such larch poles, as if they were timber, & there was no other evidence beyond that mentioned of what timber meant:—Held: the justices were justified in drawing the inference that the poles were timber, or at all events this ct. could not hold they were wrong in doing so.—ROBERTS v. LEWIS (1870), 43 J. P. 348.

745. Stage waggon—Defined.]—A local turnpike Act authorised a toll to be taken for stage waggons conveying goods for pay or reward:—Held: a waggon delivering, at various & uncertain places, for pay, goods from a wharf to which they were brought by canal at various & uncertain times, was not a stage waggon, & a stage waggon was to be considered one which went & returned at regular & stated periods, to & from one certain known place & another.—R. v. PEARSON (1838), 2 J. P. 423.

746. — Whether includes carrier's van.]—A turnpike Act contained a clause giving certain exemptions from toll, but excepted from it, by a proviso, all horses drawing any stage coach, diligence, van, caravan, or stage waggon, or other stage carriage, conveying passengers or goods for pay. R. was a wharfinger & agent to a co., who were carriers of goods by canal. R. kept waggons & horses, which he employed in carrying out goods brought by the company to his wharf, situate at S., for persons in the neighbourhood, & bringing goods from the neighbourhood to his wharf, for transit by the canal. For such his conveyance of goods he made charges on each parcel. His waggons were so employed in carrying goods to & from persons residing at or near a place called L., or places intermediate between that & S., almost every day except Sundays. The waggons went out & returned at different hours according to circumstances; on some days they made more journeys than on others, & they seldom omitted going altogether. R. had no office or receiving house at L.:—Held: R.'s waggons were not stage waggons or carriages within the terms of the proviso, & therefore were not excluded from the exempting clause.—R. v. RUSCOE (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 386; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 428; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 435; 7 L. J. M. C. 94; 2 Jur. 888; 112 E. R. 884.

747. ———— Used for goods & for passengers.—By a local turnpike Act, all persons were exempted from payment of toll more than once on the same day, except in respect of "stage coaches & other such public carriages." Itesp. was a common carrier, passing to & from along the road three days a week, with a light covered tilted van on four wheels, drawn by one horse; he principally used the van for the carriage of goods, but he sometimes carried passengers at fixed rates; the cart was not licensed, but paid a duty of £2 6s. 8d., under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 90:—Held: resp. was not liable to pay more than one toll a day, as although he sometimes carried passengers, the cart was not principally employed for that purpose, & therefore did not come within the meaning of the clause "stage coaches & other such public carriages."—PEARSON v. TAZEWELL (1865), 19 C. B. N. S. 384; 13 L. T. 158; 30 J. P. 150; 14 W. R. 39; 144 E. R. 835.

748. ———— By a local turnpike Act the following tolls were imposed, amongst others: "A. For every horse drawing any coach, caravan, or other such light carriage, except stage coaches, 4d. B. For every horse drawing any stage coach licensed to carry not more than sixteen passengers, 5d.; & licensed to carry more than sixteen passengers, 6½d. C. For every horse drawing any van or other such carriage for the conveyance of goods for hire or pay, 6½d. D. For every horse drawing any caravan or other such carriage, licensed to carry passengers for hire, at the same rate as stage coaches carrying the same number of passengers." & a subsequent clause provided that only one full toll should be taken for passing & repassing on the same day. A., a carrier, was the owner of a four-wheeled van, in which he journeyed on certain days, & at stated times, between Bath & Chippenham, "carrying goods occasionally, & passengers occasionally, & sometimes both," for payment. He paid the annual duty of £2 6s. 8d. imposed by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 90, Sched. D. "for every carriage used by any common carrier principally & bonâ fide for & in the carrying of goods, wares, or merchandises, whereby he shall seek a livelihood, where such carriage shall be occasionally only used in conveying passengers for hire, & in such manner that the stage-carriage duty, or any composition for the same, shall not be payable under any licence by the comrs. of inland revenue"—Held: A. was not chargeable with return toll, as the proprietor of a "stage carriage," under sect. 9 of the local Act, which provided that "for or in respect of the horses drawing any stage-coach, stage-waggon, van, caravan, cart, or other stage-carriage for the conveyance of passengers for payment, hire, or reward, for which toll should have been paid, & which should return on the same day through the same turnpike gate or bar, the tolls thereby made payable should be paid for every time of passing & repassing through every such gate or bar, in like manner as if no toll had been before paid thereat."—EATWELL v. RICHMOND (1865), 18 C. B. N. S. 364; 5 New Rep. 329; 12 L. T. 52; 13 W. R. 429; 144 E. R. 485.

749. ———— By a local turnpike Act, the following tolls, amongst others, were imposed: "For every horse or other beast drawing any coach, stage coach, diligence, van, caravan, sociable, berlin, landau, chariot, vis-à-vis, barouche phaeton, chaise-marine, calash, curricule, chair, gig, whiskey, hearse, litter, chaise, or other such like carriage, 9d.: For every horse or other beast drawing any waggon, wain, cart, or other such like carriage, having the fellos of the wheels thereof of the breadth of six inches or upwards at the bottom or soles thereof, 6d." & a subsequent clause provided that one toll only should be paid for passing & re-passing on the same day. A., a carrier, was the owner of a covered caravan, the single toll on which was admitted to be 6d., with which he travelled between Cirencester & Cheltenham every Tuesday & Thursday, at a pace not exceeding four miles an hour. He used his caravan principally for carrying goods, for hire, but he frequently, as he did upon the occasion in question, conveyed therein also passengers, for hire. He was not licensed under the Stage Carriage Act, 1832 (c. 120), but paid the duty imposed by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 90, Sched. D., "for every carriage used by any common carrier principally & bonâ fide for & in the carrying of goods, wares, or merchandises, whereby he shall seek a livelihood, where such carriage shall be occasionally only used in conveying passengers for hire, & in such manner that the stage carriage duty, or any composition for the same, shall not be payable under any licence by the comrs. of inland revenue":—Held: A. was the proprietor of a "stage carriage conveying goods for pay or reward," within sect. 11 of the local Act, which provided that "the tolls thereby made payable for or in respect of horses or beasts drawing any stage-coach, diligence, van, caravan, or stage-waggon, or other stage-carriage conveying passengers or goods for pay or reward, shall be payable & paid every time of passing or re-passing along the road"; & therefore liable to the return-toll.—*COMLEY v. 753. Spring-van.—Whether “carriage” or “cart.”—How determined.—Size, weight & purpose.—A local turnpike Act put a lower toll on horses drawing coaches, sociables, chariots, curricles, gigs, whiskeys, caravans, hearses, & such like carriages; & a higher toll on waggons, wains, drays, carts, & such like carriages. A brewer's cart or van used for delivering beer was on springs, & weighed about 1 ton. On a dispute as to toll: Held: the justices were wrong in holding that the fact of its being on springs put it in the first class, & they ought to consider the size, weight & purpose of the vehicle, but neither of these facts was conclusive, though all were elements for determining under which class it was to be ranked. *SMITH v. 754. 758. Railway carriages & trucks—Travelling along railway.—Sect. 23 of a local Act for the paving of Cambridge, authorised the imposition of a rate on the inhabitants for the purposes of the Act, & by sect. 39 enacted that there should be paid to the receiver appointed thereunder “for stage coaches & diligences, & also for all loaded waggons, carts, wains, & other carriages, & also for horses laden with any goods, wares, merchandise, or other commodities coming to or going from or out of the town of Cambridge & precincts thereof, the following tolls once in every day, namely, for every stage coach, diligence, or other such public carriage carrying passengers or parcels for hire, the sum of 1s. . . . which sums respectively shall & may be demanded & taken for & in the name of a paving toll, . . . & the moneys arising therefrom shall be & are hereby vested in the comrs., . . . & it shall & may be lawful . . . to levy same . . . by distress of any carriage or carriages or cattle, upon which such tolls are by this Act imposed, . . . & which several tolls so to be demanded, taken, & received shall be paid to such person or persons so to be appointed collectors thereof as aforesaid, within any of the streets or other public passages of the town of ‘Cambridge’”:—Held: this sect. applied only to carriages in actual motion upon the public highways & streets of the town, & not to carriages & trucks conveying passengers or goods along a railway within the local limits of the Act, but not an actual highway or street of the town in the ordinary sense of those terms.—*NEWMARKET RY. 759. Waggonette.—Whether a carriage.—A local turnpike Act in sub-sect. 5 put a toll of 6d. on “every coach, etc., or other carriage drawn by two horses,” & in sub-sect. 7 of the same sect. a toll of 8d. on “every waggon, van, cart, or other such carriage, with wheels of less breadth than three inches, drawn by one horse.” A waggonette with two horses was driven by M., & if it had had a single horse would clearly have come within sub-sect. 7:—Held: the justices were wrong in holding the waggonette exempt, for it was a carriage, & so came within sub-sect. 5.—WILLIAMS v. MOORE (1878), 43 J. P. 589.

Delivery cart.—Whether “exposing goods for sale.”—A mineral water cart used for delivery of goods from a distant manufactory to customers in an urban district, in which a local Act was in force, was not liable to a toll imposed by such local Act upon every cart “used for exposing or in which shall be exposed to sale any article, commodity or thing” brought into any public

Toll levied on goods—According to number of horses employed—Alteration in vehicle immaterial.—Where it appeared in evidence upon an action of indebitatus assumpsit for toll that a corp'n. were entitled by a general grant of toll explained by usage to be due for all commercial goods passing in & out of their city on horses or in carts or waggons, that is at the rate of 1d. for every horse load, & 2d. for every cart load drawn by one horse, & 2d. more for each additional horse: —Held: any alteration of the carriage by which the goods were so conveyed as by taking them in stage coaches instead of carts or waggons could not vary the right of toll in the proportion of 2d. for each horse drawing the coach although the number of horses were estimated by the weight of passengers rather than of goods. — (CARLISLE CORPN. v. 763. Toll levied according to breadth of wheels. — A local turnpike Act imposed specific tolls on carriages in proportion to the breadth of their wheels, such tolls being increased in proportion to the narrowness of the wheels, & being highest where the wheels were of less breadth than six inches: — Held: the carriages subject to such tolls were exempted from the additional toll imposed by the latter part of sect. 23 of 13 Geo. 3, c. 81, & the local Act virtually repealed that sect. — (RIDGE v. GARLICK (1818), 8 Taunt. 421; 2 Moore, C. P. 481; 129 E. R. 447).

DAVIS (1834), 1 Bing. N. C. 141; 4 Moo. & S. 683; 3 L. J. C. P. 268; 131 E. R. 1071).

765. — A local turnpike Act put a toll of 3d. on every horse drawing a cart, etc., & provided that if the wheel was more than six inches broad, one-half only of such toll should be taken. The Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 7, says if the wheel is less than four & a half inches, one-half more toll is to be taken than where the wheel is six inches: — Held: a cart with one horse having a wheel less than four & a half inches was bound to pay only 3d. — (BEERLING v. TERRY (1802), 6 L. T. 186; 26 J. P. 676).

SUB-SECT. 8.—EVASION OF.

766. Remedy—Distress for penalty—Validity of warrant. — (1) Pltf. was convicted under the Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), for forcibly passing through a toll gate situate on a turnpike road, made under the authority of a local Act, & thereby avoiding the toll due. Pltf. refused to pay the sum in which he was convicted & a warrant of distress against his goods was issued. The conviction contained no adjudication of the payment of the penalty: — Held: it was not therefore bad, since it followed the form given in the schedule to Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126).

(2) The conviction stated the toll gate to be situate on a turnpike road: the warrant stated only the toll gate to be situate in the particular parish & county, omitting the turnpike road: — Held: no variance; (3) the warrant was not void for not stating that the toll gate was situate on a turnpike road; (4) no demand of the penalty was requisite previously to issuing the warrant of distress under Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 141. — (BARNES v. WHITE (1815), 1 C. B. 192; 1 New Sess. Cas. 501; 11 L. J. M. C. 65; 4 L. T. O. S. 333; 9 Jur. 182; 135 E. R. 511).

767. — Penalty—Whether for peaceful evasion—Claim of exemption. — Qu.: whether Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 139, which imposes a forfeiture not exceeding £10 upon any person who "shall pass through any turnpike gate" "without paying the toll appointed to be paid at such gate," be applicable to a party passing without violence through a turnpike gate, & not paying the toll, though demanded, under an erroneous impression that he is exempt from toll. — (R. v. IRVING (1818), 12 Q. B. 429; 11 L. T. O. S. 219; 12 Jur. 498; 12 J. P. Jo. 358; 116 E. R. 928).

768. — Action—Misrepresentation by driver of vehicle—Toll not demanded. — An action of debt for turnpike tolls lies where debt, has frequently passed through the gate, misrepresenting facts, which led the collector to believe he was not entitled to receive toll, & consequently demanded no toll at the times debt, passed through.

Deft., an hotel keeper, attempted to avoid the payment of toll by taking passengers in his omnibus free, & charging for the carriage of their luggage by a spring-cart. On the first occasion to toll was demanded & paid under protest, but was afterwards returned: — Held: it was not necessary to maintain the action to prove a demand of toll every time the vehicle passed through the gate; or, if a demand were necessary, there was evidence to show an evasion of the demand.

I am not disposed to say that a demand on each occasion of debt's passing through the turnpike gate was necessary. I am inclined to think the board stating the tolls payable, is sufficient; but if a demand be necessary, there was sufficient evasion shown here to dispense with it. The Act provided for toll, & contained the usual exemption clause, that toll should not be demanded for any carriage, etc., which should only cross the road, & which should not pass more than one hundred yards thereon: Held: this exemption did not extend to a case, where more than one hundred yards had been passed on the road, including so much as had been passed on the part repaired by the county; although the trustees of the road did not contribute to the county repairs.—*BUSSEY v. between the council & trustees, & the council's proportion was to be paid out of the borough improvement rate; & the portion of the road within the borough was, after such payment, to be free from the payment of the mtge. debt on such road, & should no longer form any part of the roads belonging to the trust. The council had removed the toll-gates within the borough, & set up toll-gates beyond the borough, but had not paid any part of the mtge. debt on the tolls:—Held: a person passing with a horse & gig along the portion of the turnpike road within the borough, being more than one hundred yards, & then passing for a considerable distance along a public highway not a part of the turnpike road, & then entering again the turnpike road through a side gate, merely to cross the turnpike road, was not exempted from payment of toll at such side gate, on the ground that the distance he would have to cross would be less than one hundred yards.—*R. v. He could not by any other route have gone to the town without becoming liable to pay turnpike tolls:—Held: assuming that V. used this route because by using any other he would become liable to pay toll, this was not an evasion of payment of toll within Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 41, but a successful arrangement to avoid becoming liable to payment.

He then, with a horse & carriage, having passed more than one hundred yards along the turnpike road, with the intention to avoid paying the toll, passed through one gap over the road on his own land, & back again by the other gap into the turnpike road, & then passed more than one hundred yards along the turnpike road:—Held: resp. came within the exception in sect. 41, & was not liable to a penalty for evading the toll.—*HARDING v. By the local Act a horse was entitled to pass four times in one day for one toll. H. refused to pay for the horses in the timber drag, & the justices convicted him of evading toll under Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 41:—Held: there was evidence to sustain the conviction, & conviction affirmed accordingly.—*HARTLEY v. 779. — Leaving carriage on highway—Journey continued on foot.]—By Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 41, it is provided that if any person shall leave upon a turnpike road any horse, cattle, beast, or carriage whatsoever, by reason whereof the payment of any tolls or duties shall be avoided or lessened, he shall forfeit any sum not exceeding £5. A. was driven by his coachman from his house along a turnpike road up to but not through a turnpike gate. A. then got out & walked through the gate to a railway station beyond it, & went away by a train, & his coachman drove the carriage back to his house:—Held: A. had not left his carriage upon the road within the Act, & had not therefore incurred the penalty imposed.—STANLEY v. MORTLOCK (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 497; 39 L. J. M. C. 150; 22 L. T. 758; 18 W. R. 1130.

SUB-SECT. 9.—EXTINGUISHMENT.

780. By statute.]—A turnpike Act passed in 1815 provided that "no toll should be demanded or taken of or from any of the inhabitants of the town of S. at any toll gate or toll bar to be erected in the town." In 1838 the turnpike trustees removed a turnpike gate, which since 1815 had stood in the town, to a site without the town, & twelve hundred yards distant from its old position. At that time & for several years afterwards there was not any house on either side of the road between the old & the new site of the gate; but within the last few years some fifty or sixty detached or semi-detached houses had been built, some on one & some on the other side of the road, between the two sites, but the houses were not contiguous or continuous, there being arable & other fields, & a reservoir, etc., intervening. From 1838 until June, 1878, the inhabitants of the town of S. had been in the habit of passing through the gate without paying toll, & on applt., an inhabitant of the town, driving through the gate in Aug. 1878, toll was demanded from him by resps., the toll collectors, & was paid under protest by applt., who subsequently laid a complaint before the magistrates against resps. for unlawfully demanding & taking toll from him as an inhabitant of the town of S. The magistrates, after hearing the evidence on both sides & personally inspecting the locus in quo, found, as a fact, that "there was not any collection of houses at the toll gate, nor a continuous series of houses from the old to the present site of the gate, & the gate did not, at the time of its erection or of the complaint, stand within the town of S.," & they accordingly dismissed the complaint; & on appeal therefrom it was:—Held: (1) dismissing the appeal, the question, whether within a town or not within a town was a question of fact for the determination of the magistrates, & the magistrates having found that the gate was not within the town, the cts. were not at liberty to go behind that finding, but must treat it as a question of fact on which the magistrates had jurisdiction to determine, & had determined, for themselves. But the cts. also expressed their opinion that, having regard to the facts of the case, the finding of the magistrates was right in point of fact; (2) the omission of the trustees to demand toll for a period of forty years established no right in the public to exemption, which nothing but an Act of Parliament could create or sanction; nor had the trustees any right or power to exempt any person, or class of persons, from payment of the toll except those expressly exempted by the Act.

Within the last few years there has been a great deal of building within the neighbourhood between the spot where the old toll-bar stood & the place where it was erected in 1838. If the effect of those building operations had been such as to bring the toll-bar within the town of Sutton, though it was not so in 1838, I should have been of opinion that applt., being an inhabitant of the town of Sutton, was entitled to exemption from the toll, on the ground that the toll-gate was within the town though it was not at the time of its removal. In my opinion a town grows with the buildings, & wherever it can be said that the buildings have advanced to such an extent that that which was formerly without the town is now within it, the exemption will apply to that part of the town so newly added (HAWKINS, J.).—DEARDS v. GOLDSMITH (1870), 40 L. T. 328.

Merger—Prescriptive right merging in statutory right.]—A municipal corpn. having a prescriptive right to take certain customary tolls for the passage of carriages, cattle, etc., over a bridge belonging to them, obtained in 1734 a local Act which, after reciting their right to take the customary tolls, enacted that the customary tolls should be & remain vested in them, & empowered them to take the tolls, with a variation as to the exemption of freemen of the borough. In 1810 the corpn. obtained another local Act which repealed the former Act & empowered them to take down the old bridge & build a new one & to take tolls which varied from the old tolls in amount & subject-matter. This Act was temporary & had expired: Held: the prescriptive right to take tolls had been merged in & extinguished by the statutory right given in 1734, & neither had nor could have been revived by the later Act, & the right to take tolls expired with the later Act. — *NEW WINDSOR CORPN. v. (1) When a road has been found to be a high road on an indictment against a parish for not repairing it, the parish is not excused from putting it into good & substantial repair, by the circumstance that it is little used & has never been repaired with hard materials, that it passes into another parish which denies it to be a highway, & that it is of no use to repair the part in one parish until the liability of the adjoining parish has been determined.

It cannot be contended that because it has never been repaired the parish is exempt from the duty of repairing when from want of repair it has become impassable (COLERIDGE, J.).

(2) The ct. will not prescribe the mode of repair; & if the sum sworn to had appeared to have been calculated only to meet a particular mode, it would not have been governed by the calculation. It is sworn, however, & it is not denied, that £151 will be necessary to put the road into a substantial state of repair. Under the circumstances, therefore, I think this fine ought to be imposed; but I think it will be not improper to stay the execution until the first day of Michaelmas term next, to enable the parish to repair effectually. If it shall then appear that this has been done, the fine may be modified; if not it will be levied (COLERIDGE, J.).—R. v. CLAXBY (INHABITANTS) (1855),

800. — Lapse of right—Under Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 27).]—An Inclosure Act directed the comrs. to set out land for getting stone, etc., for repairing the parish roads, which should be vested in the surveyors of highways & their successors, & enacted that all the grass & herbage growing, arising, & renewing on the roads & on the land to be set out & appointed for getting stone, etc., should belong to & be the property of the persons to whom the comrs. should allot the same, exclusive of all other persons whomsoever, or should be applied to some parochial or other use or purpose. The comrs. in pursuance of the Act, awarded, set out, allotted & appointed to the surveyors of highways & their successors an allotment No. 158, containing 1 acre, save & except the grass & herbage thereof, upon trust & for the purpose of getting stone, etc., for repairing the roads, & they awarded, set out, allowed & assigned to P. & his heirs contiguous allotments, No. 157 & No. 159, together with the grass & herbage of No. 158; they also ordered & directed that the grass & herbage growing, arising, & renewing on the public roads & ways should be let from year to year, & the moneys arising thereby be applied to the repair of the highway, etc. The surveyors obtained gravel for the highways from No. 158 down to the year 1813, when they discontinued to do so, & purchased gravel from pits in the neighbouring parishes; & thenceforth until 1838 they never entered upon or exercised in No. 158 any right under the award. In 1813, P. built a cottage &

801. ————.]—A gravel pit & a road to it were allotted by comrs. under an Inclosure Act to the surveyors of highways of a hamlet for the repair of its roads & ways. From 1837 to 1863 the surveyors ceased to take gravel from the pit or to use the road, & took no steps to assert their right to the pit or road, but got gravel for the repair of the highways from another pit two miles off, which they purchased from time to time from pltf.'s father & from pltf. The land allotted for the road & gravel pit was entirely surrounded by old enclosures belonging & land allotted to pltf.'s predecessors in title. In 1837 the tenant of the greater part of the land in which the pit was situated filled up part of the pit, & from that time cultivated the surface as arable land, together with the adjacent parts of the field. In 1839 another tenant ploughed up the remaining portion of the pit, which abutted upon land in his occupation, & also the allotted road, which passed through other land in his occupation; & both continued to be cultivated by pltf.'s tenants as arable land from that time till 1863. In 1844 the tenant of pltf., who was in occupation of the surface of the greater part of the pit, was elected one of the surveyors of the highways, & held that office for one year. On a special case giving the ct. power to draw inferences of fact:—Held: (1) actual possession of the gravel pit & road was taken by the tenants of the adjoining lands in 1837 & 1839, & therefore the title of the surveyors of highways to the gravel pit & road had, by sects. 2, 3, of above Act become extinguished; (2) the circumstance of the tenant occupying part of the pit being elected surveyor of highways after possession had been taken of it, did not interrupt the running of the period of limitation, as the character of his possession as tenant under pltf. was not altered during his year of office.—SMITH v. STOCKS (1869), 10 B. & S. 701; 38 L. J. Q. B. 306; 20 L. T. 740; 34 J. P. 181; 17 W. R. 1135.

The purchase money was paid into ct., the dividends thereon being paid to the surveyor for the time being. Board, the money might be paid out to the council under Lands

The highway board in whom were vested the powers of surveyor of highways, applied to justices at a special sessions to fix the price at which the pit should be sold. The justices by order consented to the sale of the pit, & fixed the price at £450, which, owing to special circumstances, a gentleman in the parish was willing to give for it. It appeared that £135 6s. 6d. was a fair & reasonable price, as between the highway board & applt. & the £450 a reasonable price having regard to the interests of the parish only:—Held: (1) under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 105, there was an appeal against the order to the quarter sessions; (2) the justices were bound to fix the price of the pit fairly as between the adjoining owner & the parish, & not with regard to the interests of the parish exclusively; & the smaller sum was the proper price.—*R. v. 807. ———.]—A surveyor of highways cannot justify a trespass, under a prescriptive right, or a custom, to take stones from the waste, whether adjoining the sea-shore between high & low water mark, or otherwise, for the purpose of repairing the highways of the parish. Scmble: it would be a good justification to plead such a prescriptive right in the inhabitants of the parish alleging that the surveyor was one of the inhabitants.—PADWICK v. KNIGHT (1852), 7 Exch. 851; 22 L. J. Ex. 198; 19 L. T. O. S. 206; 16 J. P. Jo. 437; 155 E. R. 1196.

808. ———.]—To an action of trespass for breaking & entering certain land of ptff., being part of the sea-shore between high & low water mark in or adjoining the township of O., & taking gravel, stones, sand, etc., defts. pleaded several pleas of justification, some setting up a right in the inhabitants of the township of O. to take the gravel, etc., to be used for the cultivation & improvement of their land; others claiming it for the necessary repairs of the highways in the township; others setting up a prescriptive right under a thirty or sixty years' user respectively; & others claiming to exercise the right, as parish officer, for the repair of the highways :—Held: the pleas were bad: for that, so far as they were capable of being construed as justifying under a custom, such custom would be void, being a claim of a profit à prendre in alieno solo, which can only exist by grant or prescription; & that, if the claim were founded on prescription, it would be equally bad, inasmuch as it was a claim by persons, who, not being a corporation, were incapable of taking by grant, & not being claimed in a que estate.—CONSTABLE v. NICHOLSON (1863), 14 C. B. N. S. 230; 2 New Rep. 76; 32 L. J. C. P. 240; 11 W. R. 698; 143 E. R. 434.

809. Right to take stone from beach above highwater mark.—Whether claimable by custom.]—(1) A special custom to take shingle from the beach above high water mark for the repairing of the highways of the parish, is bad as to such portion of the beach as is private property, being a custom of a profit à prendre in another man's land.

812. ———.]—Mountain sheep-walk in Wales.]—Ptff., claiming to be the owner of a mountain in Wales, sought to restrain deft. council from obtaining stone for highway repair from it. Defts. claimed the right to obtain the stone as from "waste land or common ground," under above sect., & also disputed ptff.'s title. Ptff. proved no paper title to the land, but proved that she was the owner of certain farms adjoining the mountain, & had long been accustomed to let to the tenants of these farms rights of grazing sheep on the mountain, a particular part of the mountain being appropriated for this purpose to each farm. There was no evidence of any title to the soil of the mountain in the Crown or in any person other than ptff. :—Held: ptff. had sufficiently proved ownership of the mountain to sustain the action, & the mountain was not waste land or common ground.—SCOTT v. TOWYN RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1907), 5 L. G. R. 1050.

813. ———.]—River flowing through inclosed land.]—The provisions of above sect., empowering a highway authority to obtain road-making materials in any "waste land or common ground, river or brook" without a justice's licence, do not extend to the gathering of materials from the bed of a river running through inclosed land.—*ALLINSON v. 814. ———.]—Discretion of justices to make order.]—By above sect., power is given to a surveyor of highways to get & carry away gravel, etc., in any waste land or common ground.

Appls. having refused leave to resps. to take gravel from a common, the latter applied to justices, who made an order under Commons Act, 1876 (c. 56), s. 20, on the express ground that the sect. only gave them power to prescribe the conditions under which the right given by Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 51, was to be exercised, & that they had therefore no discretion to refuse altogether to make an order :—Held: the decision of the justices was wrong, & they had absolute discretion, under Commons Act, 1876 (c. 56), s. 20, to make or refuse to make an order.—*HAYES COMMON CONSERVATORS v. But it seems to be competent to pltf. in such action to show that the making of such new road over his land was maliciously or wantonly done by the surveyors, & not for the necessary or convenient carriage of the materials over the land for the purposes of the Act; & in such case he would not be concluded by the amends tendered or paid into ct. — *BOYFIELD v. #### SECT. 4.—CONTRACTS FOR REPAIR OF HIGHWAYS.

830. Disqualification from contracting—Whether member of local highway authority included.—Notwithstanding Local Government Act, 1891 (c. 73), s. 25, a rural district councillor is not a surveyor of highways nor subject to penalties under sect. 46 of the Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), for letting to hire a team to be used in repairing highways within the district of the council of which he is a member without any licence in writing from two justices of the peace, & for receiving payment from the council in respect thereof. — BUCKLEY v. HANSON (1898), 77 L. T. 664; 62 J. P. 119; 42 Sol. Jo. 198; 18 Cox. C. C. 688, D. C.

831. Effect of adoption of Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 97)—Work done within two months of adopting resolution.—Pltf. & defts. entered into a contract whereby pltf. agreed to supply gravel & execute repairs of roads in defts.' district.

In a portion of defts.' district a resolution to adopt above Act was passed on Mar. 24, 1886, & after the lapse of two months, as required by the provisions of the Act, had the force of law. Pltf. sued defts. for cost of gravel supplied & repairs executed on the roads in such portion during the two months. Defts. disputed their liability:—Held: defts. were liable. — DRIVER v. KINGSTON HIGHWAY BOARD (1871), 24 L. T. 480; 35 J. P. 696; 20 W. R. 20.

832. Stamp duty—"Contract relating to maintaining & repairing of highways"—Agreement as to payment of contribution due by district council.—On Nov. 28, 1897, an agreement was made between applts. & the urban district council of F., whereby the payment for the year ending Mar. 1898, in pursuance of the Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), towards the cost of maintenance, & repair & reasonable improvement connected with the maintenance & repair of all main roads within the district of the urban council, was fixed at a certain sum. The money was to be paid in four instalments, & there was a proviso that nothing, except as expressly declared, should alter the rights & liabilities of the parties thereto:—Held: this was not an agreement made pursuant to the Highway Acts for or relating to the making, maintaining, & repairing of highways, which would only require a 6d. stamp, but that it was made under the Local Government Act, & came under the heading "deed of any kind whatsoever not described in the schedule" of the Stamp Act, & so required a 10s. stamp. — *CUMBERLAND COUNTY COUNCIL v. Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 68, by which highways are vested in the local board, shall mean "any highway repairable by the inhabitants at large":—Held: the words "repairable by the inhabitants at large" are used in contradistinction to repairable by individuals ratione tenuræ; & on demurrer to a declaration alleging it was the duty of a local board to repair a public footpath, it must be taken that it was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.—*GIBSON v. 835. Whether street necessarily included—South Wales.]—The comrs. appointed in pursuance of the South Wales Turnpike Act, 1844 (c. 91), by which Act, also, the roads of the county of Glamorganshire were vested in deft. board, directed that a certain road situated within the borough of S. should be continued as a turnpike road, & in 1815 a toll-gate was erected on it, at which tolls have been collected up to the present time. In the year 1850 a provisional order was made, by which the Public Health Act, 1818 (c. 63), was applied to the borough of S., & a local board of health for the borough was appointed. By the sect. 68 of that Act it is provided that all present & future streets, being highways within any district, shall vest in & be under the management of the local board of health, & that board is directed to repair these roads. By 15 & 16 Vict. c. 42, s. 13, it is declared that the word "highway" in sect. 68 shall mean "any highway repairable by the inhabitants at large":—Held: though the road in question was in fact a street, it was not a "highway repairable by the inhabitants at large," & therefore had not become vested in the local board of health, but had remained vested in & subject to the powers of deft. board.—SWANSEA IMPROVEMENT & TRAMWAYS CO. v. COUNTY ROADS BOARD FOR GLAMORGANSHIRE (1879), 41 L. T. 593; 43 J. P. 798.

SUB-SECT. 2.—WHO ARE LIABLE.

836. "Inhabitants."]—Indictment against the inhabitants of a parish for not repairing a road. Plea, that the inhabitants of a particular district within the parish have immemorially repaired all the roads within that district, of which the road indicted was one:—Held: this plea was good, although it did not state any consideration for the liability of the inhabitants of the district.

It is a general rule of the common law, that highways & bridges are, except in certain excepted cases, to be repaired by the inhabitants of the territory wherein they are situate, as a charge upon the land within that territory, to be defrayed by the occupiers for the time being: the charge is upon the land, under which word houses, etc., are included, & upon the inhabitants in respect of the land, not in respect of their person or residence. An occupier of land is chargeable although he reside elsewhere; a resident, not being an occupier, such as an inmate or servant, is not chargeable (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—*R. v. 853. Non-compliance with statutory requirements—Justices' certificate of completion.]—By an Act for inclosing lands in several parishes & townships, it was directed that the allotments to be made in respect of certain messuages, etc., should be deemed part & parcel of the townships respectively in which the messuages, etc., were situate. The comrs. under the Act were directed, in their award, to make such orders as they should think necessary & proper concerning all public roads, " & in what township & parish same are respectively situate," & by whom they ought to be repaired. The comrs. by their award directed that there should be certain roads. One of these, passed between new allotments. The road was ancient. The part of the common over which it ran, before the award, was in the township of H., & the road was still in that township unless its situation was changed by the local Act & the award. The new allotments on each side were declared by the award to be in other townships than H. The award did not say in what townships the road was situate, nor by whom it was repairable:—Held: the Act, by changing the local situation of the allotments, did not, as a consequence, change that of the adjoining portions of road, & therefore the road in question continued to be in H. Under 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, s. 9, a road continued, as well as a road newly made, under the award of comrs. of inclosure, must be declared by justices in special sessions to be fully completed & repaired, before the inhabitants of the district can be indicted for not repairing it.—*R. v. 854. ————]—By an inclosure Act, incorporating 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, the general inclosure Act in force at the time, the comrs. for inclosing certain common lands were authorised to stop up, divert or alter any public ways over the waste, with the concurrence of two justices. They were also empowered to set out new ways, which, when certified by two justices to be complete, were to be repaired by the parish. Before the inclosure Act, a public bridleway led across a common. There was no definite track where the land lay open. The comrs. ordered the common to be inclosed, & set out a road thirty feet wide, with the same termini & in the same line as the old bridleway, & in their award directed that it should be a public bridleway & a private carriage road for certain persons, who should keep it in repair. The road was set out accordingly. On the trial of an indictment against the parish for not keeping it in repair, no order or certificate of justices was proved: Held: the old public way was never effectually stopped; the defined road set out was in effect the same way; & the parish were still liable to repair it as a bridle road, & were not exonerated by the fact that it was now set out as a private carriage road also.—R. v. CRICKLADE ST. SAMPSON (INHABITANTS) (1850), 14 Q. B. 735; 4 New Mag. Cas. 112; 19 L. J. M. C. 169; 15 L. T. O. S. 296; 11 J. P. 401; 14 Jur. 000; 117 E. R. 283.

855. ————] Upon an indictment for the non-repair of a public carriage road, it appeared that the road was an ancient highway; that eighteen years ago the indicted parish, wherein the road was situate, was inclosed under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 115, which incorporates 41 Geo. 3, c. 109; & the road was described in the award. Before the award the comrs. made an alteration in the original road by straightening & widening it, but the whole of the original road was comprehended in the existing road as set out in the award. Both before & since the award the parish had repaired it, but no steps had been taken by the comrs. for putting the road into complete repair, there never was any declaration by justices that it had been fully completed & repaired, & no proceedings had been taken under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 23. It passed through allotable land on both sides except that a small portion on one side was an old inclosure:—Held: the parish was not liable to repair the road.—*R. v. 856. ————]—Previously to the passing of the local & personal public Acts after mentioned, a district was extraparochial & uninhabited. A local Act empowered comrs. to divide the district into allotments, & set out roads, which, upon the confirmation within a certain time, of a certificate from the surveyors, but not before, were to be repaired by the inhabitants of the respective parishes, townships & places having right of common in the district. The comrs. set out a road, which was used by the public; but no certificate was ever made; & the time for confirmation expired. A further local Act recited that it would be of public utility if the lands, roads, etc., of the districts were made to constitute distinct townships, & if the public laws in force concerning constables & for the relief of the poor were put in force in such townships; & enacted that a certain part of the district, comprehending the road in question, should be the township of M.; that all public laws in force or to be made relating to constables or the relief of the poor should be put in force in the townships in like manner as in any parish; & that the inhabitants & occupiers in any township should not be liable to contribute to the relief of the poor, or to any other parochial rates, in any other parish, etc., & vice versa. 857. Roads out of district.]—By an inclosure Act, passed 7 Geo. 3, with reference to the inclosure of certain commons & waste grounds, after reciting that the persons interested were owners & proprietors of messuages, etc., in the several townships therein mentioned, including amongst others, the township of W., it was enacted that the comrs. should appoint & undertake the repair of (inter alia) two roads mentioned in the statement of claim. Pltts. alleged that these roads were duly made in accordance with the award, & were for many years kept in repair by the surveyor of the township of W. & that the township was included in deft. urban district, & that defts. were liable to repair them. There was no evidence, that the inhabitants of W., taken as a body, had ever in fact repaired or paid for the repair of the roads in question since 1787, although it was shown that since 1859 certain of the inhabitants of the township had contributed towards the repair of the roads for their own convenience. It was contended by pltts. that liability to repair the road in question was imposed upon the defts.:—Held: in the circumstances, the ct. was justified in reading in after the words "in such manner as other public highways are by law directed to be repaired by such of the said townships respectively" the words "within whose district such public highways are situated"; the doctrine of contemporanea expositio did not apply; & defts. were not liable to repair the roads in question as same were outside their district.—A.-G. & SETTLE RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. appointed for making turnpike roads over & along the course of two ancient highways, & also for making one new road; on all of which they were empowered to take toll & to erect toll gates, etc. By the Act, money was to be raised by subscription as well as by toll; & the trustees were to apply money already subscribed, in the first place to the payment of preliminary expenses & of the two ancient roads, & in the next, money thereafter subscribed to the purposes aforesaid, as well as to the making of the new road; & there was a provision for the erection of toll gates on the old roads before the completion of the new road. The trustees were designated by the Act, trustees of the roads, in the plural:—Held: (1) the completion of all three roads was not a condition precedent to the right of the trustees to take toll on any of them, or to derive any other benefit under the Act; (2) the old roads became turnpike roads as soon as completed, & therefore the trustees were at liberty to apply to justices under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 60 (continuing the provisions of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 81), for contribution out of the highway rates; & an order made by justices upon such application for payment of a certain sum was good.—R. v. 863. ——— Road not completed by trustees—Adoption by public.]—Indictment against a township, liable by prescription, for not repairing a road, described as a common Queen's highway. Plea: not guilty. The road was made by trustees under a local Turnpike Act, which was to be in operation for twenty-one years, & which would have expired before the bill was found, had it not been kept in force by temporary continuation Acts. On the trial, it was admitted that the road was out of repair, & had been opened, & used for many years: but the township contended that they were not liable to repair a temporary turnpike road at all; or, if they were, that there was a variance between the proof as to the nature of the road & the allegation in the indictment; & evidence, that the trustees had never put the road in good repair, or properly fenced or finished it, was tendered & rejected as immaterial:—Held: (1) the road, at least so long as the Act continued in force, was a common Queen's highway, & was properly described as such in the indictment; (2) the township was liable to repair it; (3) the evidence tendered was immaterial, it being admitted that the road had been opened & long used de facto throughout the whole line.—R. v. This statute was afterwards repealed, & the Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), was applied to L.:—Held: a street made while the local Act applied, & which was not declared by the comrs. to be a public highway, though dedicated to the public, was not a highway within the Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), & that an order of the comrs. requiring the inhabitants of premises abutting on the street to repair it, under sect. 69, was therefore valid.—WILLES v. WALLINGTON (1863), 13 C. B. N. S. 865; 1 New Rep. 129; 32 L. J. C. P. 86; 27 J. P. 295; 143 E. R. 342, Ex. Ch.

867. —.]—By a local Act for paving & lighting the town of H., trustees were appointed with power to cause the streets, etc., to be paved, repaired & lighted, & to levy rates for the purpose on the tenants & occupiers of all houses, etc., within the township; & all persons paying the rates were exempted & discharged from all other charges of paving or lighting the streets. While this Act was in operation in 1810, a new street was set out on private property connecting two highways; & in 1819 it was passable for carriages, & had been open to & used by the public ever since. In 1823 this Act was repealed by a second local Act, & by that Act trustees were appointed, & all persons were exonerated from statute duty for the repairs of the public highways within the town, & from payment of any composition in lieu thereof, & from all liability by law to be called upon for the repairs of such highways; the surveyors under the Act were to have all the rights, duties, & obligations of surveyors of highways, & all indictments & other legal process for non-repair of the roads, etc., were to be brought against the trustees. The trustees were empowered to cause the present & future streets, etc., to be paved, etc.; & when any new streets already laid out, or which should thereafter be laid out, should be sufficiently paved & put in good repair, the trustees had power, on application of the adjoining owners, to declare same public streets, & they were afterwards to be kept in repair by the trustees; & where any streets, which then were or thereafter should be set out on private property, should have been open to & used by the public for three successive years, the trustees might cause them to be paved, etc., & afterwards such streets were to be deemed to be public streets, & kept in repair by the trustees. The street had never been paved, nor declared public by the trustees; & up to 1851, though the houses in it had been from time to time rated under the local Acts, the trustees had not repaired it, nor had the expenses of any repairs been paid out of the parochial district or other rates, nor by the inhabitants of the township or district. In 1851 the Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), was applied to the district; & the local board of health proceeded under sect. 69 to pave the street, & charged the expense on the adjoining landowners:—Held: the street came within the exception in sect. 69 as interpreted by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 42, s. 13, of a "highway repairable by the inhabitants at large"; for that there was nothing in the first local Act to prevent a street becoming a highway by dedication & user; the street had, therefore, become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large before 1823; & the second local Act only applied to streets then in progress or afterwards laid out, & had no effect on streets already public.—*HIRST v. 871. — Road made by turnpike trustees.]—On appeal against a conviction for obstructing a highway, the sessions confirmed the conviction, subject to a case. The case showed that the road in question was made by turnpike trustees, under a temporary turnpike Act, which expired in 1818; but the whole line of turnpike road authorised by the Act was never completed. That the road as made had been used by the public, & had been repaired by the parish, both before & since the expiration of the Act; & the question for the ct. was, if there was any evidence that it was a highway compulsorily repairable by the parish:—Held: (1) there was evidence of a dedication, & of an adoption by the public, & though the fact that the road was originally made under the turnpike Act might explain away such evidence in fact, it did not conclusively in law rebut it; (2) above sect. did not apply to a road made by turnpike trustees; & consequently the absence of a certificate by two justices, etc., as required by above sect. did not prevent the road becoming compulsorily repairable by the parish, on a dedication by the owners of the soil in 1848.—*R. v. 872. — Part of road—Road not of requisite width throughout.]—Justices, after the parish had resolved that a road proposed to be dedicated to the public was of sufficient utility, were called upon to certify that it was made in conformity to above sect. They refused to grant their certificates, being of opinion that it was but a part of a road which in another part was not of the requisite width:—Held: the justices were right in their decision.—R. v. SURREY JJ. (1861), 3 L. T. 808; 25 J. P. 134.

873. — Road must be completely made up & taken over.]—By a local Act the inhabitants of that portion of the township of D., which lies within the limits of the town of S. were exempted from liability for the repairs of the highways within the parts of the township which are not within those limits. In 1857, Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), was applied to the township of D. In 1853, A., an owner of land, commenced laying out & making a road, which was within that part of the township of D. which was not included within the limits of the town of S., & completed it in 1854; & on May 25, 1858, gave notice to the local board of health of his intention to dedicate it to the use of the public. Between commencing the road & the giving of the notice he conveyed plots of land on both sides of the road for building purposes. Each of the plots extended for the whole length thereof fronting the intended road three yards into it: but there was a covenant in each deed of conveyance that the purchaser would leave the space of three yards open & unbuilt upon, to the intent that it might be added to & form part of the road. The local board refused to adopt the road as a highway, on the ground that it had not been sewered, levelled, paved, flagged & channelled to their satisfaction. On Aug. 30, 1858, A. obtained a certificate of two justices that the road was made in a substantial manner, & of the width required by Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), & caused this certificate to be enrolled; & on April 21, 1859, gave notice thereof to the local board. The road was used by the public, & kept in repair by A. for twelve months after the certificate was enrolled. Upon an indictment against the inhabitants of the township of D. for the subsequent non-repair of the road:—Held: assuming that Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 23, was not superseded by Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 70, still the road had not been made to the satisfaction of the local board, who, by sect. 117 of the latter statute, were the surveyors of highways within the township of D., & therefore had not become a highway repairable by the inhabitants of D.—R. v. DUKINFIELD (INHABITANTS) (1863), 4 B. & S. 158; 32 L. J. M. C. 230; 27 J. P. 803; 122 E. R. 420.

874. — "Private driftway or horsepath."]—(1) The liability to maintain & keep in repair private or occupation roads & ways set out by a valuer through lands inclosed under Inclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), which by sect. 68 of that Act is imposed on the owners of the lands, is a liability arising after the formation & completion of such roads & ways, & is limited by the extent to which they were formed & made up. The amount of their formation & completion is to a large extent at the discretion of the valuer, in the circumstances of each case. Footways may be set out where necessary for the accommodation of inclosed lands or adjoining owners interested in them, & roads formed & completed under the Act may be covered with grass for their whole extent. Semle: (2) such a private or occupation road or way is a "private driftway or horsepath" within Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 23, which excludes the public liability to repair unless the procedure specified in the section has been followed. Qu.: whether, when there is a public right of way by means of a footpath, dedicated prior to the passing of Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), & a private road is constructed under Inclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), over same site, the local authority or the persons responsible for the repair of the highways would be immune under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 23, from keeping it up so far as it was proper for the purposes of the passage of foot passengers.—REYNOLDS v. BARNES, [1909] 2 Ch. 361; 78 L. J. Ch. 641; 101 L. T. 71; 73 J. P. 330.

876. — Highways by dedication & public user.]—(1) Above sect., which limits the liability of a parish to repair new highways, applies to highways which have become such as the result of dedication presumed from public user.

(2) A road is "made by & at the expense of an individual or private person, body politic or corporate," within the meaning of above sect. if the owner of the soil suffers it to be used as a road long enough for it to become a road in fact, & if any expense there may be has to be at his charge.

I do not say that there might not be a case where, if, for instance, the lapse of time was long, & the parish had all along repaired the road, the mere absence of direct proof of the formalities might be held not to be fatal (LORD DUNEDIN).

(3) Above sect. is not confined to a case in which the same person makes the road & spends the money.

(4) In an appeal by the owner of property adjoining a way which had become a street against a provisional apportionment of expenses with regard to making up the way under the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57):—Held: the absence of evidence of any intention of any particular owner at any particular time to dedicate the way as a highway did not prevent Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 23, from applying to it, & as there was no evidence from which compliance with the requirements of that sect. could be inferred, the way was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, & was a "street" which the council could make up under the provisions of the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57).—(CABABÉ v. WALTON-ON-THAMES URBAN COUNCIL, [1914] A. C. 102; 83 L. J. K. B. 243; 110 L. T. 674; 78 J. P. 129; 58 Sol. Jo. 270; 12 L. G. R. 104, II. 1.)

879. Compliance with statutory formalities—Effect of non-compliance—Road still a highway.]—If a road has been dedicated to the public & used, but the necessary steps have not been taken, by notice, etc., under above sect. to make it repairable by the parish, it is still a highway in other respects; & an action is maintainable for obstructing it to

891. ———.]—To charge a township with liability by custom to repair all highways within it which would otherwise be repairable by the parish comprising such township, it is not necessary to prove that there are or have been ancient highways in the township. Without such proof, a jury may infer the custom from other evidence; as, that the parish consists of five townships, one of which is the township in question: that four have always repaired their own highways; that no surveyor has ever been appointed for the parish; & that the township in question has repaired a highway lately formed within it.—R. v. (1) Where a highway is supported by a wall, & such wall becomes dangerous by reason of non-repair, the inhabitants of the place in which such highway is situate, if liable to repair the highway, can be convicted upon an indictment for non-repair, it being a question for the jury whether the wall forms part of the highway or not.

(2) Evidence of repairs to a highway by the owners of the adjoining lands is inadmissible upon an indictment against the inhabitants of the place in which such highway is situate, unless liability on the part of such owners to repair the highway in question, ratione tenuræ, has been specially pleaded.

(3) Evidence of a previous conviction of the inhabitants of a particular district in a parish for the non-repair of one of the highways in such district is admissible to prove that the district is liable by immemorial custom to repair all the highways within its limits, for the repair of which the inhabitants of the whole common law parish would otherwise be primâ facie liable.—R. v. 893. — Township.]—On appeal against an appointment of surveyor of highways for the township of N., the sessions found that the parish of M. consisted to two townships, M. & N.; that from the earliest period within living memory, to the year 1709, surveyors were appointed for these townships, one for each; that from that time, to save expense, there had been one appointment of two surveyors for the parish at large, one of them always being an inhabitant of M., & the other of N.; & that each acted as surveyor in his own township; that distinct rates had been made for each township, & applied distinctly to the repairs of the highways in each; that the surveyors kept distinct accounts, but that these as well as the rates, before they were taken to the magistrates, were examined & allowed at a general parish vestry; & that the occupiers of lands had been rated, in respect of their occupation, to the repair of the highways of that township in which the houses they resided in were situate: Held: the facts found were sufficient evidence that each township was immemorably bound to repair the roads within it, & consequently the appointment of surveyors for each township was proper.—R. v. KING'S NEWTON (INHABITANTS) (1831), 1 B. & Ad. 826; 9 L. J. O. S. M. C. 51; 100 E. R. 993.

(2) A count stating defts.' liability to arise by virtue of an agreement with the owners of houses alongside of it is also bad: for the parish who are primâ facie bound to the repair of all highways within their boundaries cannot be discharged from such liability by any agreement with others.—R. v. 897. Sufficiency of consideration.]—To an indictment against the inhabitants of the parish of A. for the non-repair of a highway, defts. pleaded that from time immemorial the inhabitants of the parish of G., in consideration of levying & receiving rates on certain lands in the parish of A. adjoining the highway, have repaired & ought to repair the highway; to which there was a replication that the agreement had been determined by notice. On demurrer to the replication:—Held: prosecutors were entitled to judgment; for that the consideration was insufficient to support the alleged liability of G., as neither could the consideration be enforced, nor could it be immemorial, for it must have arisen since the statutes creating the power to levy rates. The alleged liability, therefore, amounted to no more than an arrangement between the two parishes which could be put an end to at any time. Qu.: whether, in point of law, a parish could be bound by prescription to repair highways in another parish.—R. v. ASHBY FOLVILLE (INHABITANTS) (1806), L. R. 1 Q. B. 213; 7 B. & S. 277; 35 L. J. M. C. 151; 30 J. P. 340; 12 Jur. N. S. 520; 10 Cox, C. C. 269.

898. — Upon the trial of an indictment against the township of A. for the non-repair of a highway within it, it appeared that A. was one of seven townships forming the parish of D. The parish itself had never repaired any highway, nor levied highway rates, nor appointed surveyors; each township having appointed its own surveyors, & levied its own highway rates. With the exception of the highway in question, & one other, each of the seven townships had from time immemorial repaired its own highways. The highway had always been repaired by the adjoining township of W., but there was no evidence of any consideration for such repair:—Held: A. was liable, for it must be presumed that the repairs had been done by W. under some arrangement between the two townships, & such arrangement in the absence of sufficient consideration was not binding on W.—R. v. ARDSLEY (INHABITANTS)

(1878), 3 Q. B. D. 255; 47 L. J. M. C. 65; 38 L. T. 71; 42 J. P. 262; 26 W. R. 405, C. C. R.

899. Proof of agreement.]—The township of S. was indicted for not repairing a road in S., on a custom alleged & proved, that all the townships in the parish in which S. was situate repaired their own roads in general. In answer, it was shown that the township of N., in another parish, was adjacent to S.; & that an agreement had been made, two hundred & fifty years before, between the then owner of all S. & the then owner of all N., whereby the boundary between the properties was marked out, & the owner of S. agreed to allow to the owner of N., & the rest of the inhabitants of N., a road through S., of which S. was to repair part, & N. another part, being the subject of the indictment; & that further assurance for the performance of the agreement should be made by a sufficient lawyer. It was also shown that afterwards the owner of S. filed a bill for specific performance against the owner of N., the event of which did not appear; but that the owners of lands in N. had ever since repaired in conformity with the agreement:—Held: not to be evidence for a jury of an instrument binding the owner of N., & all claiming through him, to repair, assuming that such a conveyance could have been made so as to exonerate the inhabitants of S.—*R. v. 909. Jurisdiction to try.]—(1) Where, in trespass against two magistrates for breaking & entering plff.'s close in the parish of A. & seizing his sheep, it appeared that defts., upon the complaint of the surveyor of the highways appointed for the whole parish, convicted plff. of neglecting to do statute duty, & issued a warrant to levy the penalty under which the act complained of was done:—Held: the conviction being good upon the face of it, was a sufficient defence, & plff. could not, in this action, try the question, whether the land which he occupied was exempt from the burthen of repairing the roads in other parts of the parish; (2) the surveyor called upon plff. to do certain statute duty, or compound for it. The conviction stated that he was an occupier of land in the parish, & had neglected to do the work, but did not notice the composition:—Held: it was unnecessary to do so, or to state that plff. kept a team; for that, if he did not keep a team, or had compounded for the statute duty, that was a matter of defence, which ought to have been urged by him in answer to the complaint.

The present plff. as an occupier of lands within the parish was prima facie liable to the burden imposed (Lord Tenterden, C.J.).—FAWCETT v. FOWLES (1827), 7 B. & C. 391; 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 102; 1 Man. & Ry. M. C. 21; 6 L. J. O. S. M. C. 44; 108 E. R. 770.

(2) A minute-book, kept by the magistrates' clerk, was offered in evidence, to show who had been appointed by the magistrates to be surveyors of the highways for the year 1812:—Held: this evidence was not receivable without proof of a search for the original appointment, under the hands & seals of the magistrates. Qu.: whether the minute-book would have been receivable as secondary evidence, if the original appointment had been lost.—*R. v. The parish of C. contained four townships, each of which had been accustomed from time immemorial to maintain its own highways. There were now no public roads in the hamlet which could be repaired by it: Held: the above circumstances were insufficient by themselves to establish a custom exempting the occupiers in the hamlet from contribution to the repair of highways without its limits.—*R. v. 916. — Turnpike tolls.]—If a turnpike road be out of repair, the inhabitants are liable to be indicted, although the tolls are appropriated by Act of Parliament to the repairs thereof. In such case they must seek relief from the trustees under Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126).—R. v. PRESTON (INHABITANTS) (1838), 2 Lew. C. C. 193.

917. Concurrent liability imposed on others—Construction of local Act.]—(1) Where the burden of repairing a highway is transferred by a public Act of Parliament from the parish to other persons, if the parish be indicted for not repairing this highway, there is no occasion for a special plea, stating who are bound to repair it, but the exemption may be taken advantage of under the general issue, of not guilty.

(2) Although a statute enacts, that the paving of a particular street shall be under the care of comrs., & provides a fund to be applied to that purpose, & another statute passed for paving the streets of the parish, contains a clause that it shall not extend to the particular street, the inhabitants of the parish are not exempted from their common law liability to keep that street in repair.—*R. v. Upon the trial of an indictment against the inhabitants of the township of B., for the non-repair of a highway, authorised to be made under a former Act & the recited Act, within the township, the jury found specially, that the highway was out of repair; that the township of B. until the passing of the Act above set out, had been used to repair such of the highways within it as would otherwise be repairable by the inhabitants of the parish at large; & that the portion of the road indicted, at the time of making the presentment, was not, by the erection of houses & buildings on each side thereof, made to form a street communicating with a certain public street:—Held: the inhabitants of the township were liable to the repair of this highway, notwithstanding the provisions of sect. 64.—*LITTLE BOLTON (INHABITANTS) v. 927. Hamlet formerly assessed to rate in adjoining parish.]—The parish of A. contains several hamlets, all included in the poor rate for the parish, with one set of overseers. M., one of these hamlets adjoining the parish of B., had, so far as living memory extends, been assessed to the property & income tax, land tax & assessed taxes as part of B. The occupiers of land in M. have at various times held the offices of guardian of the poor, overseer, churchwarden & dike-reeve for A., & had never held similar offices in B. M. had time out of mind paid poor rates, church rates, sewer rates & tithes to A. So far as living memory & evidence of reputation went, the occupiers of lands in M. had always been assessed & had contributed to the highway rates of B., & the highways in M. had always been repaired by B. until 1841, when, by private arrangement with the surveyors of the highways of B., the lands in M. ceased to be assessed in that parish; & the highways in M. had still been repaired by the occupiers of lands in M. without any rate, the surveyors of the highways of B. expressly reserving to themselves the right of assessing the lands in M. to the highway rates at any future time:—Held: M. was assessable to the highway rate for A., there not being sufficient evidence to warrant the conclusion that M.

Statutory duty to construct road of certain width—Wider road constructed—Dedication.]—By a local Act of Parliament it was enacted that a certain navigation co. should make a good road to the township of T., at least seven yards wide, & should keep same in repair, & should be liable to be indicted for not repairing the same; & it was also provided that they should be entitled to a tonnage of 1*d.*, which they were to apply to the making of the road. By a subsequent Act of Parliament defts., a canal co., were empowered to purchase from the first-mentioned co. the navigation & all the rights to tolls, etc., & were in like manner to be liable to be indicted for non-repair of the road. The road was kept in repair by the first-mentioned co. to the extent of twelve yards wide till the year 1817, when the purchase by defts. took place under the above Act of Parliament, & from that period by defts.:—Held: (1) defts. were, under the provisions of the statute, liable to be indicted for non-repair of the road to its full width of twelve yards; (2) a count charging them with a liability to repair ratione tenuræ of the land, etc., connected with the navigation, & purchased by them under the powers of the second Act of Parliament, could not be sustained.

939. ———.—Deft. was indicted for the non-repair of a highway, which it was alleged he was liable to repair ratione tenure, in respect of certain lands called Saw-pit Field. To prove this liability, evidence was given of the conviction of W., a former owner & occupier of the same lands, for the non-repair of same highway, showing that in the year 1801 a presentment had been preferred against him, alleging his liability to repair it ratione tenure, to which he pleaded guilty. Evidence was also given of the repair of the highway subsequent to the conviction of W., by the occupiers of the lands, of which the Saw-pit Field formed part; that public notice was given when the Saw-pit Field was offered for sale of the liability to repair the highway in question, & that deft., who purchased the lands after such notice, was now the owner & occupier of the same Saw-pit Field.—Held: (1) there was evidence to go to the jury of immemorial usage, & of deft.'s liability to repair the highway ratione tenure; (2) (PARKE, B., ALDERSON, B., PATTESON, J., & COLERIDGE, J.) deft. was estopped from denying his liability in consequence of the conviction of W., with whom he was a privy in estate; (3) (PLATT, B.) the immemorial usage, in respect of which deft. was charged, was not conclusively established, & the question of estoppel, not having been raised at the trial, was not now matter for the consideration of the judges.—*R. v. 943. ———.—A grant of a licence by the Crown to the owner of lands to stop up & inclose for the benefit of himself & his heirs a public highway through his lands, imposing at the same time a condition that the owner should make a new road through his lands, & that he, his heirs & assigns, should keep the new road in repair, establishes against the grantee, who had acted upon the grant by stopping up the old road, an obligation ratione tenure to repair the new road, & it is immaterial whether such grant was made before or after the reign of Richard I.; the period of legal memory. In such case the liability of repair is charged upon the heirs & assigns of the lands, & if the lands become divided among several persons the alienee & occupier of each & every part of the lands is liable to the whole charge. Upon an inquisition taken in 1773 under a writ of ad quod damnum the jurors presented that the King should grant to O., the owner of certain lands through which passed an old highway for horses, carts, carriages, & foot passengers, a licence to inclose & stop up the old highway & hold the same when so stopped up to him & his heirs for ever, upon the condition that O. did in his own land make & set out another road equally fit & convenient for horses, carts, carriages, & foot passengers, & that such new road should be for ever thereafter kept in proper repair by O., his heirs & assigns. The old road was stopped up & inclosed, & the new road set out pursuant to the inquisition, & has ever since been used as a highway, although at some period it was stopped up at one end for horses, carts, & carriages, & became a cul de sac for traffic of that kind, but it was always used as a highway for foot passengers. No licence from the King pursuant to the terms of the inquisition could be found, & if any such licence was granted it appeared to have been lost. In an action against the owner & occupier of part of the lands formerly belonging to O. for the expenses of repairing the substituted highway on the ground of a liability to repair the same ratione tenuræ:—Held: (1) a licence from the King incorporating the conditions of the inquisition must be presumed in fact to have been granted; (2) the substituted road was laid out pursuant to such inquisition & licence; (3) the road was still a public highway, notwithstanding the changes in it; (4) deft. was an "assign" of O. within the meaning of the inquisition, & as such "assign," & by reason of his tenure & occupation of the lands, he was liable for the repair of the highway, although he was an assign of part only of the lands formerly belonging to O.—ESHER & DITTONS URBAN COUNCIL v. MARKS (1902), 71 L. J. K. B. 309; 86 L. T. 222; 66 J. P. 213; 50 W. R. 330; 18 T. L. R. 333; 16 Sol. Jo. 196.

944. Whether owner not in occupation.—An owner of lands who is not the occupier of them cannot be charged ratione tenuræ with the repair of a common highway. When a highway repairable ratione tenuræ is, under statutory powers, so altered in its nature & course as to be practically destroyed, the liability to repair ratione tenuræ ceases. A highway which had been from time immemorial repaired ratione tenuræ was paved to the width of nine feet in the centre with stone got from the land charged with the repair. The trustees under a turnpike Act converted the highway into a macadamised road by taking up the old pavement & laying down to the width of fifteen feet in the centre stone brought from places without the county, & they stopped & diverted the course of the highway in parts so as to straighten it. On the expiration of the turnpike trust, deft., the owner of the land charged, who was not in occupation of it, was indicted & convicted for non-repair of the road ratione tenuræ:—Held: (1) deft., not being the occupier of the land, was not liable; (2) the road, the subject of repair, must be taken to have been destroyed, & the liability to repair ratione tenuræ had therefore ceased.—R. v. BARKER (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 213; 59 L. J. M. C. 105; 62 L. T. 578; 54 J. P. 615; 6 T. L. R. 328; 17 Cox. C. C. 26, C. C. R.

947. Admissibility of evidence—Award under submission by former tenant.—Upon the trial of an indictment for not repairing a highway, which it is alleged deft. is bound to repair ratione tenuræ, an award made under a submission by a former tenant for years of the premises can be received neither as an adjudication, the tenant having no authority to bind the rights of his landlord, nor as evidence of reputation, being post litem motam. *R. v. a stile. Deft. & his predecessors in occupation had occasionally done slight repairs to the footpath & the stile; but there was no evidence that he or they had ever been required by the highway authority to do so. Plffs., who was using the footpath as a member of the public, fell in getting over the stile, in consequence of the stile being out of repair, & was injured. He sued deft., charging that he was liable to repair ratione tenuræ.—Held: the fact of the repairs done by deft. & his predecessors, being consistent with such repairs having been done by them for their own benefit, was no evidence of any liability to repair ratione tenuræ. Qu.: whether an action will lie against a person liable to repair a public way ratione tenuræ for special damage suffered by a member of the public in consequence of the way being out of repair.—*RUNDLE v. 952. What court must consider.—In doubtful cases the jury are to look to the utility of the road to the public, in order to determine whether a party is bound to repair ratione tenuræ. An adjoining occupier occasionally doing repairs for his own convenience to go & come, is no more like that sort of repair which makes a man liable ratione tenuræ, than the repair by an individual of a road close to his door is to the repair of the road outside his gate (HULLOCK, B.).—*R. v. D. Exemption from Highway Rates.

953. General rule.—The occupier of certain land in a hamlet maintaining its own highways, which was part of a township maintaining its own poor, which was part of a parish, was liable ratione tenuræ to repair a highway within its hamlet, & in consideration thereof was exempt from the repair of any other roads within it. The whole township was, with others, formed into a highway district under Highway Act, 1862 (c. 61), & Highway Act, 1861 (c. 101), the quarter sessions directing, in accordance with sect. 7 of the former, that no separate waywarden should be elected for the hamlet, & that the township should be subject to the same liabilities in respect of all the highways within it which were before maintained by the hamlet, & that one waywarden should be elected for the township as a whole:—Held: the exemption from highway rates by reason of the liability to repair the one highway in the hamlet was not taken away. R. v. HEATH (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 218; 7 B. & S. 285; 35 L. J. M. C. 113; 13 L. T. 609; 30 J. P. 182; 14 W. R. 388.

954. —.]—Applts. had from time immemorial repaired a certain highway ratione tenuræ, & had in consequence been exempt from contributing to the repair of other highways in the district. In 1782 the highway was placed under the control of turnpike trustees, who materially altered its nature & course; but on the expiration of the turnpike trust in 1862 applts., believing that they were still liable to do so, continued to repair the highway. In 1869 the Ct. of Q. B. decided that applts. were not liable to be rated for the repair of highways in the district; but the fact of the alteration of the highway by the turnpike trustees was not brought to the attention of the ct. In 1892 the highway was declared a main road, & applts. thereupon ceased to repair it. The question having arisen whether they were liable to contribute to a rate for the repair of the highways in the district:—Held: their exemption from such a rate depended on their liability to repair the highway ratione tenuræ, & both had come to an end on the alteration of the highway by the turnpike trustees.—*HEATH v. 955. — Whether liability alone creates exemption.—The existence of a liability ratione tenuræ to repair a certain highway does not of itself show that there is an exemption from liability to contribute to the repairs of other highways in the same highway district; there must be other evidence that the exemption exists in order to prove a legal exemption within Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 33.—*FERRAND v. 956. Effect of exemption.—Extends to portion of general rate applicable to highways.—In a hamlet forming part of a township all the highways were repairable by the occupiers of lands ratione tenuræ, & highway rates were not leviable by reason of the exemption in Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 33. A railway co. occupied lands in the hamlet, & prior to the after-mentioned order, were liable ratione tenuræ to repair a portion of a highway therein. An order was made by justices under Highway Act, 1862 (c. 61), s. 35, by which it was declared that all the highways in the hamlet should be parish highways, & be repaired by the highway board of the district in which the hamlet was situated. The order fixed the sums to be paid by the respective occupiers of lands previously liable to repair ratione naturæ "in full discharge of all claims thereafter in respect of the repair & maintenance of the highways" as provided by the Act. These sums were nominal in amount. They were duly paid. The co. were subsequently rated in respect of their lands in the hamlet for expenses incurred in the repair of highways within the district, including those in the hamlet:—Held: the order did not operate to deprive the railway co. of their previously existing exemption from highway rates, & the co. were exempt from payment of so much of the rate as was levied in respect of the repair of highways in the hamlet.—*DALTON OVERSEERS v. An order forming a highway district in 1862, included "the parish of W." in the district,

& no mention was made of B. as a separate highway parish. The highway board made a precept for a contribution on the "waywarden of the parish of W., B. farm excepted." No separate waywarden had ever been appointed for B. :—Held: under Highway Act, 1862 (c. 61), s. 33, the precept should have been made on the overseers of the parish of W.—*CARTER v. 964. Termination of liability—Road destroyed—By encroachment of sea.]—On indictment for non-repair of a highway, alleging liability ratione tenuræ, it appeared by special verdict: that deft. held lands adjoining the sea; that an ancient highway had passed over the lands, & that, from time immemorial, except as after mentioned, deft. & those whose estate, etc., had restored & repaired so much of the way as passed over the lands: that the sea had from time to time encroached upon the highway, so that a portion of the land over which it went was covered by the sea & impassable, wherefore deft. & his predecessors had from time to time gradually removed the highway, & appropriated other parts of the lands for the site thereof, so that the public had the uninterrupted use of it; & that the road had always been repaired by deft. & his predecessors as or in lieu of so much of the ancient highway: that the portion of way now alleged to be out of repair was part of the ancient highway so passing over the lands & used by the public as aforesaid, though passing over a different part of such lands from that formerly occupied by the road & since by the sea: that in Mar. 1812, before the preferring of the indictment, the sea encroached upon the part of road now complained of as out of repair, & rendered it ruinous, etc., as in the indictment stated, & that deft. has not restored same, but a portion thereof has, ever since the month of Mar., had the earth & soil washed away, & is thereby made impassable: that the residue thereby became, & is, too narrow for passage, & now stands at the edge of a precipitous bank seventy feet deep, & forming an angle of forty-five degrees to the horizon; & that it would cost a very great sum of money to make a road over the space last occupied by the highway :—Held: deft.'s liability had ceased: &, the quarter sessions having given judgment for the Crown upon the special verdict, this ct. reversed the judgment.—*R. v. 966. — — — What amounts to destruction.]—Upon the trial of an indictment for the non-repair of a highway, it appeared that the highway ran along the slope of a hill several hundred feet above the level of a valley beneath. Two landslips occurred on the slope of the hill, comprising many acres of land, & part of the highway was carried away into the valley below, & its place filled up with earth, stones, & other debris. The debris was at one point twenty-five feet above, & at another two feet below, the level of the old road, & occupied the line or track of the highway. At the point where it was twenty-five feet above the level of the old road it had been ascertained by boring that for a depth of thirty & a half feet from the surface there was nothing but soil, shale, & stones, & that there was no trace of the old metalled road, but the line of it was known & admitted. Evidence was given that it was practicable to form a road along the old track of a similar character to the adjoining parts of the old road at a cost of £311 :—Held: the ct. having power to draw inferences of fact, there was no proof of such destruction of the highway as to exempt the parish from their liability to repair it.—*R. v. Part of the road had, at the time when the indictment was preferred, been destroyed by the encroachments of the sea, & the surface of the existing road was in good repair up to where same had been so destroyed, at which part the road was terminated by a perpendicular cliff, caused by successive encroachments:—Held: there was no obligation on the parish to provide an available carriage road down to the beach, the encroachments of the sea having destroyed the road, so that the subject of repair was not in existence.

The indictment says that there is a highway, & that it is out of repair; but the case finds distinctly that that part of the road which the indictment alleges to be out of repair has, in fact, been washed away by the sea, so that the subject of repair is not in existence. #### SECT. 9.—APPORTIONMENT OF DIVIDED LIABILITY TO REPAIR.

986. Form of order.—(1) By 34 Geo. 3, c. 64, when the boundary of two parishes lay along the centre of a highway, justices were empowered, on information of the fact, to summon the surveyors of the respective parishes, hear the parties & their witnesses, & finally determine the matter by order, apportioning the highway between the parishes for the purpose of repair. Forms of information, summons & order were given. By an order under this Act, the justices recited an information laid before them that one side of a certain highway was in, & repairable by, parish H., & the other side in, & repairable by, parish W., praying an apportionment: that they had summoned the surveyors, who attended, & that they had examined witnesses: & they ordered that the highway should be apportioned between H. & W., dividing it by a transverse line. The order contained no direct finding that the sides of the highway were respectively in H. & W.; but the statute form was correctly followed. On indictment for non-repair of the part allotted to H.:—Held: the justices must be taken to have considered the question, whether or not part of the highway was in H., & to have decided by their order that it was; & the fact could not be questioned on trial of an indictment, the subject matter being within the jurisdiction of the justices, & their finding of the fact conclusive.

(2) An order directing an indictment for non-repair of a road, under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), ss. 94, 95, must show, on the face of it, that it was made at a special session for the highways held within the division in which the road is situate. 987. Jurisdiction of King's Bench Division—On case stated.—The Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 58, enacts that, where the boundaries of parishes pass across or through the middle of a common highway, justices in special sessions may, on complaint, summons & hearing, apportion the future liability to repair between the parishes: proviso, that, in the case of such highway, the repair of any part of which belongs to any body politic or corporate, or to any person, by the reason of tenure of any lands, or otherwise howsoever, the same proceedings may be adopted. Two justices made an order of apportionment under sect. 58, in the form given by the sched. 11, to the statute, which form does not contain any express finding as to boundary. On appeal to the session against this order, evidence was heard on the question, whether or not the highway was upon a parochial boundary; applts. denied the jurisdiction of the two justices, because, as they contended, the highway did not appear to be on such boundary: resps. argued that, even if it were not so, the justices had jurisdiction under the proviso. The sessions confirmed the order, but stated a case, setting forth the facts in evidence on the question of boundary, & the objection taken to the jurisdiction, & adding that, if the Ct. of Q. B. should be of opinion that, under the circumstances stated, the road could be divided, etc., by the order of justices under the provisions of the statute, the order of sessions was to be confirmed; if not, both orders to be quashed:—Held: (1) upon the case so stated, this Ct., though the order of justices was made in the statutory he necessary, & no ordinary reparation could suffice:—Held: the road authority were not required by law to do the work.—McCORMICK v. PLECK TOWNSHIP (1890), 20 O. R. 288.—CAN.

983 II. ———.—Where the destruction of a highway is caused by the gradual encroachment arising from natural causes, the water occupying the former location of the highway, whereby there is a change of ownership in the land encroached upon, it becoming vested in the Crown, & available for purposes of navigation, there is no liability on the part of the municipality by virtue of its duty to keep highways in repair, to replace the highway.—CUMMING v. DUNDAS TOWN (1907), 9 O. W. R. 107; 13 O. L. R. 381.—CAN.

form & confirmed at sessions, might go into the whole question raised by the case; namely, whether there was evidence of a boundary intersecting the highway, or, if not, whether, upon the evidence, the two justices appeared to have had jurisdiction under the proviso; (2) the case did not come within the enactment of sect. 58, as the evidence did not show a boundary intersecting the highway. & the proviso did not apply. Orders quashed. R. v. PERKINS (1849), 14 Q. B. 229; 3 New Mag. Cas. 235; 19 L. J. M. C. 105; 14 L. T. O. S. 250; 14 Jur. 362; 13 J. P. Jo. 750; 117 E. R. 91.

988. Several parishes abutting on one street.]—An Act of Charles II., creating a new parish of A, in the metropolis, described the boundary as the houses abutting on a street. The other side of the street was in the parish of M., & there was evidence that in perambulating the parish boundaries of M., the middle of the street was regarded as the boundary of M.:—Held: the boundary of the new parish extended beyond the houses abutting on the highway to the medium filum of the highway. Qu.: whether as between several parishes abutting on a street, the expenses of paving, etc., are to be divided according to the linear frontage or according to actual expense?

In a conveyance of a close the expression "abutting on a highway" commonly carries with it the right to the soil ad medium filum viae (EULE, C.J.). *R. v. 999. Repair of existing fences.]—Defta. under their statutory powers constructed a canal & crossed a highway, which they carried over their canal by means of a bridge, to which they made a raised approach along the highway & fenced it off from the rest of the highway. The fences had since fallen into disrepair, so as to constitute a public nuisance. By their Act of Parliament passed in 1829, the bridges were vested in defts., & sect. 26 provided that deft. co. should not be liable to repair any part of the road approaching any bridge over the canal after such roads had been first made & used for one year, & then put into good & sufficient repair by deft. co., beyond or further than the extremity of the wing walls of any such bridge, but nothing therein contained should be construed to exonerate deft. co. from the future repair of all such bridges & the wing walls, ramparts, & side banks thereof:—Held: the Act of Parliament drew a clear distinction between the bridges, as such, which were vested in defts., & the approaches to the bridges, which were not vested in defts., & which they were now relieved from all liability to keep in repair, & defts. were therefore not liable to repair the fences. Semble: the obligation lay on the county council.—A.-G. v. OXFORD CANAL NAVIGATION (1903), 72 L. J. Ch. 285; 88 L. T. 250; 67 J. P. 130 51 W. R. 386; 19 T. L. R. 277; 47 Sol. Jo. 317; 1 L. G. R. 282, C. A.

1000. Wall supporting highway.]—Where a servitude of support to a highway by a wall has been acquired, the owner of the highway, & not the owner of the wall, in the absence of express stipulation to that effect in the instrument, if any, creating the easement, is bound to repair the wall when out of repair & insufficient to support & maintain the highway. Semble: such stipulation covenant or obligation cannot be inferred merely from the fact that the wall has been on several occasions repaired by the owner of the wall or his predecessors in title.—*STOCKPORT & HYDE DIVISION OF MACCLESFIELD HUNDRED, HIGHWAY BOARD v. 1004. Cellar under pavement—Covered by paving stones only—Whether within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 102.]—By above Act, sect. 96, all pavements are vested in & are under the management & control of the vestry of the parish in which they are situate, & by sect. 102 all vaults, arches, & cellars made either before or after the commencement of above Act under any street, & all openings into same in any such street, shall be repaired & kept in proper order by the owners & occupiers of the houses to which same respectively belong. Applt. was the owner of a house which in front of it had an area & cellars. The cellars were formed of brick walls, one of which was the outer wall of the area, & the other ran parallel with such outer wall at a distance of eleven feet nine inches. There were also two thin partition walls at right angles to these brick walls, separating the cellars of each house. Extending from the outer wall of the area to the wall which ran parallel with it were large flagstones, the ends of which rest on the walls in question; they formed a covering to the cellars, which without them would be open at the top. The outer or upper surface of these flagstones had been used by the public as a footway from the time they had been laid down, & had been worn out by the traffic over them: Held: the cellar in front of applt.'s house was not a cellar within the meaning of sect. 102, which applied to cellars which were a complete construction in themselves, arched over & with roofs independent of the pavement, & the vestry of the parish were bound to repair the flagstones as part of the pavement.—*HAMILTON v. ## SECT. 2.—INDICTMENT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1009. In respect of what ways.—Private way.]—

If the comrs. under an inclosure Act set out a private road for the use of the inhabitants of nine parishes, directing the inhabitants of six of those parishes to keep it in repair, no indictment can be supported against the latter for not repairing it, it not concerning the public.

The road in question, being described to be a private road, does not concern the public, nor is of a public nature, but merely concerns the individuals who have a right to use it. The question is not varied by the circumstance that many individuals are liable to repair, or that many others are entitled to the benefit of it; each party injured may bring his action against those on whom the duty was thrown. The circumstance of this road having been set out under a public Act of Parliament, does not make the non-repair of it an indictable offence; many public Acts are passed which regulate private rights; but it is never conceived that an indictment lies on that account for an infringement of such rights (per CUR.).—R. v. RICHARDS (1800), 8 Term Rep. 634; 101 E. R. 1588.

1014. — — —.]—(1) If a parish be situate part in one county & the rest in another, & a highway lying in one part be out of repair, an indictment against the inhabitants of that part only is bad. The indictment must be against the whole parish.

[In R. v. Weston, No. 1013, ante], LORD MANSFIELD said that "the indictment must be confined to the county"; if by that expression his Lordship meant that the indictment must be preferred in that county where the particular road lay where the offence of not repairing happened, undoubtedly he spoke correctly; but if he thought that the indictment could only be preferred against the person or persons who lived within the jurisdiction of the ct. where the indictment was preferred, I think he was mistaken. For it is admitted that in the instance I put of a person who is bound ratione tenuræ to repair a road, living out of the jurisdiction of the county sessions where the road is situate, he must be indicted in that county (LORD KENYON, C.J.).

(2) On an indictment against a parish for not repairing a road, it is not necessary for the prosecution to serve every individual in the parish with process; he may compel the appearance of any two who live within the county upon whom the whole fine may be levied & the rest of the inhabitants must reimburse those two under the general Highway Act [13 Geo. 3, c. 78] (LORD KENYON, C.J.). *R. v. At the trial the judge intimated his willingness to make any amendment within his power; but no amendment was in fact made. A verdict having been found for the Crown: Held: (1) the indictment was bad, & debts were entitled to judgment non obstante veredicto; (2) even assuming the necessary amendments to be made, debts were entitled to judgment, there being nothing in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), to make the urban sanitary authority liable to indictment for non-repair, in the same sense as that in which the parish or other persons liable ratione tenuræ were liable.—*R. v. 1024. — — — — — It is not necessary to set out the length or breadth of a nuisance, in an indictment for the nuisance.

It has been said that as the length & breadth of the nuisance [non-repair of a highway] are not set out with precision, this ct. cannot judge whether a proper fine was set; but this ct. will presume, that the ct. of quarter sessions did set a fine adequate to the length & breadth of the nuisance proved (FOSTER, J.).

According to some old cases, too much precision was, in my opinion, heretofore required in setting out the length & breadth of the nuisance in an indictment (WILMOT, J.).—R. v. EAST LIDFORD (INHABITANTS) (1756), Say. 301; 96 E. R. 887.

1025. — — — — — In 1891 a highway was closed by order of quarter sessions & a new highway was substituted for it. The certificate of the justices stated that the new highway was twelve yards wide, whereas in fact it was fourteen or fifteen yards wide. The new highway fell into disrepair. An order was then made under Highways & Locomotives Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 10, & an indictment was preferred against the highway authority, defts. Notices were served on the frontagers by the highway authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, after the date of the order. The width of the road was not specified in the indictment. (2) It appeared further that the way from T. to E. referred to in the indictment led from T. into the turnpike road from B. to C., then lay, for a short distance along that road, & then branched off to E. township were liable to repair it. The second count alleged that the parish was divided into townships, whereof W. was one, & that the inhabitants of W. had immemorially repaired such & so many of the highways situate within it as would otherwise be repairable by the parish at large, & "that the said part of the same common highway hereinbefore mentioned to be ruinous, etc., as aforesaid, was a highway which but for the said prescription would be repairable by the said parish at large, & that by reason of the premises the inhabitants of W. aforesaid ought to repair the same part of the said highway so being ruinous, etc., as aforesaid, when & so often as it hath & shall be necessary," & that defts. had not repaired same. Defts. were found not guilty on the first count & guilty on the second:—Held: the second count contained a sufficient reference to the first count, & after verdict, it sufficiently averred that the part of the road in question was out of repair, & that it was situate in the township of W.—*R. v. 1056. ———— That highway in township convicted.]—(1) Indictment for non-repair of a highway, against the inhabitants of the township of H., averring them to be liable by prescription to repair such highways in the township as the inhabitants of the parish, but for the prescription, would have been liable to repair, with averment that the highway was in the township. Plea: Not guilty. Prosecutors gave in evidence a record of a presentment by a justice, under 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, on his own view, that the road in question was out of repair; averring that it was in the township of H., & that the inhabitants of that township ought to repair it: the record showed a plea of guilty by two inhabitants of the township of H., a conviction before the sessions, & a sentence of fine:—Held: this conviction was conclusive evidence, against H., that the road was in that township; & though the presentment might be bad on error for not showing how the township was liable, the conviction, being before a competent tribunal & being unreversed, was not the less an estoppel.

(2) By a local & personal Act (since repealed) it was recited that the highway in question was in the township of D.: Held: the recital in the Act was not conclusive, & consequently did not open the estoppel. 1058. ———— Against award of Inclosure Commissioners.]—Upon the trial of an indictment against parish A. for the non-repair of a highway, it appeared that A. had always repaired the road in question, which passed over waste ground in the parish of B., & connected together two separate portions of A. In 1785, the inhabitants of A. submitted to an indictment for non-repair of the same road, & paid a fine. In 1788, Inclosure Comrs. acting under a statute for inclosing the commons, moors, & waste grounds within the parish of B., made an award, whereby they set out the road in question as situate in B. & to be repaired by B. No dispute as to the boundary of the two parishes was brought before the Comrs., nor did they assume to settle any question of boundary; but they acted under the power conferred upon them, of setting out public & private roads over the moors, commons, & waste grounds in B. After the award, as before, the inhabitants of A. continued to repair:—Held: (1) the former conviction was conclusive evidence against A. that the road was situate in that parish; (2) the Comrs., having no jurisdiction to set out a road not situate in B., their award did not shift the liability from A. to B.—R. v. NETHER HALLAM (INHABITANTS) (1851), 3 C. L. R. 91; 24 L. T. O. S. 109; 19 J. P. 165; 6 Cox, C. C. 435.

1125. ———.]—To order indictment—Whether discretionary.]—An indictment for non-repair of a highway was preferred by G. against the parish at the quarter sessions in pursuance of an order of three justices at a special sessions for highways. The parish pleaded, & the jury found, that the occupier of farm A. was liable to repair ratione tenure. G. applied for his costs of the prosecution under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 95, but the sessions refused to give them, on the ground that G., one of the magistrates who made the order for preferring the indictment, was the owner of farm A. Before the order was given, G. had summoned the surveyor of the parish before the special sessions. No question was made but that the road was a highway & out of repair. The surveyor simply denied the liability of the parish to repair it, but did not suggest who was liable, & thereupon L. & the two other justices signed the order: Held: when the surveyor of the parish simply denies the liability of the parish to repair a highway within it which is out of repair, it is imperative on the special sessions under the above sect. to order an indictment to be preferred. *R. v. 1132. Who must be indicted Inhabitants.]—A prosecutor had obtained a summons under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 91, calling on the parish surveyors to show cause why a highway should not be repaired. The surveyors denied the liability of the parish to repair, & the magistrates, under sect. 95 of the Act, ordered an indictment against the inhabitants of the parish, which was preferred & was tried as a traverse on the Crown side of the assizes, & defts. found guilty. — R. v. YARKHILL (INHABITANTS) (1839), 9 C. & P. 218.

1133. Not highway authority.] Where proceedings are taken before justices for the non-repair of a highway in a parish forming part of a highway district under Highway Act, 1862 (c. 61), a bonâ fide admission by the waywarden of the parish that the road is a highway which the parish is bound to repair is binding on the highway board, & it is not competent for them after such an admission to deny these facts so as to oust the jurisdiction of the justices.

It was argued that the expression, "or the party charged therewith," in sect. 19 of the Act of 1862, being large enough to include the highway board, was meant to apply to it, & had rendered the board indictable under that Act. But a careful consideration of the enactments shows that this is not so. Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 95, directed a summons to issue against the surveyor, if the parish was alleged to be liable, against the party chargeable, if the liability was alleged to be in some one else; & sect. 95 directed that if the liability to repair were disputed by the surveyor on behalf of the parish the justices should order an indictment against the parish—if it were disputed by any other party (which means the party summoned as liable) an indictment should be preferred against him. Sect. 19 of the Act of 1862 alters the procedure in case of parochial liability by substituting the board & the waywarden (upon each of whom had devolved a part of the duties of the surveyor) as the parties to be summoned instead of the surveyor. It does not deal with the case of any other party alleged to be chargeable as to whom no alteration was necessary. But sect. 19 alters the jurisdiction of the ct. before whom the indictment is tried as to costs, & sect. 19 accordingly deals with both cases—that of an indictment against the parish & that of an indictment against some other person alleged to be liable. The two possible cases of liability dealt with are those of the inhabitants, who are clearly treated as still the persons liable to indictment, notwithstanding the existence of the highway board, & (where the parish is not liable), the person who may be so. The contrast is certainly not between the inhabitants of the parish & the highway board. This is a very material consideration in dealing with the subsequent legislation, because by the Act of 1862 all independent action in the matter of repairs was taken from the parish, & yet the liability to indictment—and the sole liability to indictment—as well as the right of the elected representative of the parish to admit or deny on behalf of the parish both the fact of the road being a highway & the liability of the parish to repair were preserved (WILLS, J.). LOUGHBOROUGH HIGHWAY BOARD v. CURZON (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 565; 55 L. J. M. C. 122; 54 L. T. 168; 50 J. P. 101; 34 W. R. 319; 2 T. L. R. 263, D. C.; affd., 17 Q. B. D. 344, C. A.

1135. Order to repair disobeyed—Second order to pay expenses to person named—Appeal from second order Grounds of appeal.]—A complaint having been made to justices that certain roads alleged to be highways under the jurisdiction of a highway board were out of repair, a summons was issued against such board. Upon the hearing, a land surveyor was appointed to view & report on the state of the roads in question. The report was duly made, & the justices, upon the evidence & admissions before them, ordered the highway board to do the repairs. The highway board neglected to obey this order; & the justices appointed such land surveyor to put the highway in repair, & ordered the board to pay the expenses. At several hearings before the justices, the highway board never denied that they were liable to repair the roads in question. The board appealed to quarter sessions against the order upon them for the expenses of repairing the roads. The following were the grounds of appeal: that the justices had no jurisdiction to make the order; that the order was contrary to law; that the order was contrary to the evidence; that the justices wrongfully admitted evidence of witnesses other than the person appointed by them under Highway Act, 1862 (c. 61), s. 18; that at the time of the making of the order the highways had been put into a state of complete & effectual repair; that the sum mentioned in the order to be spent in putting the roads into repair was excessive; that the highway board was & is not liable to repair the highways, & that the liability to repair the highways was at all the hearings before the justices recited in the order, & also at the time of the hearing when the order was made, & at the time of the making thereof, disputed. Upon the appeal it was contended on behalf of the board that the roads in question were not highways, & the order was quashed on that ground:—Held: (1) the highway board were entitled to appeal to quarter sessions against the order, but were not entitled on the appeal to raise the question whether the roads were highways, because they were estopped by their admissions before the justices, because their grounds of appeal gave no notice that the point would be taken, & because the question was not open to them when the order appealed against was made; (2) the quarter sessions, by deciding the question, did not thereby necessarily decide that it was open to the highway board to raise it. —*ILLINGWORTH v. 1141. Form of order Repair “to satisfaction of surveyor”—Surplusage.—Defts. were indicted under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), for the non-repair of a certain highway. The order made by the county council upon defts., directed the repairs to be done to the satisfaction of the county surveyor. It was objected that an order in these terms was not warranted by the sect., & therefore vitiated the indictment: Held: anything in the order inconsistent with sect. 10 of the Act should be ignored, & the objection was accordingly overruled. —*R. v. purpose of widening & improving a street; & served the usual notices to treat under the Lands Clauses Act upon plffs. Plffs. filed their bill to restrain defts. from taking more of the property comprised in the schedule than was actually required for the purpose of widening the street:—Held: defts. required this property for the improvement of the town, from which no profit or compensation was obtained, they were not confined, like railway cos., to the narrow limits of the property actually required for the purpose specified, but were at liberty to purchase all the property included in the schedule.—*QUINTON v. 1148. Surface of road improved—Inhabitants benefited—Incidental benefit to particular class.]—A borough corpn. as highway authority, expended a large sum of money upon altering & paving a road, which was thereby permanently improved. The corpn. bono fide decided that it would be right & proper so to alter & improve the road under the powers conferred on them by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149; but they decided to do the work at the particular time when it was done in order that the Automobile Club might be induced to use this road for proposed motor trials and races:—Held: the ct. could not interfere with the exercise by the corpn. of their powers under the Act, & a writ of certiorari ought not to be granted for the purpose of disallowing the expenditure.—*R. v. This was done & an Order-in-Council approved the survey & transferred & vested the road in the Province of M. for a public highway. The road was only 66 feet wide for many years prior to the survey:—Held: the Surveyor-General had no authority to make the road of a greater width than it had been & the approval of the survey by the Dominion Govt. could not deprive deft. of any land, & he was not bound to move his fence back so as to make the road wider than 66 feet.—*ST. ### PART VIII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

1. Effect of Highway Act.]—Looking to the context & general scope of the Highway (Scotland) Act, 1771 & to the fact that the powers therein conferred were to be exercised for the benefit of the public, the words in sect. 1 though permissive in form, were in effect imperative.—GRAY v. ST. ANDREWS & CUPAR D. CO., [1911] S. C. 268; 48 Sc. L. R. 409.—SCOT.

a. Distinction between English & Colonial Law.]—The Govt. of a new country, when forming for the first time a practicable road upon land which has been dedicated as a highway, is not bound by the rules which govern private persons who interfere with the surface of an ancient highway, as that term is understood in England. They are not bound to make the surface absolutely safe, nor are they liable for accidents which are due to mere imperfections in the road, or to non-repair they are only bound to exercise, in the construction of the roadway, such care to avoid danger to persons using it as is reasonable in the circumstances.—MILLER v. McKEON (1905), 3 C. L. R. 50.—AUS.

b. Municipal corporation—Duty to repair.]—Where a municipal authority assumes the duty of constructing or repairing a street, they must take care & leave the work they do upon it in such condition as not to be dangerous to any one who may use it.—CLARKE v. TOWN OF PORTLAND (1879), 19 N. B. R. 189.—CAN.

c. Statutory powers—To level, raise, or lower streets.]—The power given by Municipal Act, 1873, s. 425, ss. 1, to improve repair, widen, & alter streets, includes the power, when necessary for these purposes to level, raise, or lower the streets.—LEWIS v. CITY OF TORONTO CORPN.

1150. — Assessment by jury—Necessity for notice to owners.]—Under a turnpike Act the trustees had power to turn roads through private grounds, making satisfaction to the owners; & if they could not agree, they were enabled on giving notice to the owners, to summon a jury to ascertain the damage & to order such sum, so ascertained to be paid to the owners. This ct. quashed an inquisition of the jury & an order of the trustees under this Act, because it did not appear on the face of the proceedings that any notice had been given to the owners of the land.—*R. v. 1151. — — — — —]—Where the value of several interests is to be assessed by the jury impanelled under Turnpike Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 85, an inquisition finding one gross sum only, is invalid. An inquisition having been taken, & the jury having returned their verdict:—Held: it was not premature to remove that inquisition by certiorari before the trustees had made any order upon it.

Semble: the notice required to be given to the parties interested previous to the summoning of the jury, should appear in the inquisition.—R. v. NORWICH & WATTON ROAD TRUSTEES (1836), 5 Ad. & El. 563; 2 Har. & W. 385; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 32; 6 L. J. K. B. 41; 111 E. R. 1278.

SUB-SECT. 3. AS TO DITCHES AND DRAINS.

1153. Cleaning & keeping open—Whether liability on authority or adjoining owner—At common law.]—He who has the land adjoining, ought of common right without prescription to scour & cleanse the ditches, next to the way to his land. But he who has land adjoining without prescription, is not bound to repair the way. So of a common river, of common right, all who have ease & passage by it, ought to cleanse & scour it; for a common river is as a common street. But he who has land adjoining to the river is not bound to cleanse the river, unless he has the benefit of it, scilicet a toll, or a fishing, or other profit.—REPAIR OF BRIDGES, HIGHWAYS, ETC., CASE (1609), 13 Co. 1154. — — — — —]—It is the duty at common law of the owner of land next adjoining a highway so to scour & cleanse such ditches on his land as adjoin the highway as to prevent them from causing a nuisance to the highway by their foulness, & the highway authority can, notwithstanding the remedy afforded by Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 67, bring an action against the owner for an injunction restraining the continuance of the nuisance.—A.-G. v. WARING (1899), 63 J. P. 789.

1155. — — — — — Under general Turnpike Act, 1822 (c. 126).]—Above Act, s. 113, enacts "that ditches, etc. of a sufficient depth & breadth for the keeping of turnpike roads dry, & carrying off the water from the same shall be made, scoured, cleansed, & kept open, & sufficient trunks, tunnels, etc., shall be made & laid where carriage ways or footways lead out of the said turnpike roads into the lands or grounds adjoining thereto, by the occupiers of such lands or grounds"; & imposes a penalty in default. The trustees of a turnpike road under a private Act of Parliament made a road with ditches on either side through applt.'s land; on one side of the road was a bank, portions of which slipped down & filled up the ditch on that side, so that water which came from applt.'s land could not be carried off:—Held: applt. could not be convicted under above sect. for not cleansing & keeping open the ditch, as the words "occupiers of the adjoining lands" applied only to the latter part of the sect.—MERIVALE v. EXETER TURNPIKE ROAD TRUSTEES (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 149; 9 B. & S. 70; 37 L. J. M. C. 40; 18 L. T. 83; 32 J. P. 165; 16 W. R. 702.

hedges, but the surveyor, thinking the order was not properly obeyed, summoned him before two justices, who imposed a penalty on him, & after ten days the surveyor himself cut the hedges:—Held: (1) the order was bad in part, because it did not specify in what manner or to what extent the owner was to cut the hedges; but it would have been good if it had directed the owner to cut the hedges in such a manner that the highway might not be prejudiced by the shade thereof, & the sun & wind not excluded from it: (2) the order was good in part so as to justify the surveyor in cutting the hedges, in order to remove any actual obstructions to the highway from the branches of the thorns & bushes; but, so far as it related to the trees, the order was defective, because it did not negative that they were planted for ornament, or shelter to a hop-ground, etc., which trees are excepted in sect. 65 of the Act; & therefore, a new trial in an action for trespass by the owner against the surveyor, should be awarded to inquire whether the surveyor did more than he was entitled to do by the valid part of the order.

Surveyors cannot act unless there has been a previous default of the party in obeying a valid order. It is no answer to say that the party might have appealed from it, & that, if he did not, third persons might act as if he had acquiesced; so to hold would in effect be to deprive parties of part of the time for appeal allowed by the Act, namely, fourteen days, the surveyors being authorised to act at the expiration of the first ten.

(3) The order stated, that A., being the owner of a certain farm, had neglected to cut, etc., the trees & hedges on his said farm, & which were on the side of the carriage-way, etc.:—Held: a sufficient statement that A. was owner of the land next adjoining the carriage-way.

It was also objected to the order, that it was altogether void for the want of a statement that plff. was the owner of the land next adjoining to the road; but the statement, that the trees were growing on plff.'s farm & on the side of the road, is equivalent to it; they could not be growing on the road-side unless they were close to it, according to the strictest construction of the law. *JENNEY v. LLANDILO ROAD COMRS. (1788), 2 Term Rep. 232; 100 E. R. 126.

1168. — Highway authority—Road & ditch liable to floods—Existing fence removed—Misfeasance.]—A fence had been formerly erected, by the then existing highway authority, to protect the public using a highway which was dangerous, owing to its liability to be flooded by a stream that ran by the side of the road. The stream was diverted but the ditch where the former bed of the stream had been was still liable to be filled in time of flood & the water then flowed over the road. After the fence had been in existence for a number of years, defts. adopting the report of their surveyor that the fence was in bad repair, that it was no longer necessary, & that all that was required was the erection of a short length at each end, ordered that the work should be done. The fence was removed, & three weeks later & before any new fence had been put up the road was flooded. A man driving along the road drove into the ditch & was drowned. In an action by his administratrix to recover damages for his death, the jury found that the removal of the fence under the circumstances & in the way in which it had been done, was inconsistent with reasonable regard for the safety of persons using the road. On appeal:—Held: defts. were liable.—WHYLER v. BINGHAM RURAL COUNCIL, [1901] 1 K. B. 45; 70 L. J. Q. B. 207; 83 L. T. 652; 61 J. P. 771; 17 T. L. R. 23, C. A.

a. —.]—Snow had been left on a sidewalk of a street in St. J. for a considerable time, & a ridge of ice had been formed with sloping sides. Pltf., slipped upon the ice & was injured. In an action against the city for negligence:—Held: there was evidence which should have been submitted to the jury to find whether defts. had been guilty of negligence by allowing the snow & ice to accumulate on the sidewalk, & to remain there an unreasonable time, so as to render it unsafe for people to walk upon, the duty of the city being to keep the streets in a reasonable state of repair & safety.—KINNEALY v. At the side of the road between the ditch & a farm fence was a temporary track made by the travelling public, which was safe while the frost lasted & the snow was hard:—Held: it was the duty of defts. to have opened a way through the drift sufficient to enable vehicles such as the wagon in which pltf. was travelling to have passed in safety along this highway; & defts. had notice that the highway was out of repair; & pltf. was entitled to recover.—HOGG v. 1172. Restriction during repairs—Under Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 34), s. 79—Extent of liability.]—Above sect. prescribes certain precautions to be taken during the construction & repair of sewers, streets, & houses. The sect. does not mean that the traffic in the street is to be entirely stopped during the execution of such works but merely that bars & chains or other protection should be placed so as to prevent vehicles & persons, etc., from passing over the place where the works are being executed.—WOODALL v. NUTTALL (1891), 50 J. P. 150; 8 T. L. R. 68, C. A.

1173. Bye-law restricting use of trailers—Whether binding on Crown.]—The rule that the Crown is not bound by a statute unless expressly named, or unless it so appears by necessary implication, applies to a servant of the Crown when acting within the scope of his authority. Where, therefore, a county council, under Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 6, which empowered them to make bye-laws prohibiting or restricting the use of locomotives on highways, but contained no reference therein to the Crown, made a bye-law or insufficiency of a fence, railing, or barrier on the edge of the cliff, there being no statutory obligation in that behalf imposed on them.—GRAHAM v. QUEEN VICTORIA NIAGARA FALLS PARK COMRS. (1896), 23 O. L. 1.—CAN.

1174. Roadside wastes—What are.—Within Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 11.—Strips of grass bordering the metalled part of a main road are "roadside wastes," within above Act. The herbage on such strips is not vested in the county council by sect. 11, sub-sect. 6, of that Act.

C. was tenant for life of the manor which included the waste land adjoining the highways in the parish of S. The metalled part of a main road through S. was bordered by strips of grass with some timber on them. The county council sold the grass by the sides of the main road to T. for a year. At the instance of C. & his tenants, an injunction was granted to restrain the county council from cutting & removing the grass, timber, & other growths from the sides of the main road.—*CURTIS v. #### SUB-SECT. 10.—PROTECTION OF PUBLIC RIGHTS OF WAY.

1177. Removal of obstruction—Whether council acting judicially.—A local board discharging duties in relation to the protection of public rights of way under Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 26 (1), is in the same position as a private individual protecting his own property, & is not acting judicially. Consequently, where an action was brought against a local board to restrain the removal of posts erected on a public footpath by the owners of the adjoining property for the purpose of preventing the footpath from being used for vehicular traffic, & the statement of claim alleged that a member of the board had used his influence with the board for his own private interest, & that in consequence thereof plffs. had failed to induce the board to take steps to prevent the user of the footpath for vehicular traffic:—Held: the real issue was whether or not the posts constituted an obstruction to the public right of way, & the allegations in the statement of claim were irrelevant, & ought to be struck out.—MURRAY v. EPSOM LOCAL BOARD, [1897] 1 Ch. 35; 68 L. J. Ch. 107; 75 L. T. 579; 61 J. P. 71; 45 W. R. 185; 13 T. L. R. 113; 41 Sol. Jo. 157.

1178. Action to restrain—Relevancy of pleading.—MURRAY v. EPSOM LOCAL BOARD, No. 1177, ante.

1179. By private individual—Power of council to contribute to costs of defence.—By Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 26 (1), it is the duty of every district council to protect all public rights of way, & to prevent as far as possible the stopping or obstruction of any such right of way; & by sub-sect. 3 a district council may, for the purpose of carrying the sect. into effect, institute or defend any legal proceedings, & generally take such steps as they deem expedient:—Held: a district council might, under the powers conferred by the sect. contribute to the costs of the defence of an action brought against a private individual who had removed an obstruction in the assertion of an alleged public right of way.—R. v. NORFOLK COUNTY COUNCIL, [1901] 2 K. B. 288; 70 L. J. K. B. 575; 17 T. L. R. 437; sub nom. R. v. NORFOLK COUNTY COUNCIL, Ex p. GREEN, 84 L. T. 822; 65 J. P. 454; 49 W. R. 543; 45 Sol. Jo. 468.

1180. Threat to exercise by servants or agents—Remedy of owner.—If a district council, acting under Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 26, assert that there is a public right of way over plffs.' close & threaten & intend to exercise it by their servants or agents, an action for a declaration & injunction will lie against them.

Qu.: whether the mere assertion that there is a public right of way & the mere provision of legal assistance for the defence of private individuals, who prior to the assertion & without any reference to the district council have exercised the alleged right on their own behalf & been sued in trespass accordingly, would without more give rise to any cause of action against the district council.—THORNHILL v. WEEKS, [1913] 1 Ch. 438; 82 L. J. Ch. 209; 108 L. T. 802; 77 J. P. 231; 57 Sol. Jo. 477; 11 L. G. R. 362.

trespassing on his lands, & they pleaded a public right of footway over his lands. The district council then passed a resolution under Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 3, to defend the action. Thereupon pltf. added them as co-defts. & by his amended statement of claim alleged that they threatened & intended to exercise the alleged right of way. The district council, with the view of avoiding liability for the costs of the action, by their defence denied that they threatened or intended to exercise the right of way, & pleaded that they neither asserted nor denied the existence of the right of way:—Held: this defence did not infringe any rule of pleading & was not embarrassing, & the liability (if any) of the district council for costs would be determined at the trial of the action.—THORNHILL v. WEEKS (No. 2), [1913] 2 Ch. 404; 82 L. J. Ch. 485; 109 L. T. 146; 11 L. G. R. 1182, C. A.

1184. — Assertion unsuccessful—Declaration against public authority.—An action was brought by certain landowners against private individuals for removing obstructions to an alleged public right of way. The district council having passed & acted on a resolution to defend the action under Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 20, were themselves made defts., & a declaration that there was no public right of way was asked against them. On an application by the district council to be struck out as defts., *pltf.*s. were allowed to amend by alleging that the district council threatened & intended to use the alleged public right of way by their servants or agents. The district council then put in a defence stating that they neither claimed nor denied that the public right of way claimed by their co-defts. in fact existed, & they denied any threat or intention to use it by their servants or agents, but though really innocent of any such threat or intention, they in fact conducted the whole defence on the main issue, namely, the existence of the public right of way, up to the trial, & failed to establish it:—Held: *pltf.*s. were entitled to a declaration with costs against all defts. including the district council. THORNHILL v. WEEKS (No. 3), [1915] 1 Ch. 106; 81 L. J. Ch. 282; 111 L. T. 1007; 78 J. P. 151; 12 L. G. R. 597.

1186. Action for declaration of public right—Whether Attorney-General a necessary party.—Pltf. council asked for a declaration as to a public right of way & for consequential relief. Def. by his defence, admitted the claim as to part, but denied it as to another part, & submitted that the action was not maintainable, the A.-G. not being a party. The action was subsequently settled, judgment being taken on agreed minutes, the defence being withdrawn. At the hearing it was submitted on behalf of *pltf.*s. that the action was rightly constituted:—Held: this was so, & in the circumstances the A.-G. was not a necessary party.—NEWTON ABBOT RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. WILLS (1913), 77 J. P. 333.

SUB-SECT. 11.—LIGHTING HIGHWAYS AND STREETS.

A. In General.

1187. Liability for failure to light—Power to light discretionary.—The trustees of a public road, who were empowered & required by Act of Parliament to place lamps along the road, if they should think necessary, & to make contracts for the cleansing of the road, & to take a night-toll for the purpose of enabling them to light & watch the same, were held not liable in an action upon the case for an injury suffered by an individual in crossing the road at night, by falling over a heap of scrapings, left on the road-side, after cleansing the road, without any lights.—HARRIS v. BAKER (1815), 4 M. & S. 27; 105 E. R. 745.

1190. — Statutory duty to light.—Defts. a metropolitan borough council, constructed a street refuge under powers conferred Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 108, & erected on it an electric lamp standard under s. 130 of the same Act. Owing to the war the lighting was diminished by the authorities, & defts. were aware that the lights had become irregular. On a dark night the lamp went out & pltf.'s taxicab was driven into the posts of the refuge & he was injured. In an action for negligence the jury found that defts. were negligent in omitting to maintain a danger lamp on the refuge but that there was no conclusive evidence as to what caused the lamp to go out:—Held: although the Act, while imposing on defts. the duty of lighting the streets, did not impose on them any duty to light the refuge, yet the fact that in spite of the directions of the authorities for the diminution of lighting defts. continued to light their refuges imposed on them the duty of watching the lamps so that a warning could be given, & there was evidence to support the finding of negligence, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—BALDOCK v. 1191 i. Liability for failure to light—Obstruction during repairs.—Defts., a township corp., asked the Department of Public Works of the Province of Ontario to construct concrete bridges in the township, at the expense of the Department. A superintendent employed by the department commenced the construction of a culvert in a certain road in the township, though that was not one of the works included in the application; after work upon the culvert had been going on for two weeks, pltf., travelling over the road in a motor-car, on a dark night, was injured & his car was damaged by reason of the dangerous condition of the road at the place where the work was being done, which was left unlighted & unguarded. In an action for damages for the injury & loss thus sustained:—Held: the accident happened by reason of the gross negligence of the superintendent, in failing to protect effectively what was in essence a trap for the public using the road, & it seemed unreasonable

It declined sharply & was bounded on one side by a retaining wall about 5 feet high separating it from land at a higher level. The land & the retaining wall were the property of a private owner. In pursuance of sect. 161 of the Act the authority placed a lamp on the retaining wall, but extinguished it every night soon after 9 o'clock in accordance with a resolution passed on Dec. 12, 1918. On Dec. 25, 1918, at 11.30 p.m., pltf., intending to go home by the street, missed his way without negligence, strayed on to the private land, & fell over the retaining wall into the street & was injured. In an action against the urban authority for negligence in the performance of an alleged duty to light the street sufficiently:—Held: the Act confers upon urban authorities a discretion, but imposes on them no obligation to light the streets in their districts; consequently defts. who had begun were not bound to continue to light the street; & having done nothing to make the street dangerous they were under no obligation, whether by lighting or otherwise, to give warning of danger.—SIMPARD v. Where justices sign a warrant to enforce a rate made at such second meeting, they act without jurisdiction if that meeting be an illegal one, & trespass lies against them at the suit of any one distrained on under their warrant, for they are not protected by a rate apparently good, but by one actually good only.—WILKINSON v. the voters assented. A rate was laid upon the district, in conformity with this. S., one of the parties so rated, having refused to pay the rate, was summoned before the justices, when he objected that, the latter meeting having been held within a year of the former, the proceedings were void by sect. 16 of the Act & the rate invalid. The parties agreed that the question was whether the two meetings were substantially the same. In May, 1852, the inspectors made an order on the overseers to raise & levy £150 under the Act. Part of the amount only was collected: & in June, 1853, a second order of the inspectors was made on the overseers to levy the arrears, & also a fresh sum ordered for the expenses of the current year:—Held: the meeting ought to have been called by the churchwardens of the parish K. under above Act & not by the chapelwardens of the district; & therefore the provisions of the Act had not been properly adopted; & all that had been done under the Act was void.—*R. v. A poor rate having been made to defray the expenses a railway co. was assessed in respect of the full ratable value of its property, which consisted of land occupied & used as a railway:—Held: upon the true construction of the order the rural authority was invested only with the power of an urban authority to incur lighting expenses under the provisions of the first paragraph of sect. 161 & not with the rating powers applicable to an urban authority under the Act; the expenses were rightly treated as general & not as special expenses under sect. 229; & the co. was not entitled to be rated under sect. 211 of the Act & in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the ratable value.—*LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. By Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 38, "in this Act 'county' has the same meaning as it has in Highway Acts, 1862 & 1861," & by sect. 13 any road which has between Dec. 31, 1870, & the date of the Act ceased to be a turnpike road . . . shall be deemed to be a main road, &

one-half of the expenses incurred in the maintenance shall, as to every part thereof which is within the limits of any highway area, be paid to the highway authority of such area "by the county authority of the county in which such road is situate" out of the county rate. A road in the borough & highway area of Over Darwen, in Lancashire, ceased to be a turnpike road in 1877:—Held: although for the purposes of Highway Act, 1862, boroughs are not to be considered as forming parts of counties, yet as the road was within the geographical limits of Lancashire, the county of Lancaster was the "county in which such road is situate" within sect. 13 of 1878 Act, & the county authority was liable to pay half the expenses incurred in the maintenance of such road.—*OVER DARWEN CORPN. v. 1222. Degree of liability—Whether whole cost of maintenance—Main road in quarter sessions borough.]—A quarter sessions borough of 10,000 or upwards, not a county borough which has claimed to retain the maintenance & repair of the main roads within it under Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), ss. 11, 35, is not entitled as of right to the payment by the county council of the whole of the costs of such maintenance & repair, & in default of agreement between the borough & the county council, the amount of the payment can only be settled by arbitration of the Local Government Board under sect. 11, sub-sect. 3 of the Act.—Re BEDFORDSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL & BEDFORD URBAN SANITARY AUTHORITY, [1894] 2 Q. 1225. Effect of agreement between borough authority & tramway company.—By Blackburn & Over Darwen Tramways Act, 1870, s. 47, it is enacted that, "the co. shall maintain & keep in good repair the entire width of any road, exclusive of the footpath or foot pavement, along or across which any of their tramways shall be laid . . . & if the co. at any time fail or neglect so to do, the road authority may cause the necessary repairs to be done, & may in such case recover the reasonable cost of such repairs from the co. Provided that the provisions of this sect. shall only apply when steam power is used on the tramways. Provided also, that notwithstanding anything in this sect. contained, the co. may, from time to time, enter into & make such contracts or agreements with the road authority of either borough for the repair & maintenance of such road as may be approved by the Board of Trade." The road in question was a main road, on which a steam-tramway had been constructed in 1880. By an agreement dated May 1, 1880, & duly approved by the Board of Trade, made between the highway authority of D. & the tramway co., it was agreed that the co. should only be liable in respect of the repair of so much of the said road as lay between the rails & 3 feet 6 inches beyond, & that the corpn. should maintain & keep in repair the whole width of the said road, & that the co. should pay to the corpn. a proportionate part of the expenses so incurred by the corpn. The county authority having denied their liability, to pay half of the amount expended by the highway authority in the repair & maintenance of the said road:—Held: the county authority were liable to pay their contribution, & the agreement between the highway authority & the co. had been legally made under the powers given by the proviso in sect. 47 of the Act.—*OVER DARWEN CORPN. v. 1226. Right to recoupment from Exchequer Contribution Account—Main roads declared repairable by hundreds.]—The maintenance of main roads throughout a county remains a "general county purpose" within Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), ss. 11 (1), 68, & chargeable on the Exchequer Contribution Fund appropriated under that Act for "general county purposes," although the county council may by resolution adopt Highway Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 20, & throw the expense of maintaining main roads on the hundreds.—*R. v. 1227. Reference to local government board—Decision "otherwise than as arbitrators"—Jurisdiction of court to interfere.]—London Government Act, 1890 (c. 14), s. 7 (1), enacts that where any duty is transferred from the London County Council to a borough council by or under the Act the county council shall contribute to the borough council such amount, if any, as may be finally determined by the local govt. board. Sect. 28 (3) enacts that when the local govt. board are authorised by the Act to determine any matter, it shall be at their option to determine the matter as arbitrators or otherwise. An application was made by several metropolitan borough councils to the local govt. board to determine the amount to be contributed by the county council in respect of the maintenance of main roads which was transferred to the borough councils by sect. 6 (1) of the Act. The local govt. board decided "otherwise than as arbitrators" that no contribution should be made:—Held: the ct. ought not to interfere.—R. v. LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD, Ex p. HACKNEY BOROUGH COUNCIL (1908), 72 J. P. 211; 6 L. G. R. 665, D. C.

1228. Mode of payment—Payment by local authority spread over term of years.]—A county council is bound to repay the whole burden of the cost of maintaining main roads to the urban authority under Local Government Act (c. 41), s. 11, but the council have only to defray that burden in the same way as the urban authority did, & whether it be defrayed out of current rates, or by means of a loan. If the urban authority spread the cost over two or three years, the county council may do the same.—MARLBOROUGH TOWN COUNCIL v. WILTS COUNTY COUNCIL (1894), 58 J. P. 213, D. C.

1229. District comprising several parishes—

Whether parishes separately rated—Each parish maintaining own highways.]—Where several parishes or places separately maintaining their own highways are comprised in the district assigned to a local board of health, the highways throughout the district are, under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 87, to be maintained by a general district rate, & not by separate highway rates on the ancient divisions.—MOSELEY v. ELY LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (1856), 6 E. & B. 518; 26 L. J. M. C. 23; 3 Jur. N. S. 42; 119 E. R. 958.

1230. District comprising several townships—Whether townships separately rated.]—A local board of health for a district consisting of a parish comprising three townships came within the description set out in Local Government Act, 1858 (c. 98), “where no public works of paving, water supply & sewerage are established,” & the local board levied a district highway rate for one of the townships:—Held: they had no authority to do so, for the highway rate could alone be levied over the whole district.—Re BROUGHTON LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (1865), 12 L. T. 310; 29 J. P. Jo. 324.

1231. District coterminous with ancient parish—Whether expenses raised by district or highway rate.]—The maintenance of the highways within the district of a local board of health must be provided for by a district rate, & not by a highway rate, whether the district be or be not coterminous with an ancient parochial division.—*TAFF VALE RY. 1232. District extended—Power to levy improvement rate over extension—Construction of local Act.]—By a local Act, after defining the limits of the town of C. for the purposes of the Act, the comrs. appointed thereunder were authorised to levy an annual rate on the occupiers of dwelling-houses within the limits of the Act not exceeding 2s. 1d. in the pound, & all persons assessed under the Act were released from liability for the repairs of highways without the limits of the Act. By Public Health Act, 1872 (c. 79), the district within the local Act became an urban district, & the comrs. became the urban authority. The expenses incurred by them in the execution of the Sanitary Acts were, at the time of the passing of the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), payable out of rates in the nature of general district rates leviable by them through the whole of their district. At the time of the passing of Local Government Act, 1891 (c. 73), the parish of C. was partly within & partly without the urban district of C., but by a Confirmation Order of the Local Government Board in 1894 the urban district was extended as so to include the part of the parish outside the former urban district, & it was provided that the district should be deemed to have been extended before the passing of the Act of 1891. Applt. was the occupier of a dwelling-house within the limits of the local Act. In 1896 the C. urban district council made a rate for the whole district, including the added area, headed the “C. Improvement Rate for the year ending Midsummer 1897.” The rate exceeded the amount in the pound limited by the local Act. It was made to defray expenses to be incurred by the council under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), including the purposes for which rates were leviable under the local Act; & was for the repair of highways, both within the limits of the local Act & also in the added area:—Held: the rate was a good one, & was rightly headed.—HILL v. CREDITON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1899), 80 L. T. 861, C. A.

1233. Public work of saving water supply & sewerage—Construction of stone kerbs—Half expense paid by local authority.]—A local board under Public Health Act had been in the habit, by arrangement with the owners or occupiers adjoining, of constructing stone kerbs along the footpaths of certain roads & streets in their district, & of paying half the expense:—Held: this was not a “public work of paving” within Local Government Act, 1858 (c. 98), s. 37, clause 1, & therefore the local board were entitled to levy a highway rate for the repair of highways in their district.—BIRMINGHAM CANAL CO. v. DOCKER (1860), 21 J. P. 691.

1234. — — —.]—Applts., a local district board, made a general district rate, & a highway rate, & demanded the same from resps., who had constructed two compensation reservoirs in connection with the supply of water for the town of B. Resps. contended that the local board had no power to levy a highway rate because in 1880 they laid down in their district a curbstone, about 300 yards long, as a coping to a cinder pathway of a carriage road:—Held: putting down the curbstone did not constitute the establishment of public works of paving within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 216 (3), & therefore applts. were entitled to levy a highway rate.—OXENHOPE DISTRICT LOCAL BOARD v. BRADFORD CORPN. (1882), 47 L. T. 311; 47 J. P. 21; 31 W. R. 322.

1235. — — — Repair of highways taken over—No addition to existing sewers.]—In B. urban sanitary district when formed & when the local board began in 1877 to take charge of the repair of highways there were some old-fashioned stone drains or culverts into which some houses sent their sewage, & into which storm water entered through gratings, but the board had not added to these nor made any new works themselves. The board made a highway rate & assessed occupiers thereto:—Held: the existing drains sufficiently answered the description of public works within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 216 (3), & therefore, the expense of highway repairs should have been levied not by a highway rate but by a general district rate.—R. v. BELPER LOCAL BOARD (1881), 46 J. P. 166.

1237. — Extension of district.—By a local improvement Act, passed in 1854, comrs. were incorporated, & a district was defined; & the comrs. were empowered to cause to be paved, drained, & otherwise improved, the town & township comprised in the district, & to be the surveyors of highways within the same, & keep the same in repair; to "do all acts, matters, & things for promoting the health, comfort, & convenience of the inhabitants" of the district, which they might deem or consider necessary, & "for that purpose" to "exercise all the powers vested in them" by the Act & the Acts incorporated therewith, amongst which were the Companies Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 16), & parts of the Towns Improvement (Clauses) Act, 1817 (c. 34).

The ct. granted an injunction to restrain the comrs. from applying any moneys produced by rates towards the promotion of a bill in Parliament the object of which was to obtain an extension of their district.—*A.-G. v. SECT. 5.—LIABILITIES.*SUB-SECT. 1.—LIABILITY AS HIGHWAY AUTHORITY.*A. For Non-Feasance.

1239. Liability as highway authority & sanitary authority distinguished.—This was an action tried before a jury in which plff. sought to recover damages for personal injuries occasioned to her through having fallen off her bicycle owing to the defective condition of a gully in a road in defts.' district, defts. being both highway authority & sewer authority. The jury found negligence against defts. in both capacities, & judgment was entered for her. There was no evidence before the jury as to the capacity in which defts. controlled the gully, & no question was left to the jury as to whether defts. knew, or had the means of knowledge, or ought to have known, of the defect in the gully. No direction was given to the jury to address their minds to this question in answering the question of negligence. Defts. applied for judgment or a new trial:—Held: it ought to be determined whether the gully was a thing for which the road authority were responsible to the exclusion of the sewer authority, or for which the sewer authority were responsible to the exclusion of the road authority, or for which they were both responsible, for the reason that if the gully was vested in them as road authority defts. would not be liable for mere non-feasance; if it should be found that defts. were responsible for the gully as sewer authority, it ought to be determined, in order to ascertain whether there was actionable negligence, whether the defect was known, or with reasonable diligence would have been known to defts.; therefore there must be a new trial.—*PAPWORTH v. By sect. 125, vestries are required to employ a sufficient number of persons, or to contract with any co. or persons for removing all dirt, ashes, rubbish, & filth with their parishes. Pltf., the guardians of a union, were possessed of a workhouse situate within defts.' parish. Defts. refused to remove from it the dirt, ashes, rubbish, & filth there collected; *pltf.*s. were in consequence obliged to remove same & thereby incurred expense:—Held: an action was maintainable by *pltf.*s. to enable them to recover from defts. the expense incurred by them in removing the dirt, ashes, rubbish, & filth from the workhouse.

The meter had been supplied by a water co. to defts. to enable them to water their streets under the powers given to them for that purpose by sect. 116, & the flap had been worn smooth by traffic. was brought against the corpn. for injuries caused to pltf.'s horse by the negligence of defts., in that they had not properly repaired a road. The want of repair was admitted, but there was no evidence of misfeasance on the part of defts.:—Held: the mere fact that a new body was created with the duty to repair roads did not of itself impose on the new body a liability to actions for damages caused by non-repair of roads; & if & so far as Hartnell v. Ryde Comrs., No. 1242, ante, laid down a rule to the contrary, it must be taken to have been overruled. No fresh liability was created when the duty to repair was transferred by the local Act; & the action could not be maintained. Under the modern authorities a transfer to a public corpn. of the obligation to repair roads does not of itself render the corporation liable to an action for damages for non-feasance as distinguished from misfeasance; & the question whether such a liability is imposed upon them must be determined by the language of the particular Act of Parliament.—*MACUIRE v. 1256. — — —.]—An action was brought against defts., a highway authority, to recover damages for injury sustained by pltf. in consequence of defts. negligently placing certain pitch or tar on a road, & negligently allowing same to remain for an unreasonable time, whereby the road became uneven & dangerous; alternatively for damages for a nuisance. The evidence showed that the injuries were caused by pltf.'s mare slipping on a pool of pitch or tar, which had, in consequence of the hot weather, oozed up between the setts of wood or stone from the asphalt beneath. The road had been constructed a long time before the accident. A county ct. judge held that there was no evidence to go to the jury of misfeasance on the part of defts., & as they were not liable in damages for mere omission to repair, he non-suited pltf.:—Held: as no evidence was given before the county ct. judge that the road had been improperly constructed, he was right in concluding that the accident did not arise from the misfeasance of defts.—HOLLOWAY v. BIRMINGHAM CORPN. (1905), 69 J. P. 358; 3 L. G. R. 878, D. C.

1257. — — —.]—A footpath which was a highway adjoined the entrance to a ballast yard. In 1910 the footpath was composed of hoggins, & where it adjoined the entrance to the yard it sloped for a distance of two feet outwards, to a depth of nine inches, where it met the entrance, & then inside the entrance the ground fell a further three inches to the level of the ground in the yard. The female pltf. slipped in this hole in the footpath & injured herself. In 1900 defts. had taken over the footpath as highway authority in succession to the vestry. In 1900 the footpath was in same position & constructed in same way & of same material as in 1910. In or about the year 1904 defts. repaired this footpath, the surface being slightly coated with hoggins. It appeared that on that occasion any hole or depression must have been filled up. Defts. purchased the ballast yard in 1907, at which time the hole existed. It appeared that the hoggins used to slip down the slope into the yard, & that this process was aided by the traffic of persons into defts.' yard. Immediately after the accident defts. placed a stone step at the entrance to the yard, thus keeping in position the footway. Pltfs. brought an action against defts. for damages for her injuries:—Held: there was no evidence on these facts that defts. were liable to pltfs. either as highway authority or as owners of the ballast yard. They were not liable as highway authority as they had not been guilty of any misfeasance; they were not liable as owners of the ballast yard, as they were under no liability to provide an artificial support to the highway to prevent it slipping down on to the lower level, at all events in the absence of evidence that they had dug a hole in their land so causing the highway to slide.

A highway authority is not liable in an action by a passer-by for non-feasance. Long established rules of prudence have prevented a highway authority from being exposed, as they would be, to the complaint of every tramp. They are not liable for non-feasance; they are liable for misfeasance—something they positively do to injure the road: either by raising the ground suddenly higher, so as to create an elevated obstruction or by digging the ground suddenly lower, so as to create an obstruction by depression & possibly in other ways for misfeasance, they are liable, & there are cases in which you have to look very carefully with the facts to see whether they establish non-feasance or misfeasance. When you are once certain they establish only non-feasance the highway authority is not liable in an action (PHILLIMORE, J.).—SHORT v. HAMMERSMITH CORPN. (1910), 101 L. T. 70; 75 J. P. 82; 9 L. Pltf. was injured by a defect in the pavement at a spot where a trench had been opened by the gas co. There was evidence that the pavement was defective before the accident:—Held: (1) the onus of proving that the gas co. had not given due notice of their intention to do the work was upon defts.: (2) there was evidence of negligence for the jury & defts. were liable.—*BURROWS v. The road had been paved seventeen years ago with wood blocks. Owing to a heavy rainfall these wood blocks at a particular part of the road had swollen & bulged upwards so as to cause a dangerous obstruction in the road. On arriving municipal corpn. by statute does not make the corpn. an insurer against accidents on its streets & therefore, an action does not necessarily lie for every defect in the streets which occasion injury.—CLARK v. WINNIPEG (CITY) & WINNIPEG ELECTRIC RY. CO., at this point of the road the omnibus came into contact with the obstruction caused by the bulging of the blocks, & was thus driven into collision with an electric-light standard. Pltf. suffered injuries & brought an action in the county ct. The evidence showed that the road had been properly constructed when the wood paving was originally laid down; but it was admitted by defts. that wood paving has always a tendency to rise after heavy rain from the swelling or bulging of the blocks. Defts. were also shown to have been aware of the actual bulging of the blocks in the road in question some time before the happening of the accident to pltf. & that they neither repaired the road nor fenced off the parts that had bulged. The county ct. judge gave judgment for pltf. on the ground that the construction of the road by defts. with a material which they knew was likely to become dangerous after rain, together with the further fact that they had not repaired the road, or fenced off such portions of it as had swollen & bulged after they had knowledge of this having occurred, amounted to misfeasance, & was not merely non-feasance:—Held: the facts did not show a case of misfeasance on the part of the highway authority, & there was nothing more than neglect to repair the road, & no distinction can be drawn between neglect to repair a road out of repair through ordinary wear & tear, & neglect to repair a road in disrepair caused by the surface rising above its ordinary level.

If one thing is clear in these cases it is this: that a highway authority can only be successfully sued for damages, through the highway under their control being dangerous, when it can be shown that the danger was caused by their doing work on the highway badly or improperly. If the damage were caused because they chose to do nothing at all to the road they were not liable (Lush, J.).—Moul v. Tilling (Thomas), Ltd. (1918), 88 L. J. K. B. 505; 34 T. L. 1261. ———.—]—I understand the authorities to lay down on the one side that if there is a highway the highway authority are not responsible for doing nothing to the highway, letting it take its own course, but that if they do interfere then they must interfere with care. If they interfere, whether as highway authority or as sewer authority or as owners of the property, they must still do it with care; if they do not do it with care they are guilty of negligence for which an action for negligence will lie (HorrIDGE, J.).—*Andrews v. Residents in the neighbourhood, seeing its dangerous condition, took some posts & placed them in the hole. Pltfs. were driving along the road, & on reaching the drain the horse stumbled & fell, whereby pltfs. were injured:—Held: defts. must be deemed to have had notice of the condition in which the drain was at the time of the accident, & were liable for any injury resulting.—*Duck v. 1264. — Failure to cut overhanging branches.]—Pltf. suffered personal injuries through defts.' neglect of their duty to lop the branches of the trees in Victoria Park:—Held: this being mere non-feeance defts. were not liable.

If the servants of the London County Council had in pursuance of their duty lopped the trees so as to prevent them from being a nuisance & in the course of doing so had negligently let a branch fall on a passer-by & so caused an injury, then that would have been a misfeasance & the London County Council would have been liable (LORD RUSSELL OF KILLOWEN, C.J.).—*TREGELLAS v. 1265. — Non-repair of ditch in highway.]—By an award the comrs. set out certain public carriage roads or highways & also certain allotments. There was a provision in the award that each allotment holder should discharge the water from his allotment on to the adjoining allotment. Pltf. brought an action against defts., the rural district council, for failure to cleanse & keep in repair a ditch on one of the roads set out under the award, whereby his fields were damaged. It appeared that defts. had not cleaned out the ditch, & that they had cut grips from the road into the ditch & cleaned out the grips from time to time. The drainage from two cottages on the other side of the road passed under the road through a culvert into the ditch:—Held: (1) the road was not an allotment under the award, & therefore, defts. were not bound to carry off the water from the ditch under the provisions of the

1 to 3½ or 4 feet below the level of the travelled snow-road, & the descent into them was very steep. The depth of the snow outside the one beaten trail was so great that it was impossible for a loaded sleigh such as pltf. was driving to turn out so as to avoid the pitch-holes, & that the defects in the road had existed for a considerable time & could have been remedied by a small expenditure of money:—Held: defts. were liable for the damages sustained by pltf.—*KENNEDY v. Pitfs. drove out of town in the morning before the trench was dug, & were returning after dark, when they were thrown into the trench, which, in the meantime, had been dug across the greater part of the street, & had been left unguarded & insufficiently lighted:—Held: the corpn. were guilty of negligence in not properly guarding the excavation, & the driver of the carriage could have avoided the accident by the exercise of reasonable care.—WEIR v. COOK (1876), 26 C. P. 182.—CAN.

k. ——On one side of a travelled road which defts. were bound to keep in repair, was a declivity down which a pile of wood, composed of blocks cut in two feet lengths, had been thrown by a person living near the highway. Some of the wood was upon the bed of the road, but a portion, estimated at from twenty-one to twenty-six feet, was free from obstruction, & the road itself was not defective. Pltf.'s horse, in passing, shied at the wood, threw him off, & injured him:—Held: defts. were not guilty of a breach of the statutory duty imposed upon them by R. S. O. 1877, c. 174, s. 491, to "keep in repair," & they were therefore not liable.—MAXWELL v. TOWNSHIP OF CLARKE (1879), 4 A. R. 460.—CAN.

Pitfs. were driving with their horse & buggy along the allowance, while passing the place in question, the horse became frightened & swerved from the beaten track in the direction of the pile, & in attempting to turn back again to the road, the front wheel of the buggy came in contact with a log lying about two or three feet from the travelled way, whereby the buggy was overturned, & pitfs. thrown out & injured:—Held*: defts. were liable therefor.—*KELLY v. Were, therefore, after the lapse of such ten days, pltf. in passing by with a horse & waggon was thrown out & injured, in consequence of the horse taking fright at the waggon & board, & shying:—Held: that the corpn. were not liable.—HOUNDS v. Several property-owners arranged in some way to have gratings or light areas inserted in the sidewalk opposite their respective properties. These gratings were put in & paid for by the owners themselves. There was no evidence that the city, by resolution or by-law, ever consented to these gratings being placed in the sidewalk. Two gratings, inserted in that portion of the sidewalk fronting the property owned by the third party, contained a large number of light prisms, & some of these prisms were broken in such a way as to make holes in the sidewalk, upon & long before Nov. 15, 1912, when pltf., passing along the sidewalk, had the heel of his boot caught in one of the holes, by reason of which he was thrown to the ground & severely injured:—Held: the city corpn. against which he brought this action to recover damages for his injuries, was liable to him.—*HUTCHINSON v. the public by its owner. Across the end of the street was an unfenced natural ravine. In 1901 defts. took over the street under the provisions of a private Act of Parliament similar to those contained in the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), & paved & made it up & subsequently maintained it. They also lighted it under their statutory powers, which authorised them to do such acts as they should think necessary for lighting their district. In 1910 a motor car containing the pltf. while being driven along the street at night fell over the ravine in consequence, it was alleged, of the ravine being unfenced & the street being insufficiently lighted. In an action by pltf. to recover damages for injuries sustained, the jury found that the street as made up & constructed was a danger to persons using it, that the unfenced ravine was a hidden trap, & that defts. had not taken proper care to warn the public of the danger : —Held : the effect of the findings of the jury was that defts. in taking over & making up the street & leaving it in a dangerous condition had been guilty of misfeasance, & also that they had acted negligently in the performance of their statutory duties with regard to maintaining & lighting the street, & pltf. was, therefore, entitled to judgment.

There are many public duties, no doubt, for the non-performance of which a plff. cannot sue because he loses the benefit of what would have been done if the duty had been performed, as, for instance, the obligation to provide a system of sewerage for the benefit of a district; but if a duty is undertaken & improperly performed, & actual damage is occasioned thereby, the person injured has, as I have already stated, a perfectly good cause of action (LUSH, J.).- *McCLELLAND v. 1272. — [Misfeasance of predecessors.]—Pltf. in this case was driving upon a highway within defts.' district of which they were the highway authority. His pony suddenly put his foot through the crust of the highway & fell; pltf.'s arm was broken & his pony injured. He brought an action against defts. for £170 damages, alleging that the accident was caused by the improper construction by defts. of a drain under the highway. At the hearing he failed to prove that defts. had constructed the drain in question, but by arrangement he was allowed, without formal amendment of the pleadings, to contend that the drain was made by defts.' "predecessors in title," by which was intended their predecessors in the office of highway authority, & that defts. were liable for their predecessors' misfeasance. On this question the jury found that the accident was caused by the negligent construction of the drain & that the drain was constructed by some of defts.' predecessors in title, & they assessed the damages at £100. On those findings judgment was entered for plff. Defts. appealed:—Held: (1) as there was no right of action for damages against a highway authority until actual damage had accrued, the preceding highway authorities were not under any liability which could be passed on to their successors; & (2) on the true construction of the Acts of Parliament creating the successive highway authorities, there was nothing to make any such authority liable for acts of misfeasance committed by its predecessors. —NASH v. ROCHEFORD RURAL COUNCIL. [1917] 1 K. B. 381; 80 L. J. K. B. 370; 116 L. T. 120; 81 J. P. 57; 15 L. G. R. 103. C. A.

1273. Effect of contributory negligence.]— In an action to recover damages for the death of a horse which died after pulling a loaded waggon over a stretch of country road which was being laid with granite by defts., the particulars of negligence alleged were that the road was not closed; that no warning notice was erected; that the road had not been scarified; that the road was not laid in halves; that the road was laid with granite to so great a depth as five inches. There was evidence to support these allegations. It appeared also that the stretch of country road was about 130 feet in length, part of it rolled, part of it rolled but not rolled in, & the rest of it unrolled, or only rolled once. The waggoner put his horse to the task without asking for help from the men with the steam-roller that was there or otherwise. The waggon could not turn round in the lane. The jury found that there was negligence on the part of defts servants; that pltf. & his driver could not, by the exercise of reasonable care, have avoided the consequences of defts negligence; & that the death of pltf.'s horse was the natural & necessary consequence of defts negligence: Held: there was evidence of negligence to be left to the jury, but as the waggoner saw the condition of the road & elected to take the risk of drawing the waggon over it, the death of the horse was not the natural & necessary consequence of defts negligence, & therefore pltf. was not entitled to recover damages.—TORRANCE v. ILFORD URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL. (1909), 73 J. P. 225; 25 T. L. R. 355; 53 Sol. Jo. 301; 7 L. G. R. 554, C. A.

1274. What amounts to misfeasance—Non-repair of drain constructed by authority.]—The municipality of B., having the care, construction & management of the roads & streets within their municipality, constructed therein a barrel drain doing of a lawful act in such way as to endanger the safety of the public is misfeasance.—KEECH v. SMITH'S FALLS TOWN (1907), 11 O. W. R. 309; 15 O. L. R. 300.—CAN.

into which ran an open drain, the brickwork of which having been broken away, & not having been repaired, a hole was caused, into which pltf.'s horse fell, carrying the pltf. with him, crushing pltf.'s leg against one side of the hole, & causing a compound fracture of the leg. In an action claiming damages against the municipality (a) for negligence in constructing the street, (b) for negligence in keeping & maintaining the street, & not repairing the drain, gutter, or sewer in the street (plea, the general issue) the judge directed the jury that defts. under their Act of incorporation were not liable for the result of any mere nonfeasance; that if they thought fit to construct a sewer, & did the work in so negligent a manner as to bring about the accident, they were liable for that misfeasance; but if they constructed the sewer properly in the first instance & it became defective afterwards they were not bound to repair it; & further, that if the defective state in which the drain was arose from the operation of the weather or wear & tear, it having been properly constructed originally, they were not liable. Verdict for defts.:—Held: as regards (b) there was misdirection. The barrel drain was not only made by the defts., but the sole control & management of it were by the statute vested in them. By reason of their construction of that drain & their neglect to repair it, whereby, as an indirect but natural consequence the dangerous hole was formed, which was left open & unfenced, they caused a nuisance in the highway for which, whatever their statutory obligation to repair may have been, they were liable to an indictment, & also to an action by pltf. who had sustained direct & particular damage from their breach of duty.—*BATHURST BOROUGH v. The Corp'n. under powers conferred upon them by a local Act, determined to widen the highway by setting back the kerbstone & throwing the causeway into the road. On the edge of the causeway nearest the road there was a telegraph pole, which it was necessary to remove, & the Corp'n. wrote to the post office authorities asking them to set back the pole to the improved street line. The post office accordingly had the pole removed & the hole filled in. Shortly afterwards the Corp'n. threw the road open for traffic. A few days later a steam wagon belonging to pltf. was passing along the highway when one of its wheels sank into the hole & the wagon was considerably damaged. In an action brought by pltf. against the Corp'n. & the post office authorities to recover damages for injury to his wagon caused by the negligence of defts.:—Held: defts. were liable, the Corp'n. upon the ground that they were altering the character of the part of an old road, i.e. in effect making a new road, & their duty was to so make it that when they threw it open for public use it should be reasonably safe for the purposes for which it was intended to be used; the post office authorities upon the ground that having done, perhaps voluntarily, a piece of work they did it negligently.—*THOMPSON v. 1286. — Fire plug covered up—Work of fire brigade delayed.]—Pltfs. sought from defts. damages alleged to have been occasioned by their negligence in covering up a fire plug with a layer of earth & in not properly indicating the position of the fire plug, whereby the efforts of a fire brigade to extinguish a fire on their premises were retarded. A plate with the letters & figures "F. P. 22 ft. 3 in." had been put in the road by defts., but the plug was some feet out of position in relation to the plate, although the plug could have been seen if it had not been covered up. The road had not been taken over by the local authority. A jury found that the authority were negligent in not keeping the plug level with the surface of the road & in not indicating its situation, but that there was no evidence that they had covered up the fire plug. They also found that this negligence caused delay in extinguishing the fire, & awarded damages:—Held: the finding of the jury that there was negligence in not indicating on the plug plate the position of the fire plug was a finding of misfeasance against defts., & defts. were liable for the damage caused to pltfs., by such misfeasance. 1287. — Damage to adjoining owners—Retaining wall causing flood—Unusual flow of water.]—Defts., the highway board & local authority for the district, built a retaining wall across a street for the purpose of altering the level of a roadway. This wall did not interfere with the ordinary flow of surface water across the street & alongside pltf.'s premises, but owing to the wrongful act of third parties on land over which defts. had no control, an unusual flow of water ran down this street & did damage to pltf.'s pre-misses:—Held: defts. were not liable, as the damage was occasioned by the unexpected flow of water for which they were not responsible, & they were not negligent in not building this retaining wall so as to have prevented the unusual flow of water across the street & alongside pltf.'s premises.—ELY BREWERY Co. v. PONTYPRIDD URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1903), 68 J. P. 3; 2 L. G. R. 40, C. A.

1288. — Footpath raised—Fence damaged by damp & pressure.]—In 1913 a county council repaired a main road & in the course of doing so raised the level of the footpath, some inches. In consequence the soil of the path covered the gravel boards of the fence between the path & the property of pltf. The result was that the pressure of the traffic & the dampness of the soil damaged these boards & caused the fence to bulge towards pltf.'s property. Pltf. claimed damages for trespass & other relief. Defts. disputed the title of pltf. to the fence, alleging that it was an unlawful encroachment upon the highway, & denied that they had raised the level of the path or caused the injury to the fence, or been guilty of misfeasance. The road was constructed on an embankment through Epping Forest by turnpike trustees in 1834, & in 1865 the then owner of pltf.'s property erected a fence at the top of the embankment. This fence was taken down in 1899 & the fence in question, a close-boarded oak fence about one thousand feet in length, was erected on its site. The gravel boards of this fence at that time were visible from the road throughout the length of the fence. There was no suggestion by defts., until the defence in the action, that the fence was an encroachment or that it was not the property of pltf.:—Held: on the evidence, the fence was lawfully there & was the property of pltf., the path had been raised as alleged, this was the direct cause of the injury to the fence, & defts. were liable in damages for the trespass. The greater part of the hill was covered with loose shale from the weathering of the shale which was the foundation of the hill. No precise way was laid down in the statute for constructing the road, nor were the exact provisions prescribed which should be made or maintained for dealing with water & shale. The road had to be cut deep into the side of the hill, & the natural & obvious effect of making such a road was that it acted as a catch-water for the rain water from the upper slopes, which would otherwise have flowed on to the parts of the hill below the site of the road. It also caught the loose shale carried down by the water flowing over the slopes of the hill, & it was necessary to provide for the water & shale coming from above, which would thus be intercepted by the road. For this purpose the contract & plans originally made certain provisions, which, with modifications from time to time, were carried out. On July 1, 1914, heavy rains fell, & water & vast quantities of shale flowed over the road to the valley beneath, & into pltf.'s mills & upon their land. At the trial of the action for damages the judge found on the evidence that insufficient provision was made for carrying off the water & shale, & that defts. had not exercised reasonable care in maintaining the works intended for dealing with the water & the shale:—Held: on the findings of fact the corpn. were liable on the ground of misfeasance, & the damage was not caused by the act of God, but could have been provided against by reasonable care & skill. — BALDWIN'S, LTD. v. "Surface water from a road retained by a local authority under Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 11 (2), had long drained into watercress beds occupied by pltf., & through them into the river beyond. In May, 1919, the local authority, in order to allay dust nuisance, sprayed the road with tar. This was the only method then open to them, & the work was done in the public interest & with due care. Six months afterwards frost broke up the tar, & the road water, containing tar acid, destroyed pltf.'s beds:—Held: the road water was "noxious matter" within the above sect.; defts. had power to tar-spray the road, but they could not justify the damage to pltf. without showing that it was a necessary consequence of the exercise of the power.—DELL v. 1303. — Work supervised by surveyor.]—Deft. was surveyor of highways, appointed by the vestry of a parish, at a salary. By a resolution of the committee of management for the highways, appointed by the vestry, it was ordered that about 150 yards of a road should be raised, & deft. as surveyor was directed to carry out the resolution. Deft. contracted with G. to do the labour at 34d. per yard, the vestry finding stones & materials. G. worked himself, & employed & paid his own men, & deft., as surveyor, employed men to cart materials to the ground. Deft. set the work out, & determined the levels, but had nothing to do with the paving himself, except superintending on behalf of the committee. The work was carried out by raising one half of the width of the road about a foot, leaving the other half at its old level; & a considerable length of road was so left without light or fencing at night; & in consequence of this, the dog-cart of pltf. which he was driving along the road, was upset & he was injured. Deft. had been previously warned of the dangerous condition of the road. The jury found that leaving the road in its then state, without light or warning was negligence; but that deft. did not personally interfere in doing the work, or directing the road to be left as it was: Held: the ct. having power to draw inferences of fact, deft. was liable. Semble: Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 56, which imposes a penalty on a surveyor who causes any heap of stones or other matter to be laid on the highway, & allows it to remain there at night without proper precautions, does not apply to such a case. — *PENDLEBURY v. —The predecessors of an urban district council in 1893 constructed a sewer with manholes under a main road repairable by the county. In 1906 the cover of one of the manholes projected above the granite setts surrounding it, & the setts projected above the surrounding surface of the roadway. Pltf. when riding a motor cycle was upset by the manhole & injured, & brought an action against the urban district council for damages. The jury found that the manhole was defective & was the cause of the accident to pltf. & that the defects in the manhole were owing to improper construction. On appeal:—Held: there was no evidence to support the finding of the jury that the manhole or the setts projected above the roadway owing to the original improper construction of the manhole. The ct., however, were of opinion that there should be a new trial upon the question as to whether defts. had been guilty of negligence in the maintenance of the manhole, & they gave pltf. leave to amend his pleadings so as to raise that question.—*WINSLOWE v. The surveyor of the vestry knew that the pipe was old & rusty, & likely, therefore, to become leaky. In filling in the trench some clay was put round the pipe, but not in such a quantity or in such a manner as to prevent it from leaking. A few months afterwards the pipe leaked, & the surrounding clay & earth, being thereby moistened, gave way under a heavily laden van, which pltf. was driving, & the van being overturned, pltf. was thrown from it to the ground, & seriously injured. Upon an action brought to recover damages from defts.:—Held: the vestry knew, or ought to have known, the character & condition of the pipe at the time it was laid bare in constructing the new sewer, & consequently were liable for negligence in not having taken special precautions against its leaking thereafter.—COX v. PADDINGTON VESTRY (1891), 64 L. T. 566, N. P.

1316. ———. Nonfeasance.—A local sanitary authority, in whom a sewer under a highway is vested by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), is not in the absence of negligence liable for an accident caused to a person passing along the highway, by reason of the sewer having got out of repair.

A sewer was constructed with due care & of proper materials by private persons under a high road. Subsequently the sewer became vested in defts. as the local sanitary authority by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13; & by sects. 15 & 19 the duty of repairing it & keeping it so as not to be a nuisance was imposed upon them. Owing to the mortar in one of the joints of the sewer having been worked away by rats a cavity was formed below the surface of the road; but the existence of that cavity was not known to & could not by the exercise of reasonable care have been discovered by the defts. Pltf.'s horse, whilst passing along the road, broke through the crust of the road into the cavity, & was injured:—Held: defts. were not liable.—*LAMBERT v. 1317. ———. Highway badly reconstructed—After pipe-laying operations.

—(1) Defts. who were both the highway & the sewer authorities of West Derby, employed a contractor to construct a pipe-sewer under a highway within their district. The contractor in laying the pipes dug a trench, which he afterwards filled in with earth, & the roadway was apparently made good. The work was done under the directions & to the satisfaction of defts.' surveyor. Some months after it was finished, a subsidence of the soil in the trench took place without any assignable cause, leaving the road apparently sound. Pltf.'s horse, in consequence of the surface giving way, fell into the trench, & was injured:—Held: there was evidence that the work of filling in the trench had been negligently & improperly done, & defts., either as the sewer or the highway authority, or as both, were responsible.

(2) A notice of action under Public Health Act, 1815 (c. 63), s. 139, stated that pliffs. intended to enter a claim against defts. for the injury & damage caused to them through defts. by matters or things done or omitted by them & their labourers & servants, etc., to wit, that they did, by themselves, their labourers & servants, "negligently, carelessly, & improperly leave a certain portion of the highway in an insufficient & improper state of repair, whereby," etc.:—Held: this was a sufficient intimation to defendants that they were to be charged with an act of misfeasance, & not merely with a neglect of duty to repair the road.—SMITH (JAMES) & Co. v. WEST DERBY LOCAL BOARD (1878), 3 C. P. D. 423; 47 L. J. Q. B. 607; 38 L. T. 716; 42 J. P. 615; 27 W. R. 137, D. C.

Sewer grating inserted below level of road - Absence of negligence.] - A local authority in 1883, acting under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, paved & made up a road, for the purpose of carrying away the surface water they constructed a gully near the side of the road leading into a subjacent sewer, & covered the hole with a grating. The grating & framework were so laid as to cause a considerable depression in the road, but the work was done with due care & skill in accordance with the usual method at the time. In 1912 pltf. was riding a bicycle along the road, when in passing over the grating she was, in consequence of the depression in the road, thrown from her bicycle & injured. In an action against the local authority to recover damages for the injuries so sustained, the jury found that the grating, by reason of the excessive depression in the original construction, was dangerous to a careful cyclist, but that the local authority were not negligent in not having discovered the defect:

Held: as the local authority, in the execution of their statutory powers, had exercised due care & skill in the original construction of the grating, & as they were not negligent in not having discovered the danger, they were not liable though the work turned out subsequently to be dangerous. *PATWORTH v. 1320. Sewer trench inadequately filled. Diver-sion causing collision with obstacle.] - Applts., who were both the sanitary & the highway authority, dug a trench along a road under their control for the purpose of laying a sewer. When the work was completed they filled in the trench & opened the road for traffic. About a week afterwards resp. was driving along the road in a cab at night. The driver found that the part of the road where the trench had been opened was soft, & crossed on to the other side, & ran into a heap of rubbish, with the result that the cab was overturned & resp. was injured. The rubbish had been wrongfully deposited in the road without the permission of applts., but they knew that it was there, & had not lighted or fenced it. The jury found that the part of the road where the trench had been opened had been properly filled in, but had been rendered soft by subsequent rain, & was dangerous to traffic at the time of the accident: - Held: applts. were liable for the injury. *SHOREDITCH CORPN. v. The grid being in a defective state gave way, & the horse's leg was injured. Pltf. brought an action against the local board of health of the district, who are the surveyors of the highway by Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), sects. 68, 117, & in whom also the sewers are vested under sects. 43, 45: - Held: though defts. might not be liable as surveyors of the highway, they were liable as owners of the sewer of which the grid formed part, for negligence in not keeping the grid in a proper state. - *WHITE v. 1323. Removable carriage plates - Improperly replaced by householder.] - In 1873 the local authority, purporting to act under the powers conferred by the Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), did certain private improvement works, including the making of a gutter or channel over which they placed iron carriage plates, & recovered a proportion of the expenses, including 18s. for one carriage plate from deft.'s predecessor in title as one of the frontagers. Pltf., in crossing the street by night, put her foot in a hole immediately opposite deft.'s house left between two carriage plates, one being that for which deft.'s predecessor in title had been charged as aforesaid. She suffered severe injuries, & sued deft. for damages. Deft. had from time to time lifted the carriage plate to clean the gutter or channel, & put it back as it was before: - Held: the carriage plate was not the property of deft., & deft. was not responsible to pltf. for the nuisance on the highway. - *JONES v. #### SUB-SECT. 1.—OBSTRUCTIONS.

A. In General.

1330. When obstruction a nuisance—Right of passage incommoded—Statue erected in new street.—An Act of Parliament empowered the Comrs. of Woods & Forests to make certain new streets according to a particular plan therein referred to, & to lease, & to enter into agreements for leasing, the ground in the lines of the new streets. Under this power leases were granted of two plots of ground, upon which the lessees erected two particular houses in the line of one of the new streets. Each of the leases described the plot of ground which it demised as being "on the north side of a new street then forming there, called," etc., & as "fronting towards the south on the said new street." The plan referred to in the Act of Parliament exhibited an open space in front of the sites of these houses; but that plan was not mentioned in either of the leases. The intended streets were completed, & the space in front of the houses was left open. The Comrs. of Woods & Forests, & the paving committee of the parish, afterwards gave permission to certain persons to erect an equestrian statue in the open space, & those persons proceeded to place it upon a part of that open space, but without interfering with the line of the carriage way of the new street in which the houses stood. The lessees of the houses thereupon filed a bill to restrain the erection of the statue, alleging that, upon the treaty for the leases, the lessees were shown the plan of the intended new street & parts adjacent, by which it appeared that the space in question was to be quite open & free from all obstructions, & that it was upon the treaty represented & stated that opposite the two houses a free passage would be left of certain dimensions, which would be contracted by the erection of the statue; they also alleged that the proposed erection would diminish the value of their property, & be a public & a private nuisance :—Held : these circumstances did not entitle the lessees to an injunction to restrain the erection of the statue.—*SQUIRE v. Sect. 1.—Nuisances: Sub-sect. 1, A. & B.]

1332. — — — — —.]—(1) The laying down on a highway of iron flanges, as a tramway, may be a nuisance, if it obstructs to a substantial degree the ordinary use of the highway, in any part of it, by horses & carriages. Whether it does so, is a question for the jury. That it causes accidents, & by fear of such accidents deters persons from using the highway, is evidence that it is a nuisance, however rarely the accidents may occur.

(2) Every obstruction which to a substantial degree, renders unsafe or inconvenient the exercise of the right to pass & repass, on foot & with horses & carriages, at their free will & pleasure, over a highway, i.e. over every part of it, is a violation of that right (ERLE, C.J.).—R. v. TRAIN (1862), 3 F. & F. 22; subsequent proceedings, 2 B. & S. 640.

1333. — — — — —.]—R. v. UNITED KINGDOM ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH CO., LTD., No. 452, ante.

1334. — — — — —.]—The soil of roads is vested in a highway authority simply to the extent necessary for the purpose of preserving & maintaining & using them as roads. A highway authority has no general power to break up a road; so that permission given by a highway authority for a tramway to cross a highway is of no effect when in the opinion of the ct. the crossing is a nuisance.

Scmble: otherwise, if no nuisance is proved.

Is this, or is it not, a nuisance of which the A.-G. on behalf of the public, is entitled to complain? That is a question of fact. Now, I propose to give myself the same direction which MARTIN, B., gave to the jury in R. v. United Kingdom Electric Telegraph Co., Ltd., No. 452, ante (FARWELL, J.).

Assume, for the sake of argument that they [defts.] have got it [the sanction of the county council to commit the acts complained of]. It is said that the county council have power to authorise this, although in fact, it is found by the ct. to be nuisance. They have no such power. They are given the management of the roads in the same way that the highway authorities used to have it, & under Local Govt. Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 11, to some extent the soil is vested in them. In my opinion Parliament has vested the soil of the roads in them quod roads & simply to the extent necessary for the purpose of preserving & maintaining & using them as roads. There is nothing that would justify the county council in allowing the destruction of the road in toto. If they cannot allow it in toto, then they cannot allow it to some less degree which the ct. finds in fact to be nuisance (FARWELL, J.).

Then it is said that the advantage to be derived from the relief to the highway compensates for any inconvenience or makes the tramway more beneficial to the public by relieving the highway from any ruts that used to be made. That is disposed of by R. v. Train, No. 1387, post (FARWELL, J.). A.-G. v. BARKER (1900), 83 L. T. 245; 16 T. L. R. 502.

1336. — — — — —.]—Passage rendered unsafe.—A public turnpike road, which had been a public highway, ran through the property of A., who was the owner of several coal-pits on the west side of the road, & also of the land on both sides of it. On the east side of the road was a navigable river, & from time to time for upwards of sixty years tramroads had been made by the lessees of the pits, leading from the pits to the river, & crossing the road in question, the tramroads being made of iron sunk into the road, grooved for the wheels of coal waggons, the highest part being on a level with the road. By the turnpike Act the trustees of the road had power to grant licences for the formation of tramroads across the turnpike road. A new tramroad was made in 1848 by defts., who were lessees of the pits, but no licence had been obtained from the trustees of the road. Upon an indictment preferred by the trustees for a nuisance in obstructing the road:—Held: (1) the tramroad in question was such an obstruction to the road as to be an indictable nuisance; (2) the dedication of the highway by the owner of the soil to the use of the public could not be limited by so extensive a reservation as that of a power to make tramroads across it at any time he should think right for the convenient use of his property, & the ct. would not presume such a reservation from the user.

Such a dealing with the highway as by placing a tramroad across it, must render it less safe for passengers, & it is therefore a nuisance. The fact that the road, if made without the consent of the trustees, subjects the party to a penalty under the local Act, does not take away the common law right to indict for the nuisance (PATTESON, J.).—R. v. CHARLESWORTH (1851), 16 Q. B. 1012; 4 New Sess. Cas. 703; 17 L. T. O. S. 91; 15 J. P. 707; 5 Cox, C. C. 174; 117 E. R. 1169.

B. "Wilful Obstruction."

See Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72.

1339. What amounts to wilful obstruction—General rule.]—By Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 28, "every person who . . . by means of any cart, carriage, sledge, truck, or barrow, or any animal, or other means . . . wilfully causes any obstruction in any . . . public thoroughfare," is made liable to a penalty:—Held: to constitute the offence of wilfully causing an obstruction within the sect. there must be an unreasonable use of the thoroughfare.

It is, however, not necessary that any person should be actually obstructed; it is sufficient if circumstances exist from which justices before whom a charge of wilfully causing an obstruction is brought can conclude that in the ordinary course persons may be obstructed, & that the actual use of the road was calculated to obstruct.

Applts. at 4 p.m. on an afternoon left two vehicles, four-wheeled, each with a horse between the shafts & a chain horse in front, standing unattended for five minutes in a main road twenty-five yards wide from the kerb to kerb with two sets of tram lines down the centre. Any vehicle proceeding in the same direction as that in which applts. were in the course of travelling would have to draw on the tram lines, & so would obstruct the tram until the vehicle had passed the stationary vehicles of applts. or had otherwise crossed over to the wrong side of the road. The horses had just been watered by the ostler of an inn used as a baiting-house, applts. being found in the inn, where they were having something to eat:—Held: there was no evidence of an unreasonable user of the highway, & applts. had not wilfully caused an obstruction in the highway within the sect.

An offence is committed under the [above] sect. if a person wilfully causes any obstruction. What do those words mean? For a person merely to stand still or to cause his horse & cart to stand still in the roadway, is not causing an obstruction. An obstruction will only be caused if there is an unreasonable use of the road by stopping. The language of JES-EL, M.R., in Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb, No. 1447, post, is very much to the point. It is quite true he was dealing with another statute & with other words, but he explains what was the right of access a person has to the highway & pointed out that the real question is "Has there been anything unreasonable in the user of the highway?" (LORD READING, C.J.).—GILL v. CARSON & NIELD, [1917] 2 K. B. 674; 117 L. T. 285; 81 J. P. 250; 15 L. G. R. 567; 25 Cox, C. C. 774; sub nom. GILL v. CARSON, NIELD v. CARSON, 86 L. J. K. 1340. — Obstruction in fact—Sufficiency—Irrelevant circumstances.]—Appl. placed in a street opposite a house a motor, which, by creating a vacuum, caused the dust & dirt to pass from the house through india-rubber tubes to a receptacle on the top of the motor. The tubes were passed over the pavement at such a height as not to interfere with persons using the footway. Appl. was summoned for obstruction of the highway under Metropolitan Police Act, 1839 (c. 47), s. 54 (6). The magistrate found that the business for which the motor was placed there was reasonable, that it did not remain there longer than was necessary to clean the house & that the space occupied was not excessive, but that the system of cleaning was not necessary to the ordinary comfort of life & was still in the experimental stage & could not be regarded as an incident of everyday life, & the noise & collection of sight-seers might be productive of discomfort to occupants of houses & people using the street & convicted appl.:—Held: as there was no evidence of wilful obstruction, or obstruction in fact, the conviction was wrong.

The magistrate has given us some reasons, which do not seem to be applicable. I do not think the noise of the machinery used so as possibly to cause discomfort & inconvenience to occupants of neighbouring houses is an obstruction of a highway, or an element of the obstruction of a highway. Of course, if it causes a crowd, it would be otherwise (KENNEDY, J.).

I do not think it relevant to consider that the system of carpet-cleaning involved is not necessary to the ordinary comfort or exigency of life. If that is to be considered it is prohibitive of every new invention of the same kind, if there could be any justification to bring machinery there to clean carpets (KENNEDY, J.).—*DUNN v. 1341. — — — — —.] In determining whether an offence has been committed against Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 78, by leaving a horse & trap on the highway so as to obstruct the passage thereof, the fact that the horse & trap have been placed in charge of some one does not prevent there being an offence under the sect., if there was an obstruction in fact.

It ought substantially to be an obstruction. That is in accordance with the decision in Stinson v. Browning, No. 1537, post. One might say that every cart left at the edge of a highway is an obstruction in one sense, but in order to constitute an offence, it must be found to be really an obstruction (RIDLEY, J.).

As RIDLEY, J., has referred to the case of Stinson v. Browning No. 1537, post, I ought to say that since that case there has been the decision in Dunn v. Holt, No. 1340, ante, which shows that where there is wilful obstruction of the road, there may be an offence, though nobody is obstructed (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—HINDE v. EVANS (1906), 96 L. Resp. was summoned under above sect. for obstructing a way. Evidence was given that trees & underwood on his land had grown over & across the way, so as to be an obstruction to the free passage along it:—Held: in merely suffering the trees to grow so as to be an obstruction, did not "wilfully obstruct" the way within the sect.—*WALKER v. 1845. — — — — Stones on repaired highway—Insufficient warning during night.—A local surveyor of highways, in repairing a road, placed stones thereon, & allowed them to remain at night insufficiently fenced & without sufficient light to warn the public against the obstruction:—Held: he was properly convicted under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72, notwithstanding that he might also have been guilty of an offence under sect. 56.

The facts stated disclose a wilful obstruction of the highway within the Act. It was a wilful obstruction, in the sense of being purposely placed there (LORD COLERIDGE, C.J.).—FEARNLEY v. ORMSBY (1870), 4 C. P. D. 136; 43 J. P. 384; 27 W. R. 823.

1846. — — — — Omission to remove obstruction—After notice.—In order to constitute wilful obstruction of a highway within Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72, it is not necessary that there should be any act of commission, but the offence may be complete by an omission on the part of the person whose duty it is to remove an obstruction to do so after notice.

G. was occupier of lands through which a highway was made 20 feet deep, the soil being marly & the retaining wall perpendicular. Owing to rains ten loads of soil fell on the highway & notice was frequently given to G. to remove the same which he omitted to do. The wall had been occasionally repaired by G. G. being summoned under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72: Held: he was rightly convicted of wilfully obstructing the highway by allowing the soil to lie on the highway. *GULLY v. There was space for vehicles & foot-passengers to pass to & fro outside the crowd, but to have attempted to have walked or driven across that part where applt. & the crowd were stationed would have been attended with inconvenience & danger:—Held: applt. was guilty of wilful obstruction of the free passage of the highway within sect. 72.—*HORNER v. 1856. Ploughing up footpath—Through field—Claim of right.—On an information against B., the occupier of a field through which a highway or public footway ran, for wilfully destroying the surface of such highway, it was proved that B. ploughed up part of the footway:—Held: the justices were warranted in convicting B., & it was immaterial that B. had often before done so,

1357. — — — — —.]—There may, in law, be a dedication to the public of a right of way, such as a footpath across a field, subject to the right of the owner of the soil to plough it up in due course of husbandry, & destroy all trace of it for the time.

As far as living memory went, the occupier for the time being of a field over which a footpath crossed had been in the habit, in due course of farming, of ploughing up the whole field, & so destroying the footpath. There was no evidence of the existence of the footpath before living memory:—Held: the inference to be drawn was, that the owner had originally dedicated the right of way to the public, subject to this right of periodically ploughing it up.

Suppose a swing-bridge dedicated to the public, but to be opened at times when it is necessary to let in the ships of the person dedicating; surely, that can be done. DANBY (1870), 34 J. P. 759.

1359. — — — — —.]—Pltf. was the occupier of an arable field, across which a footway from time immemorial had been used by every person at his pleasure; but pltf. & his predecessors had also from time immemorial ploughed up the footway when & in such parts as they thought fit, & in other parts lifted the plough across it. Defts. were surveyors of highways, & in order to repair the footway placed materials on it, making it a hard causeway, so as to prevent pltf. from ploughing it up:—Held: the footway was a highway, which it must be assumed had been dedicated to the public subject to the condition that the owner of the soil might plough it up, & there could at law be such a limited dedication; & defts. were therefore liable for the trespass.—ARNOLD v. BLAKER (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 433; 40 L. J. Q. B. 185; 35 J. P. 775; 19 W. R. 1090, Ex. Ch.

Applts. ploughed up the fields, footpaths & all, & were convicted under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72, of wilfully destroying the surface of the footpaths:—Held: the conviction was right, as "highway" in the above enactment included a public footway, & as the regulation under which applts. were required to do the ploughing did not authorise the committee to order the ploughing of public footpaths.—DENNIS & SONS, LTD. v. Attached to the house was a coal cellar under the footway, with an aperture covered by an iron plate which was at the time of the demise out of repair & dangerous. A passer-by in consequence fell into the aperture & was injured:—Held: (1) the obligation to repair being by the lease cast upon the tenant, the landlord was not liable for this accident; (2) the provision in Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 102, made no difference in this respect.—PERRY v. The evidence showed that the defect had existed for some months before the accident, but was conflicting as to whether the accident was owing to the neglect of the tenant to secure the plate properly, or to the defective state of the flagstone, or to the presence of clay, which prevented the plate from sitting. The county ct. judge directed a verdict for pltf., the amount of damages being agreed. Pltf., who was passing along the pavement, was tripped by the flaps & fell into the cellar, & was injured:—Held: the brewery co. were not liable to pltf., as they had not employed the contractor to do work on the highway which was dangerous to the public, nor to interfere with the surface of the highway, & therefore they were not liable for the negligent acts of the contractor. *WILSON v. The stop-cock box had been constructed by the Lambeth Waterworks Co., who were defts.' predecessors, under statutory authority. It had an opening 2½ inches in diameter & 3½ inches deep to the point where the spindle was reached. It was the practice of defts. to fill up the space between the spindle & the level of the pavement by means of a tight wisp of straw with mud or earth on top of it for the purpose of protecting the mechanism against frost & grit. Upon the occasion in question this wad reached within 1 inch of the top of the stop-cock box:—Held: the original construction of the stop-cock box was lawful; there was a duty to supplement the construction of the box by a wad, but there was no duty on the part of defts. to renew a wad which in course of time had become worn, & from the above facts the judge might infer that after the occasion of the last user of the stop-cock box in question either no wad was put in or an insufficient one, & accordingly he was justified in coming to the conclusion that defts. were liable.—*OSBORN v. The stop-cock box was placed in position by the predecessors of the Metropolitan Water Board under statutory authority. A large number of these boxes were in existence in London. For some time it had been the practice of the servants of the Board to stop up each hole with a plug or wad of straw with earth or mud above it. These plugs were renewed three times a year. On the occasion of the accident it was proved that the plug of straw had become so worn as to leave a hole some two inches deep. The stop-cock box in question, which was out of repair, had been constructed in the time of defts.' predecessors, & was connected with the communication pipe which carried the supply of water from defts.' main to the house outside which the accident occurred:—Held: the obligation to maintain the stop-cock box was upon the owner or occupier of the house & not upon defts., & therefore pltf. was not entitled to recover against defts.—*BATT v. 1383. ——— Nuisance subsequently legalised by special Act—Omission to light at night—"Reduction of Lighting" Regulations.]—A railway co., for the more convenient management of their station, erected in the public highway certain gate posts from which collapsible steel gates could be run across the road so as to close the entrance to the station yard. These posts were erected by the co. in contravention of their special Act, & in 1901 were judicially held to be an obstruction to the highway. In 1902 the co. obtained an Act which empowered them to "maintain" the posts & gates & to replace them, when necessary, on the same site. A licenced taxicab driver, while lawfully driving his cab on a dark rainy night along the public highway into the station yard collided with one of these posts, which was practically invisible owing to the darkening of the street in compliance with the Reduction of Lighting Regulations, & thereby damaged his cab. The post was in the condition in which it was at the time of the passing of the Act of 1902. In an action by the cabdriver against the railway co. for damages for negligence:—Held: the accident arose, not from any overt act of the co., but from the existence of the gate post, which had been legalised by the Act of 1902, coupled with the diminution of light necessitated by the exigencies of the war; the mere power to maintain the post imposed no obligation on the co. to take reasonable precautions to warn the public of its existence; & the co. was not guilty of negligence.—GREAT CENTRAL RY. The rail-road was 400 yards long, & was laid upon a turnpike road, which it narrowed so far, that in some places there was not a clear space for two carriages to pass. Deft. allowed the public to use his rail-road, paying a toll:—Held: the facility thereby given to the general traffic with the sea-port, & particularly to the conveyance of coals, etc., thither, was not such a convenience as justified the obstruction of the highway. Qu.: whether, upon an indictment for nuisance by obstructing a highway, it be a proper question for the jury, whether the general benefit to the public by the obstruction be equivalent or superior to the inconveniences which thereby result to some of the public.

In the course of cleaning out the drain, P. took up part of an adjoining highway, & replaced the same in an improper manner & with insufficient materials, in consequence of which pltf.'s horse, passing along the highway, was injured:—Held: P. was not an independent contractor, but was acting as the servant & under the control of deft., & deft. was responsible to pltf. for the injury.—*SADLER v. —Defts., who were both the highway & sanitary authority, dug a trench along a road under their control for the purpose of laying a sewer. When the sewer was laid, they filled in the trench & opened the road for traffic. About a week after the road was thrown open plff. was driven along it in a cab. The cab-driver found that that part of the road where the trench had been filled in was soft, he crossed to the off side to avoid that danger, & ran into a heap of rubbish which had been deposited by a wrong-doer upon that side of the road, with the result that the cab was overturned & plff. suffered injuries. Defts. knew that the heap of rubbish had been deposited upon the road. The jury found that at the time of the accident that part of the road where the trench had been filled in was dangerous for traffic: Held: defts. were liable on the ground that they were guilty of misfeasance in throwing open the road when it was not fit for traffic, & that misfeasance was the cause of the accident. SHOREDITCH CORPN. v. Plffs. were the sanitary authority for the B. district, & as such were surveyors of highways within the district, & responsible for the maintenance & repair of highways. By reason of the working of defts.' mines the surface of a highway within plffs.' district, together with the adjoining land, had been caused to subside; but no injury had been done by the subsidence to the surface of the highway. The highway had previously to the subsidence been crossed on the level by a railway. As the highway subsided the railway co. placed ballast underneath the railway, so as to maintain it at the original level, with the result that an embankment ten feet high was formed across the highway rendering it impassable. The highway was a public carriage-way at & before the time when the railway was constructed. The special Act under which the railway was constructed did not authorise the co. to make a level crossing at the place in question; but the Act contained a general power to the co. to make & maintain the railway on the levels shown on the deposited plans:—Held: the obstruction was caused by the railway co., & not by defts.

An action for nominal damages for subsidence would lie at the suit of an ordinary owner of land without proof of special damage; plffs., as highway authority had the same rights as an ordinary owner of land, & were, therefore, entitled to judgment against defts. for nominal damages (COLLINS, J.).—*A.-G. v. g. Motor cycle races on public highway.—Motor cycle races were held on the public highway. McK. was standing at the verge of the road, at about the middle of the course, watching the races, when a motor bicycle ridden by M. hit a bump in the road, wobbled, & struck McK. & killed him. No sanction had been given by the proper authority to hold these races on the public highway:—Held: the holding

Certain undertakers of a navigation being incorporated for the purpose of making a canal, & empowered by 28 Geo. 2, c. viii., to take tolls to their own use & behoof, were authorised "to make such & so many bridges as & where they should think requisite & convenient; & to amend, heighten or alter any bridges, & to turn or alter any highways in, through, upon or near the rivers, cuts or canals, as may in any ways hinder the navigation or passage thereon." The co. made a cut through an ancient public highway near H., which was then a small village, & carried the highway over the cut so made by a swivel bridge. By a subsequent Act, 11 Geo. 4, c. i., s. 1, to consolidate & amend the former Act, it was recited "that the navigation cut or canal, & other the works authorised to be made by the recited Act, have been long since made & completed; & by sect. 48, the co. were empowered to maintain the canal, bridges, etc. By 11 Geo. 4, c. i., s. 124, all persons were to have free liberty with boats to navigate the said canal for the purpose of conveying any goods, etc. By sect. 141, penalties were imposed on persons leaving open drawbridges, etc., after boats had passed. A boatman having opened the swivel bridge to allow his boat to pass through, a person who was coming along the road walked into the water just as the boat was coming up to the bridge, & was drowned. It appeared that when the bridge was open the end of the highway abutting on the canal was wholly unfenced. Two lamps had formerly been kept burning, of which one had been removed & the other was out of repair. The jury found that deceased was drowned by reason of the neglect of reasonable precautions on the part of the canal co., without any negligence on his own part: Held: (1) defts. having a beneficial interest in the tolls were liable to an action, as any other proprietors of private property would be, for a nuisance arising from it; (2) the bridge at the time of the accident was in the possession of defts., & the action was therefore properly brought against them & not against the boatman; (3) whether or not the bridge was sufficient at the time it was built, the co. were bound to maintain a bridge sufficient with reference to present state of circumstances; & the jury were warranted in finding a bridge to be insufficient which, when open, left an unfenced gulf in the highway into which a person passing along the road without any fault of his own was liable to fall. —MANLEY v. ST. HELENS CANAL & RY. CO. (1858), 2 H. & N. 840; 27 L. J. Ex. 159; 6 W. R. 297; 157 E. R. 340.

1415. Use of street as stable yard.—To entitle a reversioner to maintain a suit for a private nuisance, the wrong complained of must be of a necessarily permanent character. Pltf. was entitled in reversion to two houses in a street. The carts & vans obstructed the carriage-way & occasioned a nuisance to the tenants of pltf.'s houses & their lodgers, so that some of the lodgers quitted, & the apartments could not be let, except at a lower value:—Held: a suit for an injunction to restrain the nuisance could not be maintained, for the injury complained of was not in itself of a permanent character, & there was nothing to lead to the inference that it would be permanent, except the presumed intention of defts. to continue the nuisance.—*MOTT v. 1441. — Dwelling incommoded by horses' habits.—(1) To entitle a private person to maintain an action for a thing which amounts to a public nuisance, he must show that he has sustained a particular damage or injury other than & beyond the general injury to the public, & that such damage is direct & substantial.

Pltf. kept a coffee-house in a narrow street near C. Defts. carried on an extensive business as auctioneers in the same neighbourhood, having an outlet at the rear of their premises next adjoining pltf.'s house, where they were constantly loading & unloading goods into & from vans. The vans intercepted the light from pltf.'s coffee-shop to such an extent that he was obliged to burn gas nearly all day, & access to the shop was obstructed by the horses standing in front of the door, & the stench arising from their frequent staling there rendered pltf.'s dwelling inconvenient & uncomfortable:—Held: the evidence disclosed such a direct & substantial private & particular damage to pltf. beyond that suffered by the rest of the public, as to entitle him to maintain an action.

(2) The declaration alleged that, in consequence of the nuisance complained of, pltf.'s premises had been rendered "unhealthy & inconvenient" as well as a house of business as also as a dwelling-house:—Held: evidence that the premises were rendered uncomfortable by reason of the offensive smells arising from the staling of the horses which were kept constantly standing opposite to them, was properly admitted.—*BENJAMIN v. 1442. — Succession of vehicles.—In a case of doubt or difficulty the right of the occupier of premises abutting on a highway to make a reasonable use of it, for the purpose of loading & unloading goods at his premises, must yield to the public right of unobstructed passage along the highway. It is in each case a question of degree whether the exercise of this private right of access to premises, which must of necessity involve some obstruction of the highway, is or is not reasonable, & in determining this question regard must be had to all the facts of the case.

Traders carrying on a large business in a populous town, at premises situate in a street the roadway of which was less than twenty feet wide, kept as many as six vans at once during every alternate hour in the daytime loading & unloading goods at their premises, thus occupying half the width of the street, & seriously obstructing the passage of vehicles through it:—Held: this was an unreasonable use of the highway, & it amounted to a public nuisance the continuance of which must be restrained by injunction.—A.-G. v. BRIGHTON & HOVE CO-OPERATIVE SUPPLY ASSCN., [1900] 1 Ch. 276; 69 L. J. Ch. 201; 81 L. T. 762; 48 W. R. 314; 16 T. L. R. 111; 61 J. P. Jo. 68, C. A.

1443. — Materiality of width of street.—S., a firm of wholesale stationers, had business premises at the corner of A. street, Strand. The highway authority expended £500,000 in widening the Strand at this point. S. then allowed vans to occupy a strip of roadway sixty-two feet in length in front of their premises, extending fourteen feet from the kerb; these vans were there constantly throughout the day for the purpose of loading & unloading. An action was brought to restrain defts. from causing a nuisance to the public thereby:—Held: upon the evidence, (1) the character of defts.' user was legitimate & not excessive for the purposes of their business; & having regard to the width of the road at this point, there was no nuisance to the public; the question whether the user was reasonable or not was a question of fact & not of law; (2) having regard to the above findings, defts.' user was reasonable, & the action must be dismissed.—A.-G. v. SMITH (W. H.) & SONS (1910), 103 L. T. 96; 74 J. P. 313; 26 T. L. R. 482; 8 L. G. R. 679.

1452. — Motor cars on parade.]—By a local Act, passed in 1865, the corpn. of B. were authorised to make & maintain a carriage drive & a promenade, called "the parade," by the sea. It was provided by sect. 13 of the Act that the carriage drive should be a public highway, by sect. 7 that the parade should not be a public highway, & by sect. 18 that the parade should be "kept & used exclusively for the purposes of recreation by persons on foot, & with or without carriages, in respect of which toll is authorised to be taken."

Sect. 19 authorised a toll of twopence for every bath-chair, etc., or like carriage driven by human power. By a later Act, passed in 1899, additional works were authorised, including a new carriage way, absorbing the original parade, a new road with a tramway thereon alongside the said carriage way, & a new parade alongside the tramroad. By sect. 7 it was provided that the corpn. might appropriate the whole or such part of the new parade as they might think fit for the exclusive use of foot passengers, & by sect. 8 it was provided that the new road should be for the exclusive purpose of the tramways laid thereon. The parade was, in fact, used exclusively for foot passengers & bath-chairs, etc. The corpn., in 1900, gave their approval to motor car races being held on the parade, & gave permission for part of the tramway road to be used for the purpose of cars returning to the starting point. They also undertook to keep the portion of the parade over which the races were to be run clear of traffic, & to erect a barrier & provide the necessary police control. This action was brought by the A.-G., at the relation of a ratepayer, for an injunction to restrain the corpn. from organising or promoting motor races on the sea front:—Held: the corpn. were in the position of trustees of the parade for limited public purposes, namely, for the purpose of use by foot passengers, perambulators, invalid carriages, & similar vehicles, & it was an abuse of the prade to allow it to be used for either horses or motor cars, & a fortiori motor races.—A.-G. v. Any person who shall offend against any of these bye-laws shall be liable for each offence to a fine not exceeding 40s." An information was preferred within the metropolis for contravening this bye-law, which was dismissed on the ground that the bye-law was ultra vires as dealing with a nuisance already punishable when the bye-law was made, under Metropolitan Police Act, 1839 (c. 47), s. 60, which imposed a penalty on any person "who in any thoroughfare shall throw or lay . . . any litter or rubbish":—Held: the bye-law was good.—BACHELOR v. a. Street procession—Liability of participant.]—Where a person taking part in a street procession is charged with the statutory offence of "wilfully preventing & interrupting the free passage of persons & carriages," the real question for the magistrates to decide is whether or not the user of the street was under the circumstances reasonable. The fact that the natural result of such a procession was to cause an obstruction is not sufficient to justify a conviction.—LOWDEN v. KEAVENEY (1902), 67 J. P. 378.—IR.

1476. ————.—Shooting ground near highway - Indictment.—Indictment charged deft. with keeping certain inclosed lands near the King's highway, for the purpose of persons frequenting the same to practice rifle shooting, & to shoot at pigeons with firearms; & that he unlawfully & injuriously caused divers persons to meet there for that purpose, & suffered & caused a great number of idle & disorderly persons armed with firearms to meet in the highways, etc., near the said inclosed grounds discharging firearms, making a great noise, etc., by which the King's subjects were disturbed, & put in peril. At the trial it was proved, that deft. had converted his premises, which were situate near a public highway, into a shooting ground, where persons came to shoot with rifles at a target, & also at pigeons; & that as the pigeons which were fired at frequently escaped, persons collected outside of the ground & in the neighbouring fields to shoot at them as they strayed, causing a great noise & disturbance, & doing mischief by the shot:—Held: the evidence supported the allegation, that deft. caused such persons to assemble, discharging firearms, etc., inasmuch as their so doing was a probable consequence of his keeping ground for shooting pigeons in such a place.—R. v. MOORE (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 184; 1 L. J. M. C. 30; 110 E. R. 68.

1481. Noise from crowd & vehicles Outside club - Injunction.—A proprietary club was established at which entertainments consisting of pugilistic encounters were given, which caused the collection of large crowds outside the club. The noise of the shouting of the crowd, & the frequency on all nights, & until early in the morning, of whistling from the club for cabs, which, in their turn, created much noise in driving to the club, prevented the tenants & occupiers of adjoining houses from sleeping at night. In an action brought by the owners, lessees & occupiers of a neighbouring house against the proprietor of the club:—Held: the nuisance from the crowds & cabs was the reasonable & probable consequence of deft.'s acts, & an injunction ought to issue to restrain it, as well as the whistling for cabs during certain hours.—BELLAMY v. WELLS

1483. Erection of stand to view procession—Obstruction of view from house—Damages.—Pltf. was in possession of a house from the windows of which there was an uninterrupted view of part of a certain main thoroughfare along which it was announced that a public procession was to pass. G. agreed to take & pay for seats on the first & second floors of the house in order to see the procession. Defts. in pursuance of a resolution of their council to that effect, caused a stand to be erected across a certain highway (in which pltf.'s house was situate) to enable the members of the council & their friends to view the procession. This stand was a public nuisance, & it obstructed the view of the main thoroughfare from the windows on the first floor of pltf.'s house. G. when he saw the stand in process of erection, asked to be released from his contract as to the seats on the first floor, & pltf., thinking it would be unfair to hold him bound, released him. Several other persons came to the house to apply for seats, but when they saw the obstruction refrained from taking seats. In an action by pltf. to recover damages for the wrongful interference with the use & enjoyment of her house & the special loss she had sustained by the wrongful act of defts. : —Held : she was entitled to recover as damages the profit which but for defts.' act she might have made by letting seats. —*CAMPBELL v. 1492. ————.]—A shepherd was driving a hundred sheep from one farm to another along the highway. One day he was seen to rest for a quarter of an hour, when the sheep began to eat the grass & hedges, & some to stand on the highway. On another day the sheep had got half a mile ahead of him, & were eating the grass & standing on the highway when he came up to them. On a complaint under above sect.:—Held: the justices could only lawfully convict the owner for his sheep being found straying on the highway if they were satisfied that the shepherd was not bond fide driving the sheep all the while, for that resting occasionally during the progress was not inconsistent with driving.—HORWOOD v. GOODALL, HORWOOD v. HILL (1872), 30 J. P. 486.

1493. Right of pasturage on roadside—Animals straying on to road.] The owner of cattle found straying on the metalled part of a highway is liable to a penalty under Highway Act, 1864 (c. 101), s. 25, notwithstanding he had a right of pasturage on the sides of it.—FREESTONE v. CASSWELL (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 519; 10 B. & S. 351; 20 L. T. 918; 33 J. P. 581.

1494. Highway across uninclosed ground—Highway Act, 1864 (c. 101), s. 25.]—By a private Act a certain barrier bank, made for drainage purposes in L., together with a road thereon, is vested in trustees who are directed & required from time to time to let the herbage of the bank to be grazed with sheep only, at such yearly rent as can be reasonably had for the same. The road which runs along the top of the bank is an open public highway. Sheep owned by a renter of the herbage, & depastured on the sides of the barrier bank, were found upon the metalled part of the highway, & the owner was convicted & fined under above sect.:—Held: the conviction was right.

In all cases where a highway runs through a common, or waste, or uninclosed ground, the legislature seems to have thought that the cattle which were depastured on that open common or uninclosed ground must sometimes naturally come on to the road & that it would be wrong to impose a penalty on the owner in such cases. But where the road is not one passing over any common or waste or uninclosed ground, although there may be a right of pasturage on the sides, they thought fit to leave the enactment providing that cattle are not to stray unqualified. Then how is that consistent with the right of pasturage? It does not take it away, but the effect of the sect. is, that though the owners of animals may depasture them, they must somehow take precautions for herding them. . . . Here sheep are found on the highway, & therefore the conviction of the owner is correct, unless it were clear that the spot where the animals were straying passes through the uninclosed ground so as to be within the exception in sect. 25. That is a question of degree. Every road where a right of pasturage is on either side, is, in one extreme sense of the word, uninclosed, because of the plot of ground at the sides of the actual roadway. But that is not what is meant. Where the highway runs through an extent of ground of some magnitude, then it is within the exception, but when the quantity of ground is of so small an acreage compared with the highway as to be merely accessory to the road, it would

The justices have held that "it was not proved that the length of road in question passed over any common or waste or uninclosed land." . . . Now if they had stopped there the ct. would have been bound by their finding, as being on the face of a finding of fact, but they have proceeded to give their reason for coming to such a conclusion. . . . In the first place they appear to have merely considered whether the presumption was rebutted & to have omitted to notice that a bond fide claim of right to the pasturage of the wayside strips would oust their jurisdiction (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—*PLUMBLEY v. 1496. Traction engine—Whether a nuisance—Question of fact.]—The owner of a traction engine which is a nuisance & causes damage is liable in an action, even though all statutory requirements have been complied with. Whether or not a traction engine on a highway is a nuisance is a question of fact, the answer to which depends on the circumstances of each particular case.

Compliance with the statutory provisions does not relieve the owner from action for a nuisance at common law. The evidence shows that the engine was calculated to frighten ordinary horses by emitting steam & sparks (DAY, J.).—BANTWICK v. ROGERS (1891), 7 T. L. R. 542.

1499. ————.]—In an action by the A.-G., on the relation of a county council, to restrain deft. from using a traction engine upon a road in such a way as to cause a public nuisance, it was at the trial found as a fact that the condition of the road was not caused primarily by deft.'s traction traffic, but partly by the traction traffic, partly by stone haulage by carts & horses, partly by the ordinary traffic, & partly by the weather, but primarily & chiefly by the failure of the county council to maintain the road in a fit state to bear the traffic (including the traction traffic), which was not more unusual or onerous than they ought to have expected to come upon it:—Held: upon the facts so found plffs. were not entitled to a perpetual injunction to restrain deft. from bringing his traction traffic upon the road, & an interlocutory injunction which had been granted upon affidavit evidence must be dissolved. — A.-G. v. Scott, [1905] 2 K. B. 160; 71 L. J. K. B. 803; 93 L. T. 249; 69 J. P. 109; 21 T. L. R. 211; 49 Sol. Jo. 221; 3 L. G. R. 272, C. A.

1500. — Damage to pipes laid in road.—Plffs., who were the road authority within their district, were also the owners of the water mains beneath the roads. A duly licensed traction engine belonging to deft., weighing upwards of 10 tons, & drawing three trucks, broke the water main under one of the streets for which plffs. were the road authority. The main had been laid at least thirty years, but was found as a fact to be sufficiently strong & well laid to withstand the pressure of the ordinary traffic of the district. Plffs. had been guilty of no neglect or default in the execution of their duty as the road authority, & neither deft. nor his servants had been guilty of any neglect or want of skill or care in the construction or user of the traction engine. A county ct. judge found that the injury was caused by the excessive weight of deft.'s traction engine, & that deft. was liable for the cost of repairing the broken water main:—Held: in using an exceptionally heavy locomotive deft. was exercising his right to use the highway in a way that was not necessary in order to enable him to enjoy it, & the decision was right.—CHICHESTER CORPN. v. 1501. — Sparks causing damage.—Deft was possessed of a traction engine, which was propelled by steam power. Whilst it was being driven by deft.'s servants along a highway some sparks escaping from it set fire to a stack of hay of plffs. standing on a neighbouring farm. The engine was constructed in conformity with Locomotive Acts, 1861 (c. 70), 1865 (c. 83); at the time of the accident it was being driven at a proper pace, & deft.'s servants were guilty of no negligence in the management of it:—Held: deft. was liable to compensate plffs. for the injury done to the stack upon the ground that the engine being a dangerous machine, an action was maintainable at common law, & the Locomotive Acts did not restrict the liability of deft.—POWELL v. FELL (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 597; 49 L. J. Q. B. 428; 43 L. T. 562; 45 J. P. 156, C. A.

Plff. is entitled to your verdict, if the engine was calculated by its noise & appearance to frighten horses, so as to make the use of the highway dangerous to persons riding or driving horses. For deft. has clearly no right to make a profit at the expense of the security of the public (ERLE, C.J.).

1507. Steam roller—Whether a nuisance—Question of fact.—The owners of a steam roller are liable in damages if it is a nuisance to a person using the highway. Compliance with the statute, & absence of negligence, do not constitute a defence to the action. The question whether a steam roller on a highway is a nuisance dangerous to the public is one of fact, depending upon the circumstances of each particular case.

If this steam roller upon the occasion in question was a nuisance, & if in consequence, it caused pltf.'s horse to bolt & the accident to take place, there is a cause of action made out. . . . The mere presence of this machine upon the road is not sufficient, because it was lawfully there, but in each case it must be a question for the jury as to whether it was or was not a nuisance. Now was there any evidence that it was a nuisance? Counsel contends there was none because the only evidence was that pltf.'s horse was frightened by the steam roller & that there was not sufficient to establish a nuisance to the highway. . . . But according to the county ct. judge's notes the evidence was that the horse was of a quiet disposition, & not one likely to be frightened easily (CHARLES, J.).—*JEFFERY v. ST. The streets were vested in defts., the vestry of the parish, by certain statutes which gave them the authority of the surveyor of highways, & with the duty to repair, but without prescribing any particular mode of repair. Defts. used steam-rollers for the repair of the streets, as being a mode of repair most advantageous to both the ratepayers & the public, but the rollers they used were so heavy as frequently to injure pltfs.' pipes, though the pipes were sufficiently below the surface as not to have been injured by the ordinary mode of repair if such rollers had not been used:—Held: pltfs. were entitled not only to recover damages for the injury which had been done, but also to have an injunction to restrain defts. from using steam-rollers in such a way as to injure the pipes of pltfs.—*GAS LIGHT & COKE CO. v. 1512. Motor vehicle—Skidding.—The mere fact that the proprietor of a motor omnibus places such a vehicle on the road to ply for passengers knowing that it has a tendency to skid when the road is in a greasy or slippery condition is not evidence of street without placing a hoarding round it. While the derrick was at work & making an unusual noise, pltf.'s horse took fright & ran away, pltf. being thrown out of the carriage, & injured. The jury found that the derrick was of a nature to frighten horses, & that defts. had not taken proper precautions to guard against accidents:—Held: defts. were liable for the injury sustained by pltf.—LAWSON v. ALLISTON VILLAGE (1890), 19 O. R. 655.—CAN.

1513. ———.]—A motor omnibus was proceeding at a moderate speed along a road in London, which was in a greasy condition, when pltf., a boy five years of age, stepped off the pavement into the street about 4 or 5 feet in front of the omnibus. In order to avoid running over pltf., the driver of the omnibus steered to his off-side, took out the clutch, put on the brakes, & locked the back wheels, with the result that the omnibus skidded & its near side struck & injured pltf. In an action to recover damages for the personal injuries, the jury found that there was no negligence on the part of the driver, but they disagreed upon the question whether the omnibus was a nuisance:—Held: there was no evidence that the motor omnibus was a nuisance. —PARKER v. LONDON GENERAL OMNIBUS CO., LTD. (1909), 101 L. T. 623; 74 J. P. 20; 26 T. L. R. 18; 53 Sol. Jo. 867; 7 L. G. R. 1111, C. A.

1514. ———.]—Defective condition—Resulting in collision.—Owing to a defect in the axle of defts.' motor lorry a wheel came off while the lorry was being driven in a public highway, & damaged pltf.'s van. Two days before the accident defts. had received back the lorry from the makers, a firm of known competence, to whom it had been sent to be overhauled & repaired. In an action by pltf. for the damage sustained, the county ct. judge found that defts. were not, but that the repairers were, negligent, & he gave judgment for the pltf. on the ground that there had been a breach of Motor Cars (Use & Construction) Order, 1904, art. 11, reg. 6, which breach caused the damage:—Held: (1) the mere breach of Motor Cars (Use & Construction) Order, 1904, art. 11, reg. 6, did not of itself afford a cause of action to pltf.; (2) defts. did not at common law owe an absolute duty to pltf. that the lorry should be in a safe & proper condition; (3) the lorry was not in itself a nuisance; (4) pltf. having failed to establish knowledge or negligence on the part of defts. was not entitled to recover.—*PHILLIPS v. a. Raised platform—Assumption of road by company.]—Deft. erected a platform in front of a row of shops upon the highway, & raised about three feet above it, with a flight of steps leading down from one end & into the side road which intersected it. The road on which the shops were had been a public highway for forty years until about fifteen years before the erection of the platform, when it was gravelled by a joint stock road co., who had since kept it in repair & collected tolls. Deft.

was convicted for obstructing the highway, the jury having found that the platform was a nuisance.—Held: the road being a highway, its assumption by the road co. was no answer to the indictment.—R. v. DAVIS (1874), 35 U. C. R. 107.—CAN.

1519. Lamp projecting over pavement—Falling on passer-by—Want of repair known to defendant.]—

Deft. had a lamp projecting from his premises over the footway in a street. It fell on pltf., who was passing underneath, & injured her. Deft. had shortly before employed a competent person C., to put the lamp in good repair, but at the time it fell it was, though not to his knowledge, in a dangerous & decayed state. The jury found there was no personal negligence in deft., but there was negligence in C.:—Held: (LUSH, & QUAIN, J.J.) it was the absolute duty of deft. as occupier of premises, having a lamp in such position, to prevent its becoming dangerous to the public; & if, in fact, it did become dangerous it was a nuisance, & for any injury caused by such nuisance deft. was liable; & he could not shift the liability arising from such a duty from himself by having employed a competent person to do the necessary repairs; (BLACKBURN, J.), as deft. had express knowledge shortly before of the lamp needing repair, he was then bound to put it into reasonable repair; & was liable for the consequences of its not being in repair, arising from the breach of duty in the person, however competent, whom he had employed.—*TARRY v. A road was nine feet wide; & there being a piece of unenclosed land at the side of it, also nine feet wide, which land was so rough & uneven that no carriage ever did or could go over it, the owner of the adjoining field took this land into his field, & put a fence round it. The surveyor of the highways took down the fence:—Held: he was not justified in so doing, under the above sect., as the fence was not on the road.—*EVANS v. 1530. ——— Cottage built on disused ground.]—An information against C. was laid before justices, under the above sect., for that he encroached on a carriage way by making a cottage within fifteen feet of the centre of the carriage way. It appeared that the carriage way was metalled, & that the cottage had been made within fifteen feet of the centre of the road so metalled; but that it was not made on a part which had been metalled or repaired by the surveyor within six months, but upon land which, though open to the metalled part of the highway, & forming part of it, & liable to be used by the public, had not been so used for many years. The justices having convicted:—Held: the conviction was wrong; for, in order to justify a conviction under the above sect., the encroachment must be upon a highway as defined in sect. 63, that is, on a highway repaired by the surveyor within six months.—*CHAPMAN v. B., as the owner of the adjoining land, claimed the site of the fence to be his property, being on the highway edge of a ditch at the roadside; but the justices found that the site was part of the highway & convicted B.:—Held: the justices had jurisdiction to decide whether the site was a highway or no highway, & whether they were right or wrong, the conviction could not be set aside on certiorari, as the statute took away the certiorari.—*R. v. See Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72.

1537. Actual "Injury, interruption or personal danger."—Necessity to prove—Fire within fifty feet of highway.—In order to constitute an offence under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72, it must be shown that the fire made was to the injury of the highway, or to the injury, interruption, or personal danger of any person travelling thereon.

It is not a nuisance per se but only if done to the injury of the highway or passers-by, & to prove the offence, it must be shown not only that applt. did it, but that he did it "to the injury of the highway or to the injury, interruption or personal danger of any person travelling thereon." In reading the passage it might be said that it would be a nuisance in any case if it was to the annoyance of the public, but we are not dealing with a section creating an offence but one giving a summary means of proceeding when the nuisance is within fifty feet (WILLIS, J.).—STINSON v. BROWNING (1860), L. R. 1 C. P. 321; Har. & Ruth. 203; 35 L. J. M. C. 152; 13 L. T. 799; 30 J. P. 312; 12 Jur. N. S. 262; 14 W. R. 395.

1538. — — — — Tar barrel on highway.—H. was charged under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72, with unlawfully assisting in making a fire on the highway. He was rolling a tar barrel which was alight, & causing it to burn on Guy Fawkes Day, but no one was injured or endangered: Held: the justices were wrong in convicting H., as it was essential to the offence that passengers should be endangered or interrupted.—HILL v. SOMERSET (1887), 51 J. P. 742, D. C.

1539. Unguarded fire pail—For repairing of gas main—Accident due to third person.—Workmen employed by defts., a gas co., for the purpose of carrying out repairs to a gas main in a highway, placed a fire pail, on which was a ladle containing molten lead, on unenclosed land adjacent to the highway. Pltf., a young child, was playing with other children near the fire when a passer-by accidentally knocked over the fire pail, & the molten lead was spilled on pltf., causing her injury:—Held: defts. were liable on the ground that what they were doing was a nuisance in that it was dangerous unless precautions were taken to guard persons using the highway from the danger.—CRANE v. SOUTH SUBURBAN GAS CO., [1916] 1 K. B. 33; 35 L. J. K. B. 172; 114 L. T. 71; 80 J. P. 51; 82 L. R. 74; 60 Sol. Jo. 222; 14 L. G. R. 3821, D. C.

SUB-SECT. 13. — ENGINES AND MACHINERY NEAR HIGHWAY.

1540. Railway engine—Horses frightened.—By a private statute a co. was incorporated for the making of a railway in a line parallel to & in some places within five yards of a highway, from which line no deviation was to be made exceeding one hundred yards. A subsequent Act authorised the use of locomotive engines on the railway. Upon an indictment for using the engines, whereby horses were frightened & accidents occasioned on the highway, the alleged nuisance was found by verdict, but it was also found that the engines were of the best construction & used with due care, & that by reason of these engines the public obtained better & cheaper coal:—Held: such a restriction of the rights of the public was not unreasonable, & must be presumed to have been contemplated by the legislature when authorising the use of locomotive engines without words of qualification.—R. v. PEASE (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 30; 1 Nev. & M. K. B. 690; 1 Nev. & M. M. C. 535; 2 L. J. M. C. 26; 110 E. R. 366.

1541. — — — — ]—In an action against defts., a railway co., it appeared that pltf. were leaving a station belonging to defts. in a carriage, when the horse was frightened by the sight & sound of a locomotive engine at the station which was blowing off steam, & the carriage was upset & pltf. injured. It did not appear that the engine was defective or that it was used in an improper manner, or that the approach to the station was inconvenient, but the jury found that defts. were guilty of negligence in not screening the railway from the roadway leading to the station, & that such negligence had caused the accident:—Held: defts. were not liable, as there was no evidence of any obligation on their part to screen the railway from the road.—SIMKIN v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 453; 59 L. T. 797; 53 J. P. 85; 4 T. L. R. 699, C. A.

b. Steam engine—Whistle—Horse frightened.—ROX v. LUCKNOW VILLAGE (1893), 21 A. R. 1.—CAN.

1542. Steam threshing machine—Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 70—Knowledge of defendant.]—Deft. was the owner of a steam threshing machine, which he lent to hire to a farmer, & sent his man with it, who superintended it. The machine was erected within a distance of twenty-five yards from the highway, but there was no evidence to show that deft. directed it to be so erected, & he was himself not present at the time. Being convicted under the above sect.:—Held: the conviction was bad.—HARRISON v. LEAPER (1862), 5 L. T. 640; 26 J. P. 373.

1543. ——— Portable engine.]—A portable steam engine, upon wheels & drawn by horse power, used to drive a threshing machine within a barn, but not fixed thereto or to the soil, is within the above sect.—SMITH v. STOKES (1863), 4 B. & S. 84; 2 New Rep. 278; 32 L. J. M. C. 199; 8 L. T. 425; 27 J. P. 535; 11 W. R. 753; 122 E. R. 391.

1544. Steam pump — Horses frightened.]—Adjoining a public highway was a pump-house of deft. railway co., which, when worked, created much noise, & ejected steam in such a manner as to render it impossible to take some horses along that part of the highway in safety. The pump-house had been in its present position for many years. While pltf.'s coachman, who was acquainted with that part of the highway, was driving pltf.'s carriage past the pump-house, the horses took fright, bolted, & met with an accident. In an action against defts. for damages resulting from such accident:—Held: there was nothing to show that there was any negligence or breach of duty on the part of defts. so as to enable pltf. to maintain his action.—RAMSDEN v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. CO. (1888), 53 J. P. 183, D. C.

SUB-SECT. 11.—VEHICLES, ETC., LEFT ON ROADSIDE.

1545. Steam plough & van Horse frightened.]—A house-van attached to a steam plough was left for the night on the grassy side of a highway by deft. The van & plough were four or five feet from the metalled part of the way. During the evening pltf.'s testator drove his mare in a cart along the metalled road. The mare was a kicker, but he was unaware of her vice. Passing the vans she shied at it, kicked, & galloped kicking for one hundred & forty yards, then got her leg over the shaft, fell, & kicked her driver as he rolled out of the cart. He afterwards died from the kick so received. In an action under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), s. 1, by his exors. for wrongful & negligent obstruction of the highway, the jury found that the van was left where it stood unreasonably, & negligently, & caused some appreciable danger to vehicles passing along the metalled parts of the road; that the death was occasioned by the van standing where it did, & by the inherent vice of the mare combined, & that there was no contributory negligence:—Held: on these findings the verdict & judgment must be for pltf.; for the unauthorised, unreasonable, & dangerous user of the highway by deft. was the proximate cause of the injury.—HARRIS v. MOBBS (1878), 3 Ex. D. 268; 39 L. T. 164; 42 J. P. 759; 27 W. R. 154.

1546. Farm roller—Horse frightened.]—Deft. farmed land on either side of a highway. His servants removed a roller from one of his fields across the highway to the gate of the opposite field, & taking away the horses, left the roller on the greensward at the roadside with its shafts turned up, but projecting a few inches over the metalled part of the road, intending it to remain there until it should suit their convenience to draw it away. Pltf.'s wife drove past the spot, & her pony shied at the roller, overturned the carriage & caused her death. In an action under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), the jury found that the accident was caused by an unreasonable user by deft. of the highway:—Held: the verdict was warranted by the evidence, & pltf. was entitled to judgment.—WILKINS v. 1548. — Whether "passing upon highway" — Horses unattended outside house.]—Applt., the driver of a farm wagon, was convicted under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 73, it appearing from the evidence that when he was driving along a highway he stopped his horses & went into a public-house. The horses remained standing outside the house while applt. was inside, & it was contended on his behalf that, as the horses were standing still, the cart was not passing upon the highway:—Held: the conviction was right.—PHYTHIAN v. BAXENDALE, [1895] 1 Q. B. 768; 64 L. J. M. C. 174; 72 L. T. 465; 59 J. P. 217; 43 W. R. 412; 30 Sol. Jo. 397; 18 Cox, C. C. 119; 15 R. 324, D. C.

1550. Refusal to disclose owner's name—Highway Act, 1772 (c. 78), s. 60—Remedy.]—A magistrate seeing a person riding on a cart, without any person being with the horses to guide them, requested to know the name of the owner of the cart. The person not only refused the information, but placed himself before the board, on which the owner's name was painted, so that the magistrate could not read it. The magistrate then removed him from his situation & read the name. In an action for the assault:—Held: the magistrate was not justified under the above sect. in removing unattended along the highway. The horses tore open some of the bags & ate of the wheat in such quantities that four of them died & others were injured:—Held: the teamster was not liable in damages for the loss of, & injury to, the horses on the ground of nuisance.—McLARY v. 1551. Driving two vehicles together—Manner in which horses must be attached—Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 77.]—A. was driving two carts, & the horse of the hinder cart was attached by a rope from its head, which, after being passed over the back of the first cart, was fastened to the body of the first cart about the centre of it, & the horse's head was drawn close up to the back of the first cart: Held: a compliance with the provisions of the above sect. —ROBERTSON v. BIRKETT (1858), 32 L. T. O. S. 105; 7 W. R. 50; 22 J. P. Jo. 753.

1552. "Driver" Whether rider included.]—Applt. was convicted by justices of furiously riding on the back of a horse along a highway, & a penalty of £1 was imposed upon him:—Held: although the word "rider" was not mentioned in the penal clause of Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 78, the justices had jurisdiction to convict applt.

It may have been intended by the legislature that the word "driver" shall include "rider," because a person riding must "drive," that is, guide or conduct the horse. The word "drive" is sometimes popularly used in this sense; & it is applied to a rider at the beginning of this very sect., where it provides that, "if the driver of any waggon, cart, or other carriage of any kind shall ride . . . upon any horse or horses drawing the same" without the means of proper control, he shall commit an offence against the Act; it is also applied to the person who ought to be in charge of the vehicle, but who quits it & goes to the other side of the hedge. I therefore think it would not be an extravagant construction to hold that in the latter part of the penal clause "driver" means a person guiding or conducting, & therefore a "rider" (GROVE, J.).—WILLIAMS v. EVANS (1870), 1 Ex. D. 277; 35 L. T. 864; 41 J. P. 151. Annotation: Refd. A.-G. v. Beauchamp, [1920] 1 K. B. 650.

1554. — Cart conveying goods to market—Whether included—Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 76.]—The above sect. which requires the owner's name to be painted on every "waggon, cart, or other such carriage" used on any highway, & imposes a penalty upon default only includes carriages ejusdem generis with a waggon or cart.

A light spring cart with two wheels, used by an agricultural implement maker for the conveyance of the owner & his family, & also of agricultural implements to market, & upon which duty under Revenue Act, 1869 (c. 14), s. 18, was paid:—Held: not to be ejusdem generis with a waggon or cart for the purposes of the above sect.—*DANBY v. Applt. signalled to the driver of the motor car to pass him on his near side & it did so. The motor car was the only other vehicle on the road at the time, & its driver was not inconvenienced or delayed by the action of applt.:—Held: applt. had not committed an offence under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 78.—*NUTTALL v. 1561. Water dripping from bridge on to highway.]—A complaint was made against appts., a railway co., under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 8, in respect of a "nuisance" alleged to exist in & upon their premises, a railway bridge crossing over a public street, by reason of a want of proper & sufficient means to prevent the percolation & overflow of water upon persons passing under or near to the premises. It was proved that during rainy weather, & for some time afterwards, the water in a dirty state percolated through the bottom of the bridge, which was formed of wooden planks, & fell upon the persons passing along the street:—Held: although there might be a nuisance, in respect of which appts. were liable to be indicted, they were not liable to be proceeded against under this Act, inasmuch as the word "nuisance" in sect. 8 must be read in the sense of nuisances injurious to health & the percolation of water as above mentioned could only be said to be indirectly a nuisance injurious to health.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 1562. Snow on street—Liability of tramway company.]—A tramway co. after a heavy fall of snow cleared their track by means of a snow-plough & heaped up the snow upon the sides of the streets: they then scattered salt upon the rails & in the vicinity; the town council did not take any immediate steps to remove the briny slush so produced, & it was left upon the streets:—Held: a legal nuisance had been committed which was not sanctioned by either the special or the general Tramways Acts, & the default, if any, of the town council did not affect the primary liability of the tramway co.—OGSTON v. ABERDEEN DISTRICT TRAMWAYS CO., [1897] A. C. 111; 66 L. J. P. C. 1; 75 L. T. 633; 61 J. P. 436; 13 T. L. R. 123, H. L.

A pipe connected with the eave troughs conducted the water from the roof down the side of the building, & by means of a spout discharged it upon the sidewalk, where in the winter it was formed into a ridge of ice upon which pltf. slipped & fell while walking in the street, & injured herself:—Held: defts. were not liable.

1563. —[The removal of snow from the portion of a road lying between the rails of a tramway is not part of the "maintenance" of that portion within Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 28, so as to cast upon the tramway co. the duty of removing it unless the fall of snow is of such a depth as to render the road impassable. The mere fact that the removal of the snow will render the passage over the road more convenient is not enough to bring the case within the sect.—ACTON DISTRICT COUNCIL v. 1566. Removal of supporting bank—Bank built to check landslides—Whether injunction proper remedy—Probability of further landslides remote.]—A public highway vested in the W. Corp'n. ran for some 1,200 feet along the top of a slope rising about 20 feet up from the river S., & the slope continued on the other side of the road at varying heights of about 300 feet. In 1875 a serious landslide occurred which destroyed the road & houses along this slope. Engineers advised that to prevent future landslides a great weight should be placed on the toe of the slope alongside the river, & accordingly the co. which then owned the land on which the slope was dumped over 40,000 tons of slag along the toe. Trees have since grown on the slope, & houses have been built on it, & no further landslide has taken place except for trivial local slips. Defts., the present owners of the land on which the slag is, having recently commenced to work it, the W. Corp'n. brought this action to restrain them by injunction from excavating, removing or working the slag so as to create a nuisance to the public or to cause damage to the road:—Held: pltf. had made out no case upon which the ct. ought to grant an injunction to prevent the user by a person of his own property, as it was necessary to show that substantial damage at no remote period would result; but on the evidence the land on which the road was, & the whole of the slope, had come to rest, & the removal of the slag heap would not have the slightest effect on the road if a sufficient buttress to the road which was at the higher level was left.—

streets for the purpose of laying down their main pipes, on the ground that they have obtained the permission of the surveyor of highways, or of the local comrs. for lighting the town, or on the ground that the act is necessary for the mere convenient enjoyment of the adjoining houses; & they are liable to an indictment for the nuisance.

It lies on defts. to show they have a lawful excuse. [Counsel] relies on the Joint Stock Companies Act, but it is quite clear that that Act gives them no authority over the rights of other individuals or the public. It merely enables them to sue & be sued & to do such acts as other private individuals or partnerships might lawfully do. As to the Act for lighting Sheffield, it was not much relied on & it clearly furnishes no authority for what defts. have done. Then, is there any common law authority? Counsel pointed to the licence of the surveyor of highways; but he has authority only to do what is necessary for the repair of the highways—not to obstruct them; & unless he can authorise the obstruction, his licence is void (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—*R. v. These acts were not authorised either by statute or by the charter of P.; but the corpn. relied upon irrevocable licences alleged to have been granted by the predecessors of the local board of F., i.e. the highway surveyors, & upon prescription:—Held: (1) the corpn. had no power by common law to break up the roads of the adjoining district; (2) the highway surveyors had no power to grant the alleged irrevocable licences; (3) as no legal grant could have been made, a prescriptive right did not exist; (4) the acquiescence of the local board did not empower the corpn. to continue their acts; (5) such acts amounted to a nuisance.—*PRESTON CORPN. v. ### PART IX. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 22.

r Moving building along highway (Obstruction of street railway)—Deft. J., agreed with his co-deft. D. for the removal of a frame tenement to another part of the city. Under a bye-law of the city, all persons were prohibited from moving any building along any street without the permission of the board of works. In this case no such permission was obtained, & in the course of hauling the building along the line of pths. track one of the sills was upset, thus preventing its further removal for two days, during which time pths. sustained loss by non-receipt of fares & damage to their property.—Held: J. & D. were liable for the loss.—TORONTO STREET RY. CO. v. DOLLERY & JEFFERIES (1886), 12 A. R. 679.—CAN.

a. Written assent—What amounts to.—Held: defts., being indicted for obstructing streets in the town of S., were entitled to an acquittal under 22 Vict. c. 116, s. 15. t. General rule.—Accompliance subject to existing state of things.—Defts. removed pth's porch as a nuisance, & justified as being a committee of the city council, duly authorised to remove anything which was a nuisance. The porch had been in existence for sixty years.—Held: in the absence of evidence as to the original laying out of the street, its dedication to the public should be taken as subject to the encroachment.—*HAGARTY v. a. 1576. Negligence in executing work—Shoring up house—Unprotected beams.]—Where obstructions are placed upon the footway, such as beams for shoring up a house, with the sanction of the local authority, reasonable precautions must be taken that such obstructions are not left in a dangerous condition so as to cause injury to foot passengers.—*HOARE v. 1578. ——— Statute sessions for hire of servants—Immemorial usage necessary.]—Appl. was charged under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72, with obstructing a public footway. He had put up a stall for the sale of refreshments at a statute sessions for the hiring of servants; this had been done for more than fifty years, & the statute sessions had been held before 5 Eliz. c. 4. Applt., thereupon, contended that he had a right by custom to erect his stall in the same way as at a fair, or, at all events, that he bonâ fide claimed such a right, & the justices' jurisdiction was therefore ousted. The justices having convicted applt.:—Held: the justices were right: for that, as the statute sessions were introduced by the Statutes of Labourers, the first of which was in the reign of Edward III., there could be no such custom by immemorial usage as was claimed.—*SIMPSON v. 1582. Limited dedication generally, see Part III., Sect. 2, sub-sect. 6, ante.

1588. General rule—Acceptance subject to existing state of things.]—The corpn. of Yarmouth are, & have been since the time of King John, owners of the soil of the south quay, in that borough. The quay is bounded on the east by houses, & on the west by Yarmouth Haven. From the time of Charles I., there has been a common & public highway over the quay; & so far back as living memory, the occupiers of some of the houses have used a part of the quay fronting them for depositing thereon anchors, timber, boats & other incumbrances. Such user was in fact enjoyed, as of right, for more than twenty years, but not immemorably; & though it caused some inconvenience to the public, it did not produce an actual obstruction of the highway. By the rolls of the court leet of the borough, from the year 1632 to 1653, it appeared that many persons had been amerced for "overburdening" the quay with anchors, timber, blocks, etc., & thereby obstructing the highway. An occupier of one of the houses in the exercise of an alleged right, placed upon a part of the quay in front of his house, anchors, timber & other incumbrances, whereby the free use of the highway was obstructed:—Held: (1) upon these facts, the ct., being at liberty to draw inferences, could not infer that the right claimed had been exercised by the occupiers of the houses before any dedication of the highway to the public; (2) a highway may be dedicated to the public subject to a pre-existing right of user by the occupiers of adjoining land for the purpose of depositing goods thereon.—*MORANT v. 1590. .] (1) If a highway is dedicated to the public with a dangerous obstruction upon it, such as would have been a nuisance if placed upon an ancient way, as, a flight of steps, or a projecting flap, no action can be maintained against the person dedicating it for an injury caused thereby.

(2) Nor will an action lie against the owner of a house having a covered area adjoining a public footway, which area was in existence before & at the time of the dedication of the highway, & was dedicated to the public before Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), for an injury to an individual from the giving way of the covering of the area in consequence of the wear & tear occasioned by public user.

In 1830, houses were erected on land adjoining a new road constructed at a high level as an approach to a new bridge across the Thames. Between these houses & this road was a space which was covered over, as a means of access to the houses, by a flagging in which were gratings to let light & air to the lower part of the buildings, which formed separate tenements, the entrance to which was upon the lower level at the rear. The space so covered had become, by dedication prior to Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), a part of the public footway, & was used as such by the public. In 1862, in consequence of a large number of persons congregating upon the spot, the flagging & grating in front of one of the houses, having become weakened by user, gave way, & several persons were precipitated into the area below, a depth of about 30 feet, & one of them was killed:—Held: in an action by the widow of deceased, under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), there being under the circumstances no legal liability on the part of the lessee of the houses to keep the surface of this way in repair, the action was not maintainable, the gulf at the side of the causeway being the result of the road being raised by the makers of it, not by the land at the side being excavated by the proprietors of it.

(3) The artificial character of the flagging & grating did not make it more or less a way to be repaired by the parish.—ROBBINS v. JONES (1863), 1591. Market rights in street—Subject to toll.]—Pltf. claimed under the lord of the manor of C. as lessee of the street tolls & markets of the town of C. The manor was granted by Henry III. to the inhabitants of C., with a market & fair there, for a term of four years from 1220. Charles I., by letters patent, granted it in fee to H., & all tolls & markets within it. From time immemorial till 1786 there was a market house belonging to the lord of the manor in the High Street of C., & tolls immemorably paid, "as well of the market as for articles hawked about the town, & for stalls & standings for the sale of articles erected in the streets." The right was recognised & confirmed by several local Acts. In 1807 the C. comrs. appointed under 46 Geo. 3, c. 116, became lessees of the tolls, which were taken of a certain amount from 1806 to the time of the present action. Upon one of the boards exhibited in 1841 it appeared that a toll was taken payable by all persons hawking about the town fish, fruit, vegetables, or any other article for which no toll had been before paid in the market, of (inter alia) 1s. for every cartload; & for many years previous to the year 1841, & as long as living witnesses could remember, & continuously down to the time of the action, a similar board with similar words & figures had always been fixed in a conspicuous part of the market house at C. for the time being. The ct. having power to draw inferences of fact:—Held: the claim of toll was good, because it ought to be inferred that the toll had existed from time immemorial; if not, still a lawful origin of the toll within the time of legal memory, by means of a contemporaneous dedication of the streets to the public & a reservation of the toll by the Crown, ought to be inferred; a toll reasonable in amount, but varying from time to time according to the value of money, is valid in law; although a toll traverse, i.e. a toll for the mere use of a public way, is bad, this toll was not merely for passing & repassing, as it imported a licence to rest & stay upon the land for the purpose of selling merchantable commodities.—LAWRENCE v. HITCH (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 521; 9 B. & S. 467; 37 L. J. Q. B. 209; 18 L. T. 483; 32 J. P. 451; 16 W. R. 813, Ex. Ch.

1592. — Dedication of new streets—New streets subject to market rights—Construction of grant.]—By letters patent in 1682 the King granted market rights, "in sine iusta" a certain place called "Spittle Square" to one who was lessee of the square & had acquired greater part of the reversionary interest in it. The grantee or his successors in title laid out the square as a market place with four internal streets. The land immediately surrounding the square was afterwards laid out in four external streets, but it did not appear to whom the property in this surrounding land at any time belonged. There was evidence of a usage from the time of living memory to grant licences & take tolls for the sale of marketable articles over parts of the external streets as well as over the market place & the internal streets:—Held: under the grant "in sine juxta" the market rights extended into the four external streets & the inference from the documents & evidence was that the streets were dedicated to the public subject to the exercise of the market rights.

1593. ————].—The lord of the manor had from time immemorial held a market in W. for the sale of hay & straw. The market was held in High Street, W., & except that it must be held in the parish, was without metes & bounds, & on market days, when the High Street was overcrowded, carts loaded with hay & straw for sale were permitted to stand in streets adjacent to the High Street. Under the powers of Acts of Parliament passed in 1840 & 1865 the local authority constructed new streets adjoining the High Street, & these streets were dedicated to the public by the Acts of Parliament for use as public streets. On market days when the High Street was overcrowded, carts loaded with hay & straw for sale stood in these new streets:—Held: they had a right to stand in these streets subject to the direction & control of the local authority, & the statutory dedication of the new streets to the public must be presumed to have been made subject to their being used for the purposes of the market when the High Street was overcrowded.—*STEPNEY CORPN. v. 1594. Business purposes of adjoining owners—Space between footway & carriageway—Movable seats & shed.—Ptlf. occupied a house standing in a continuous line of houses, in a district within the provisions of Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120). Immediately in front of these houses was a paved public footway, 15 feet wide, then a space 33 feet wide, then a public carriageway 50 feet wide, then an intermediate space 58 feet wide, then a paved public footway 10 or 12 feet wide, immediately in front of another continuous line of houses facing the first-mentioned line. The intermediate spaces between the footways & the carriage road had always been made use of by the owners of the houses opposite in such manner as suited their respective occupations: in some instances they had erected permanent structures; & ptlf., whose houses was a public-house, had, before the Act came into operation, placed in the part opposite to his house a permanent horse-trough; & the carts of his customers stood on that space while the drivers & horses were resting; he had also put there movable seats, & in summer a movable shed, & had fixed sockets which were let into the ground. The footway was always left clear. Ptlf. paid the owner of the soil for permission to use the intermediate space. The public passed over the intermediate space as of right, subject to the above described user of it by the owners of the houses. Persons wishing to get from the footway to the carriage road did so without objection, picking their way where the space was not obstructed. The vestry elected under the Act having removed ptlf.'s shed & seats as obstructions, within sect. 120:—Held: the sect. did not justify them because the intermediate space was not part of a street within the Act, & because the shed & seats were not projections or obstructions against or in front of any house within the Act.

The dedication to the public of the use of the intermediate space was subject to the rights of the landlord & his tenants (WIGHTMAN, J.).—*LE NEVE v. 1597. ———— Goods exposed for sale on pavement.—A metropolitan street, which was immemorially a highway, had a strip of ground about 12 feet wide between the carriageway & the houses on either side. This strip had long been paved & raised above the level of the carriageway. The occupiers of houses having for many years exposed their goods on part of this strip of ground, were summoned for causing an obstruction. There was no evidence before the magistrate to show when the practice of thus exposing the goods commenced, but it prevailed as far back as 1838:—Held: the magistrate was justified in drawing the inference that the obstruction was not so ancient as the highway, so as to qualify the dedication, & the occupiers were properly convicted of obstructing the highway within Metropolitan Police Act, 1839 (c. 47), s. 60.

In the cases which have been cited there was a fair ground for presuming that the obstruction had been coeval with the dedication. When there is nothing to show that these two things existed at two different epochs, then we may safely presume that they came into existence together. The present case stands on this footing that the road had existed from time immemorial & the obstruction had not been so. Then the result is that applt. might well have been convicted of the offence stated (COCKBURN, C.J.).—SPICE v. PEACOCK (1875), 39 J. P. 581.

An owner of land conveyed a portion thereof to a local authority for the purpose of tipping refuse thereon, the local authority purchasing the same under the powers given to them by the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), & two local Acts. Subsequently the owner of the remaining portion sold it to a purchaser, who formed a street thereon & built houses abutting on the street. The local authority acting under their powers, from time to time deposited refuse on the land purchased by them, with the result that the deposit, gradually increasing in size & becoming impervious to rain water, caused the rain water, which previously to the deposit flowed in a direction away from the street, to be diverted & overflow into the street & form holes or gullies therein dangerous to passers-by. Pltf., lawfully passing through the street, fell into one of these gullies & sustained personal injuries:—Held: the gully in the street was a nuisance caused by defts. without justification, & they were liable to pltf. in damages for the injuries sustained by him. *PRIEST v. By sect. 97, it was enacted that in all cases, wherein, in the exercise of such power, any part of any carriage road, etc., should be found necessary to be cut through, raised, sunk, taken, or so much injured as to be impassable or inconvenient for passengers or carriages, etc., or to the persons entitled to the use thereof, the co. should, at their own expense, before any such roads, etc., should be so cut through, etc., cause a good & sufficient carriage road, etc., to be set out & made instead thereof, as convenient for passengers & carriages as the former road, or as near thereto as might be. The co. had diverted a highway, & obstructed the old road by building a wall across it, & had made a new road, which was neither as convenient to the public as the old one, nor as near thereto as might be:—Held: they were indictable, in the common form, for so obstructing the highway.

1628. Malicious act of third party—Causing dangerous obstruction.]—Where the proximate cause of the raising of an iron plate, lid, or covering of a water apparatus in a street of the metropolis above the level of the pavement so as to be a dangerous obstruction by sticking up, is the malicious act of a third person against which precautions would have been inoperative, the Metropolitan Water Board is not liable to any one, thrown down by it & hurt, in the absence of a finding that the occurrence could or ought to have been foreseen & provided against. Although bound to exercise all reasonable care, the Board is not in the absence of such a finding responsible for damage, caused by the malicious acts of third persons.—*SIMPSON v. 1629. Obstruction Inappreciable — Whether a nuisance.]—The judge, on the trial of an indictment, asked the jury whether they thought the erection would prove “a material nuisance,” in which case they were to find a verdict of guilty; but told them that, if they thought the “nuisance” was so slight, rare & uncertain that deft. ought not to be made criminally liable for it, they should acquit him: & the jury saying that they considered the erection, “although a nuisance, was not sufficiently so to render deft. criminally liable,” he directed an acquittal. On motion for a new trial for misdirection:—Held: the charge was to be understood as meaning, not that a party may legally commit a small nuisance, but that an obstruction might be so insignificant as not to constitute a nuisance; & the jury must be understood as finding that the obstruction in question was so insignificant, & therefore there was not a misdirection warranting a new trial.—*R. v. The stall was of a permanent character, having gas & water laid on to it from the mains, & being assessed to the rates at £32. There was sufficient room for the passage of traffic up & down the street on either side of the stall. One of the covenants of the lease was that nothing should be hung, placed or exposed for sale or otherwise outside the premises. Pltf. brought an action for damages & injunction for breach thereof, complaining that defts. greatly interfered with the comfort of the people coming to his shop. The jury found that defts. had been guilty of a breach of the covenant in question, & also that there was such an unreasonable use of the highway as to amount to a public nuisance, & pltf. had in consequence sustained damage, but to what amount they were unable to say. During the eighteen years for which the nuisance had existed, pltf. had only once complained to defts. about it. Pltf. upon the findings of the jury asked for an injunction:—Held: there was such acquiescence on the part of pltf. in the nuisance that an injunction could not be granted.—*ROGERS v. ### SECT. 3.—REMEDIES.

SUB-SECT. 1. ABATEMENT OF NUISANCE.

A. By Private Person.

1639. Right of member of public to abate—Necessity for special damage.—The authority of a private individual to abate a nuisance in a public highway, is conditional on the fact that the nuisance does him some special injury, & he can only interfere with such a nuisance so far as may be necessary to the exercise of his right of passing along the highway. A plea justifying damage to the property of a person who has improperly placed a nuisance on a highway, must show either that the abatement of the nuisance was absolutely necessary to enable the person doing the damage to pass, or that the person doing the damage could not, avoiding the nuisance, have passed along the highway with reasonable convenience. To a declaration complaining of an injury done to a wharf abutting on the river Thames by means of a certain vessel navigating the river of which deft. had the care & management, deft. pleaded in substance that the wharf in the declaration mentioned was a woodwork erection below low water mark into the navigable river Thames, which was a certain public Queen's highway; that the wharf was a common nuisance, constructed & wilfully continued by deft. after notice; that deft. had the care & management of a certain vessel & having such care had occasion to pass over the particular part of the bed & course of the river; that in so passing he directed & managed the vessel with all the skill & care that would have been due & proper had the part of the bed & course of the river not been obstructed as aforesaid; & that he did no unnecessary damage:—Held: on motion for judgment, non obstante verdicto, bad for not showing that deft. could not with reasonable convenience pass along without causing the damage complained of.—DIMES v. PETLEY (1850), 15 Q. B. 276; 19 L. J. Q. B. 449; 16 L. T. O. S. 1; 14 J. P. 653; 14 Jur. 1132; 117 E. R. 462.

1641. ——— Obstruction must constitute nuisance.—The use of a public footway includes that of a perambulator as a usual accompaniment of a large class of foot passengers, if of a size & weight not to inconvenience other passengers, & not to injure the soil. Whether under the circumstances the use of such a vehicle be justifiable is a question of fact for the jury. One of the public has no right to remove an encumbrance to the soil of a highway unless it be also a nuisance to the way. The owner of the soil of a highway may remove anything thereon not justified by the easement though not a nuisance to the way. The owner of the soil may remove anything that encumbers his close, except such things as are usual accompaniments of a large class of foot passengers, being so small & light, as neither to be a nuisance to other passengers nor to be injurious to the soil. —*R. v. 1649. — Nuisance arising from non-feasance—Repair of bridge.—There is a broad difference between removing an obstruction which has been wrongfully placed in the highway, & making good by a permanent structure the result of mere non-feasance on the part of those charged with the duty of repairing; therefore a person who is merely entitled as one of the public to use a bridge carrying the highway over a river is not justified in entering on another person's land, & re-erecting the bridge which has been allowed to fall into a state of decay. An operation of this nature cannot properly fall under the term "abatement," even if the right to "abate" can be said to exist at all in the case of a nuisance arising from mere non-feasance. — *CAMPBELL DAVYS v. 1658. Removal by surveyor of highways—Liability for trespass After conviction obtained—Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 69. Trespass for pulling down a cottage. Plea: Not guilty by statute. Pltf. was convicted by three justices, under above Act, for an encroachment on a highway. Deft., who was surveyor of the highways, pulled down pltf.'s cottage, which was what the conviction referred to, but which was not in fact an encroachment within the meaning of above Act. No warrant issued directing deft. to do the act:—Held: sect. 69 of above Act, requires the surveyor to execute a conviction under that Act, by pulling down the encroachment though there is no warrant; & consequently the conviction, though not itself correct, was a defence to this action, as deft. was shown to be in the position of a person bound to execute the judgment of a tribunal of competent jurisdiction.

When we look at sect. 69, it appears that every conviction under it involves a judgment quod prosternatur, which the surveyor is required to execute. The surveyor, if he acts without a conviction, acts at his peril; but when there is one it is a defence, not as conclusive evidence that the alleged encroachment really was one, but on the principle that the surveyor acted in obedience to the judgment of a ct. of competent jurisdiction which he was bound to execute (*LORD CAMPBELL, (C.J.)—KEANE v. The drain & brickwork, with the earth covering the same, formed a nuisance & obstruction to the highway. Applt., being surveyor of highways for the parish within which resp.'s residence was situate, took up & removed the drain & the brickwork, & in so doing damaged them. Applt. having been charged upon an information before justices with committing damage, injury, & spoil upon resp.'s property, against sect. 52 of above Act, they found that applt. acted bonâ fide, but that he did not do the act complained of under a fair & reasonable supposition that he had a right to do it, & they convicted him of the offence charged: Held: the conviction was wrong, & the information ought to have been dismissed; for applt. was not a private individual, but the surveyor of highways, having a control over, & an interest in, the drains laid for carrying off the water, & in dealing bonâ fide with the drains he was not guilty of wilful or malicious damage.

(2) Semle: as applt., according to the finding of the justices, acted bonâ fide, they ought, upon the facts stated, also to have found that he acted under a fair & reasonable supposition that he had a right to do what was complained of in the information.—*DENNY v. By sect. 66 of above Act

"Provided always . . . that no person shall be obliged to fell any timber trees growing in hedges at any time whatsoever, except where the highways shall be ordered to be widened or enlarged as herein mentioned, or then to cut down . . . any oak . . . except in the months of Apr, May, or June, or any ash, elm, or other trees in any other months than Dec., Jan., Feb., or Mar. Applt. was summoned under sect. 65 of above Act for that a yew tree growing on his lands obstructed a carriageway, & the magistrates made an order for its removal. It was contended on his behalf that, as no order had been made for widening the road, under sect. 66 of above Act he could not be ordered to remove it even if it was an obstruction. But, even if they could order its removal, they could not do so in July, when they made the order:—Held: the order was right, & sect. 66 of above Act did not apply to such a case as this at all.—*BULLEN v. A prior owner of the land had, in 1865, made the excavation in order to quarry for limestone & until then the surfaces of the road & the land had been on the same level. The excavation being a source of danger & obstruction to persons using the road, the excavator, to protect them & the road, built alongside the road a wall, the bottom of which rested on a ledge of limestone left ungotten for the purpose & served as a retaining wall for the subsoil of the road & as a fence wall above its surface. In Feb. 1913, part of the wall collapsed & fell into the quarry, & in consequence a considerable part of the subsoil of the road & of its surface fell in also, the road thus becoming impassable, a source of danger to persons attempting to use it, & a nuisance, liable under Quarry (Fencing) Act, 1887 (c. 19), s. 3, to be dealt with summarily under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55):—Held: in an action by the A.-G. at the relation of the council, a mandatory order must be made on deft. to abate the nuisance by restoring the road to its condition prior to the subsidence & by rebuilding the wall or providing some other reasonable fence between the road & the quarry.—*A.-G. v. 1669. ———— Encroachment.—By an inclosure award in 1814 it was awarded that there should be a certain public carriage road & highway of the width of thirty-five feet in the parish of B., the land adjoining the road on the south side thereof being allotted to the predecessors in title of S., who were required under the award to fence the land bounding the road. In or about the year 1883 the predecessor in title of S. erected an iron fence separating his land to the south of the road from the roadway. At some time thereafter the land to the north of the road was fenced, & the width of the roadway before the year 1906 had become reduced to between twenty-five & twenty-seven feet. In 1906 it was alleged that S. removed the fence bounding the land on the south side of the road nearer to the fence on the north side, thus encroaching on the highway. In 1907 the rural district council called on S. to set back his fence so as to restore a width of thirty-five feet to the roadway, & on his refusal, twice took down the fence, which S. on each occasion re-erected in the same position. In an action by the A.-G. & the rural district council for an injunction to restrain deft. S. from inclosing or encroaching upon the highway or from erecting any fence within thirty-five feet of the northern boundary of the road:—Held: (1) there had been no encroachment in 1906; (2) in respect of any alleged encroachment in 1883, the lapse of time was sufficient defence to the action by plffs.; & (3) as to the action by the A.-G., no encroachment upon the highway by the fence complained of having been shown, an injunction must be refused, with costs against plffs.—*A.-G. & GODSTONE RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. Pltf. alleged that deft. had erected on pltf.'s land a hoarding on poles in order to block out the access of light to a window in the cottage, & had in so doing committed a trespass. Pltf. also alleged that the poles & hoarding produced a rattling & creaking noise which was an intolerable nuisance to pltf. & his tenants. Pltf. claimed an injunction to restrain the trespass & the nuisance. At the trial it was proved that the cottage was in the occupation of a weekly tenant of pltf., who was not a party to the action. There was no evidence that the acts of deft. had caused any diminution of value of, or other injury to, the reversion: Held: the poles & hoarding not being of such a permanent character as to injure the reversion pltf. could not maintain an action for trespass; & that the erection of the poles on pltf.'s land was too trifling an injury to entitle pltf. to an injunction. — COOPER V. At the trial, the judge directed the jury to acquit them on one of the counts on the ground that they were justified under their special Act in doing what was alleged in such count to be an obstruction. The jury found a verdict for defts. The prosecutor obtained a rule nisi to stay entry of judgment for defts. on the ground that such direction was wrong in law: Held: such rule must be discharged, since, whether the direction was wrong or not, the entry of the judgment would not prevent the prosecutors from bringing a second indictment for the continuance of the alleged obstruction, & therefore their rights would not be altered by it. — R. v. 1724. ——— Obstruction by walking abreast
—Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 28.]—

Three men walked abreast on the pavement of a street back & forward, causing passengers to go aside on the highway. On a summons under above Act:—Held: they could not be convicted, as they had not used any cart, carriage, or animal, & the only remedy seemed to be by indictment.

If these persons had been indicted for a nuisance a stop might have been put to these roughs & rowdies so annoying respectable people. Still, we must keep to the words of the Act. The various ways of causing obstruction are specified, namely, "by carts, carriages, sledges, trunks, or barrows, or any animal," & we can only give to the words "or other means" the meaning that a similar class of means shall be resorted to (FIELD, J.). WILLIAMS* (1891), 55 J. P. 408, D. C.

1723. — Civil action pending—Postponement.]—The trial of an indictment for obstructing a highway, not postponed at the instance of deft. until the trial of an action brought by prosecutor against him for injury by reason of the obstruction of the same highway.

A person ought not to be harassed with two proceedings, & when he is so, the ct. have a right to determine which of the two proceedings shall be pursued, so as to place the parties in a position of equality. Here, however, being an allegation of a public nuisance, & the indictment founded only on that, it is only a public grievance by reason of a private wrong. Therefore, if the prosecutor will undertake not to proceed in the action—so much of it as relates to the right of way—no order shall be made (WIGHTMAN, J.).—R. v. BOWLES (1861). 2 F. & F. 371.

1727. Continuing nuisance—Order to abate.]—Where a nuisance is temporary, as the steeping public streets, thereby committing a common nuisance, should be by indictment.—R. v. CITY OF LONDON CORPN. (1900), 32 O. R. 326.—CAN.

d. ——— Form of indictment.]
--An indictment for obstructing a highway should state in what way the obstruction interferes with the comfort of the public—whether to those passing along the highway or residing near it or otherwise. There ought to be some description of the highway, & it must appear that the nuisance has been committed in the county in which the indictment is found.—R. v. REYNOLDS (1906), 2 E. L. R. 42.—CAN.

1727 i. Continuing nuisance—Order to abate.]—Defts. were indicted for a nuisance in obstructing a highway for stinking hides, etc., there need not be judgment that it be abated.

Every judgment should be adapted to the nature of the case (REYNOLDS, J.).

The cases cited by [counsel] were of a permanent nuisance. But here erecting the mole is not the nuisance, for it might be lawful to do that, but the nuisance arises from the use he puts it to. If a dye-house or any stinking trade were indicted you shall not pull down the house where the trade was carried on. Here could be no judgment to abate any thing (LORD RAYMOND, C.J.).—R. v. PAPPINEAU (1726), 2 Stra. 686; 93 E. R. 781; sub nom. R. v. PAPINIAN, Sess. Cas. K. B. 135.

1728. ———.]—Upon an indictment for erecting a wall across a highway, not stating the nuisance to be continuing, there need not be judgment to abate it: secus, where it is stated in the indictment as an existing nuisance.

When a debt. is indicted for an existing nuisance, it is usual to state the nuisance & its continuance down to the time of taking the inquisition, & in such cases the judgment should be, that the nuisance be abated. But in this case it does not appear in the indictment that the nuisance was then in existence & it would be absurd to give judgment to abate a supposed nuisance which does not exist. If, however, the nuisance still continue, debt. may be again indicted for continuing it (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—R. v. STEAD (1799), 8 Term Rep. 142; 101 E. R. 1312.

1729. ———.]—Further Indictment.] On the trial of an indictment for continuance of a nuisance, found at the quarter sessions, & removed into the Ct. of Q. B. by certiorari & tried at the assizes, a plea of autrefois convict on a former indictment for same nuisance was not allowed to be added, even by consent, the judge having no jurisdiction to receive it. But the nuisance being a wall, proved to be still standing:—Held: the judgment on the former indictment was conclusive. R. v. MAYBURY (1864), 4 F. & F. 90.

1731. Abatement before judgment—Discretion of court to make order.—If the ct. be satisfied that a nuisance indicted is already effectually abated before judgment is prayed upon the indictment, they will not, in their discretion, give judgment to abate it. They refused to give such judgment upon an indictment for an obstruction in a public highway; which highway after the conviction of debt., was regularly turned by an order of magistrates, & a certificate obtained that the new way was fit for the passage of the public, & on affidavits that so much of the old way indicted as was still retained was freed from all

1736. Disqualification—Pecuniary interest Time for objection—Knowledge of defendant.

—The surveyor of the roads directed trestles to be put at intervals on either side of a road, on which fresh granite had been laid, to confine the traffic to a particular part of it. A. drove his carriage against the trestles to knock them down, in alleged assertion of a right, he deeming the surveyor to have no power so to put the trestles for this object. One of the trestles was injured, & on a summons against A., under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, the justices convicted & fined A. 1s. By a local Act, the justices were made vestrymen, & became interested in the property in the trestles, & also in the fine:—Held: (1) the justices had jurisdiction to convict: & (2) in order to obtain a certiorari to quash the conviction on the ground of the justices being interested, the party should show on the face of his affidavits that neither he nor his advocate before the justices, knew of the objection at the time of the hearing.—R. v. RICHMOND, SURREY JJ. (1860), 2 L. T. 373; 24 J. P. 422; 8 Cox, C. C. 314.

1737. ———.]—As ratepayer.]—At a vestry meeting summoned by a district surveyor to consider (inter alia) the obstruction of a highway by debt., who had deposited & left a heap of earth &

improper construction of their road in crossing it, & were convicted. Nothing having been done to abate the nuisance, the prosecutors moved for judgment on the conviction. Judgment was given sentencing debt. to pay a fine & to abate the nuisance.—R. v. GRAND TRUNK RY. Co. (1858), 17 U. C. R. 165.—CAN.

The county council had made the road, but had not passed a bye-law to make clear the precise course of the road. Deft. was convicted upon an indictment for a nuisance:—Held: the conviction must be quashed.—R. v. RANKIN (1888), 16 U. C. R. 304.—CAN.

manure by the side of the highway, a justice of the peace moved a resolution calling upon deft. to remove the heap. Deft. having failed to remove the heap, a summons was taken out against him by the district surveyor for depositing the heap to the obstruction & annoyance of the highway, & for failing to remove it after notice. The justice who had moved the resolution, & who was a ratepayer of the parish, sat & adjudicated with another justice upon the summons, & made an order directing the heap to be removed & sold, & the proceeds of the sale to be applied to the repair of the highway:—Held: the justice was disqualified from adjudicating upon the summons, for the part taken by him in moving the resolution afforded ground for a reasonable suspicion of bias on his part, though there might not have been bias in fact, & upon the further ground that as a ratepayer he was pecuniarily interested in the result of the summons. R. v. ADAMS (1862), 2 B. & S. 312; 31 L. J. M. C. 109; 5 L. T. 790; 26 J. P. 180; 8 Jur. N. S. 816; 121 E. R. 1080.

Complainant having applied under Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 44), s. 5, for a rule for the justices to show cause why they should not hear & determine the case:—Held: the application was properly made, the statute not being limited to cases in which the justices need protection in the performance of their duties.—*R. v. The Act requires, that the form set forth in the schedule "shall be used on all occasions, with such additions & variations only as may be necessary to adapt it to the particular exigency of the case." Under these words a material variance from the form prescribed is fatal, & may be taken advantage of in a collateral proceeding.

The filling in of the road had been properly done by deft., & the hole was owing to the natural subsidence of the materials, which sometimes takes place, to a greater or less degree, six months or longer after such an excavation has been filled in: Held: deft. was not liable to pltf. for the damage; for there was no obligation on deft. by common law or statute to do more than properly to the authority which is liable to repair any highway that, "having regard to the average expense of repairing highways in the neighbourhood, extraordinary expenses have been incurred by such authority in repairing such highway, by reason of the damage caused by excessive weight passing along the same, or extraordinary traffic thereon," the authority may recover in a summary manner the amount of such expenses from the person by whose order the weight of traffic has been conducted. Applt. used on a highway a locomotive engine & waggons in order to carry goods & materials for the ordinary purposes of his estate.

a nuisance in obstructing a highway. The evidence was contradictory. The ct., on appeal, directed a new trial, contrary to the usual rule, which was affirmed, that such appeals will not be entertained upon questions of evidence.—R. v. McLEAN (1863), 22 U. C. R. 443.—CAN.

q. Cases heard without jury—Duty *of Appellate Court.]—*In cases heard without a jury, the appeal is not governed by the rules applicable to new trials after a trial & verdict, but the duty of the ct. is to rehear the case upon the materials before the trial judge, with such other materials as it may have decided to admit. The ct. must then decide the case, not disregarding the judgment appealed from, but carefully weighing & considering it, & not shrinking from overruling it if on full consideration the ct. comes to the conclusion that the judgment is wrong.—TURNBULL v. CORBETT, O'BRIEN v. CORBETT (1912), 11 E. L. R. 67; 41 N. B. R. 284.—CAN.

The engine was constructed & used in accordance with Locomotives Acts, 1861 (c. 70), & 1865 (c. 83), & the weight of the engine & the width of its wheels were in compliance with Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 28. Justices having made an order for the payment by applt. of a sum to cover extraordinary expenses incurred by the highway authority by reason of the damage caused to the road by the use of the engine & waggons. On a case stated by the justices:—Held: the question of what was "excessive weight" & "extraordinary traffic" within sect. 23 of the latter Act must be determined with reference to the ordinary traffic of the road, & its capacity for bearing weights, & not with reference to abnormal traffic merely, or to weight in excess of that authorised by statute, & therefore the order of the justices was rightly made.

The words in sect. 23, "the average expense of repairing highways in the neighbourhood" are not the absolute test of ascertaining the damage to the particular road caused by "excessive weight" or "extraordinary traffic" thereon, but merely an element in the calculation.—AVELAND (LORD) v. LUCAS (1880), 5 C. P. D. 351; 49 L. J. Q. B. 643; 42 L. T. 788; 44 J. P. 360; 28 W. R. 571, C. A.

1764. — — — — — & trucks.] — Justices having made an order charging the expenses of repairing a highway upon applts. as being extraordinary expenses within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, it appeared that the highway communicated at either end with main roads, & was principally used by farmers & occupiers of land adjoining it for ordinary farm traffic. Applts. having been employed to convey a quantity of manure to a farm adjoining the road, carried it there by means of a traction engine & trucks, the engine weighing 8 & the truck 5 tons. The road, which had not been prepared for, & was not adapted to, the weight of traction engines, was, in consequence of such traffic, rendered unfit for use. The carriage of farm materials & produce by traction engines was usual in the neighbourhood, though not upon this particular road:—Held: the order was right, the passage of traction engines & trucks being "extraordinary traffic" upon the particular road.—R. v. ELLIS (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 406; 30 W. R. 613; sub nom. ELLIS v. MAIDSTONE RURAL SANITARY AUTHORITY, 46 J. P. 295, D. C.

1765. — — — — —.]—Pltfs., who were the road authority within their district, were also the owners of the water mains beneath the roads. A duly licensed traction engine belonging to deft., weighing upwards of 10 tons, & drawing three trucks, broke the water main under one of the streets for which pltfs. were the road authority. The main had been laid at least thirty years, but was found as a fact to be sufficiently strong & well laid to withstand the pressure of the ordinary traffic of the district. Pltfs., had been guilty of no neglect or default in the execution of their duty as the road authority, & neither deft. nor his servants had been guilty of any neglect or want of skill or care in the construction or user of the traction engine. A county ct. judge found that the injury was caused by the excessive weight of deft.'s traction engine, & that deft. was liable for the cost of repairing the broken water main:—Held: in using an exceptionally heavy locomotive deft. was exercising his right to use the highway in a way that was not necessary in order to enable him to enjoy it, & the decision was right.—*CHICHESTER CORPN. v. 1766. How estimated Not aggregate weight Conditions under which weight carried.] (1) Upon the hearing of a complaint made by a highway board under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, for the purpose of recovering from applt. extraordinary expenses incurred by the board by reason of traffic conducted by him, it appeared that he was owner or occupier of stone quarries in the district, & that the stone was conveyed in heavy loads over the highways, so as to make the cost of repairing them much larger than if they had been subject to ordinary agricultural traffic; but that the stone traffic was a recognised business in the neighbourhood, & the wagon-loads of the usual weight in such traffic. The justices having upon these facts found, first, that the traffic was not extraordinary, secondly, that the weights were excessive, & thirdly, that the expenses were extraordinary:—Held: the first finding, which was warranted by the evidence, showed that the expenses were not "extraordinary" within the sect. & they could not be recovered from applt.

(2) In determining whether "excessive weight" has been carried along a road, the justices are to consider not what is the aggregate weight, but what are the conditions under which such weight has been carried. ## SECT. 2.—EXTRAORDINARY TRAFFIC.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12.

1771. What constitutes extraordinary traffic—General rule.]—Under the above sect. [Highways & Locomotives Amendment Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23], "extraordinary traffic" as distinguished from "excessive weight" includes all such continuous & repeated user of a road by a person's vehicles as is out of the common order of traffic, & as may be calculated to damage the highway & increase the expenditure on its repair. "Extraordinary traffic" is the carriage of articles over the road, at either one or more times, which is so exceptional in the quality or quantity of the articles carried, or in the mode or time of user of the road, as substantially to alter or increase the burden imposed by ordinary traffic on the road, & thereby to cause damage & expense beyond what is common. The mere user of the road, however, by one person more than others does not constitute "extraordinary traffic" even though it be that user which produces damage to the road; the traffic must be extraordinary as regards the ordinary user of the road by all who use it, & not merely large as compared with the traffic put on it by other persons.—HILL v. THOMAS, [1893] 2 Q. B. 333; 62 L. J. M. C. 161; 69 L. T. 553; 57 J. P. 628; 42 W. R. 85; 9 T. L. R. 617; 4 R. 505, C. A.

1772. —.]—Applts., who were quarry owners in the neighbourhood of a residential town, had for many years conveyed lime & coal to & from the town by a country road. In 1913 they substituted a steam waggon & trailer, which, when loaded, weighed in the aggregate 20 tons, for horse-drawn waggons of a maximum weight of 3 tons, & in 1916 they introduced on to the road, a second steam waggon & trailer. There had been no abnormal increase in the volume of applts.' traffic. In recent years the substitution of mechanical for horse traction by quarry owners had become general in the district. In Feb. 1917, resps., the urban authority, brought an action against applts. to recover extraordinary expenses alleged to have been incurred by them during the previous twelve months in repairing damage caused to the road in question by excessive weight & extraordinary traffic by reason of applts.' user of the road. This road was not a main thoroughfare & was not made up so as to bear the excessive concentrated weight of applts.' steam waggon & trailer, & apart from applts.' traffic, heavy motor traffic had not become part of the ordinary user of the road:—Held: having regard to the character of the particular road, the use by applts. of the steam waggon & trailer constituted extraordinary traffic thereon in 1913, & the continuance by applts. of that mode of traction since 1913 had not altered the character of the traffic.

In an action by the local authority to cover the cost of repairing the damage:—Held: as defenders' traffic had not destroyed the streets or rendered them dangerous or inconvenient for the public use, it was not illegal, & as there was no evidence of negligence, they were not liable at common law for the cost of making of such traffic, but the effect of the traffic was that the roads required repair more often than would have been the case if such traffic had not passed over them:—Held: the road authority could not recover damages.—GLASGOW CORPN. v. BARCLAY, CURLE & CO., LTD. (1923), 93 L. J. P. C. 1.—SCOT.

The justices dismissed the summons, subject to a special case in which they found that the traffic conducted by resp. was in aggregate weight & in quantity excessive & extraordinary as compared with the ordinary traffic along the highway, which was light agricultural traffic, that the highway had been damaged thereby, that the amount expended on the highway by reason thereof was in excess of the average expense of repairing highways in the neighbourhood, & was an extraordinary expense incurred by reason of such damage, but that the traffic did not materially differ in character from that to be expected on the highway:—Held: resp. was not liable for the damage to the highway.—PICKERING LYTTIE EAST HIGHWAY BOARD v. BARRY (1881), 8 Q. These carts followed each other in the same track. They were drawn by one horse apiece, & the individual loads were not excessive. About 7,855 tons of coal were carted during the year:—Held: this was extraordinary traffic within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as the mode of user of the road tended substantially to alter & increase the burden imposed by ordinary traffic.—WOLVERHAMPTON CORPN. v. SALOP COUNTY COUNCIL (1895), 64 L. standard of what is ordinary traffic for this purpose may vary from time to time.

(2) The principle of contributory negligence has no application in an action under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12, to recover extraordinary expenses of repairing a highway from a person by or in consequence of whose orders extraordinary traffic or excessive weight has been conducted thereon; but in considering the amount of the damage caused by extraordinary traffic or excessive weight the state of the highway as maintained by the highway authority is material. The fact that the pressure per square inch of the wheels of the vehicles alleged to be excessive in weight is less than that of the pressure per square inch of the ordinary traffic or weight on the road in question, although it is material, does not prove that the vehicles are not of excessive weight. Accordingly, in an action under the said sects., where it appeared that the county ct. judge had been influenced by the principle of contributory negligence, & by the said argument as to relative pressures, the action was sent down to the county ct. for a new trial: Semble: in estimating ordinary traffic or weight for the purpose of ascertaining what is extraordinary traffic or excessive weight on a highway, more than one year's traffic should be taken into consideration, as that year's traffic may be extraordinary. — *HEMSWORTH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. Increase through public requirements—Increased facilities for transport.—[In the summer of 1914 defts. began to run a service of motor omnibuses between two places a few miles apart for the carriage of passengers. The service was an hourly service from each terminus from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. & the omnibuses were well filled & served the needs of the district. The road along which the omnibuses ran was in the nature of a country lane, the traffic on which before the advent of the motor omnibuses consisted mainly of light country & agricultural carts. Brick-work Previous payment in respect of repairing expense.] The High Wycombe Rural District Council brought an action to recover expenses incurred in repairing damage to certain highways caused by the excessive weight & extraordinary traffic of defts. The highways had been used for agricultural traffic, butchers' & bakers' carts, & other light vehicles. Defts. carried bricks over the highways from his brickyards by means of traction engines, & had been using a traction engine for this purpose for some years past. During the years 1900, 1901, & 1902, defts. had made payments in respect of the extra expense incurred in repairing the highways in consequence of his extraordinary traffic during those years. Latterly, the state of the highways required a large amount of flints & material for their repair. There were several stone quarries upon this range of hills within resps.' district, from which for many years the surrounding country, including appts., had drawn stones for the repair of highways, the stone traffic being a recognised business there, but until 1882 there had been no stone taken from the parish of S. In 1882 a stone quarry was opened in S. at the top of Carter's Hill, & the stone was conveyed by appts. for the repair of their highways down Carter's Hill in the manner customary in the stone traffic, that is. in heavy waggons with the wheels chained, & damage was, in consequence done to the road:—Held: the evidence warranted the justices in coming to the conclusion that the traffic was extraordinary on this particular road, & the order was right.—TUNBRIDGE HIGHWAY BOARD v. Applt. was summoned by a highway board to recover expenses incurred by the highway board in repairing a road in their district during a period of seven years. The expenses were incurred in consequence of stone having been carted by applt. from a quarry along the road, which was an ordinary country road, used for ordinary light country traffic, & had never been adapted for, or made to bear, heavier traffic. The ordinary use of the road did not include the carting of stone, but from the year 1883 to 1890 applt. carried stone over the road, & the highway authority was put to what the justices held to be "extraordinary expenses." The public did not carry stone along the road in question:—Held: the magistrates were right, the traffic along the road in question was "extraordinary" within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, the purpose for which the road was used by applt. in the first instance was "extraordinary" & the order for the payment of extraordinary expenses by appts. was rightly made by the justices.—WHITEBREAD v. 1799. — — —.]—Where a claim is made for extraordinary expenses incurred in making good damage occasioned to highways by extraordinary traffic, the facts that the road in question was initially weak in some places; that some part of the traffic may be fairly looked upon as ordinary; that, in consequence of the repairs & reparations carried out in order to make good the damage, the road is a better road than it would have been had there been no extraordinary traffic & no consequent repairs may all be taken into account to reduce the amount payable to the highway authority.

Prior to 1909 gravel from an old gravel pit had been carted in farm carts, holding from 1½ to 2 tons each, in sufficient quantity to supply the immediate wants of a district in which gravel hauling was not a recognised industry. Defts. subsequently became the proprietors of the gravel pit & set up business as traders in gravel, & in the eight months between Aug. 1, 1910, & Mar. 31, 1911, hauled, by means of two traction engines, to each of which two or three trucks were attached, a weight of 21,950 tons, including the weight of the engines & trucks going & returning, over six & a half miles of a main road repairable by the county council, between the gravel pit & the county town. The comparable highways of the district carried traffic consisting of (1) ordinary agricultural traffic; (2) light carts & carriages of residents in a thinly populated district, but within a few miles from a county town; (3) some motor traffic; & (4) occasional thrashing & steam ploughing machines, etc. This traffic, however, fell very much short of the traffic conducted by defts., both in volume & weight, & was not equal to half the strain on the road caused by defts.' traffic. In an action by the county council against defts. to recover extraordinary expenses incurred in repairing the main road in question:—Held: as the traffic conducted by defts. was such as substantially to alter & increase the burden imposed by ordinary traffic on the road, & cause damage & expense beyond what was common, it was extraordinary traffic & the county council were entitled to recover extraordinary expenses incurred; but since the road would have carried ordinary traffic with little, if any, damage, a small allowance must be made for damage that would have been done to the road by so much traffic as was ordinary. CAMBRIDGESHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. Haulage by traction engines had been carried on over other roads, but this mode of haulage, although it had been adopted for a period by defts., was not the accustomed mode over the road in question, haulage having previously been done in carts or waggons drawn by horses:—Held: the traffic was extraordinary traffic. SHEPTON MAILLET RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. road in a similar manner, the quantity being conveyed by deft. being a little more than half the total traffic over the road. The road was fully adapted to traffic by traction engines & had been so used for a number of years. The output from the quarry had gradually increased from 7,284 tons in 1909 to 17,378 tons in 1912. The judge held that traffic led along a road adapted to it, being such traffic as was to be expected in the ordinary course, could not be "extraordinary" within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 20). On appeal:—Held: the traffic did not come within the expressions as to extraordinary traffic used by BOWEN, L.J., in Hill v. Thomas, No. 1771, ante, & was not extraordinary.—LEDDBURY RURAL COUNCIL v. SOMERSET (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1297; 113 L. T. 71; 79 J. P. 327; 31 T. L. R. 205; 59 Sol. Jo. 476; 13 L. G. R. 701, C. 1803. Timber the natural produce of district.]—W. bought timber near a railway station, & contracted with a person to convey part of it, he himself sending the rest. The timber was conveyed in waggons in sixty-seven loads, between Christmas & March, each load from three to five tons weight, & on broad wheels. The surveyor estimated that this caused £21 extra expense in repairs, & summoned W. under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, & the justices held it was extraordinary traffic, & that whether W. or the contractor conveyed it made no difference, & made an order on W. for £21:—Held: the justices were right.—WILLIAMS v. 1804. —.] In a group of twenty parishes there were large woods which came to maturity after ten to seventeen years' growth, & one or other wood was cut every year, & the timber hauled over one or other highway each winter. Before the haulage the roads were in fair repair, & the other traffic was chiefly caused by donkey carts & passengers. The haulage over one & a half miles caused extra expense of £12 10s. for which resps. were summoned, under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 20. The justices found that the weights were not excessive, & held that there was not extraordinary traffic, this being the ordinary trade of the district:—Held: the justices were justified by the evidence in coming to their decision.—RAGLAN HIGHWAY BOARD v. 1805. — Haulage to supply local furniture industry—Mode of haulage not otherwise in use—On particular road.]—The principal industry in W. & neighbourhood is chair manufacture, & deft. carried over certain highways, by means of a traction engine & carriages, timber grown in the neighbourhood for this industry. He carried about sixteen engine truck loads, each load weighing about three tons. Traction engines were in common use in the district for farm purposes & for purposes of trade, especially on main roads, but it was not proved that any traction engine had been on the highways in question, which were not main roads, previous to deft.'s carriages & engines passing along them. Damage was done to the highways by the traction engine & carriages, for which extraordinary expenses were incurred by the pltf. council in repairing:—Held: deft. was liable for the extraordinary expenses.—WYCOMBE RURAL COUNCIL v. SMITH (1903), 67 J. P. 75.

1806. — No systematic cultivation.]—Haulage by timber merchants of timber over roads adapted for ordinary agricultural traffic in a district where there is no systematic cultivation of timber, under such circumstances that, having regard to the total weight carried within a given period, & to the means whereby the haulage is done, the traffic is unusual & does unusual damage to the roads, thereby occasioning unusual expense to the road authority, constitutes "extraordinary traffic" within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, for the expenses occasioned by which the timber merchants are accordingly responsible.

Large quantities of timber had been felled on the B. estate, & between the early part of 1900 & Mar. 31, 1902, the timber felled had been sold to defts. by separate & successive contracts. Defts. had carried the timber so purchased to a railway station over two roads, which pltf. council were liable to repair, & which were ordinary country roads intended to bear ordinary country traffic; the haulage of the timber was for the most part done by means of a traction engine. Pltfs., on Aug. 4, 1902, brought this action under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, & Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 20), s. 12, to recover the extraordinary expenses incurred by them on the two roads by reason of the damage caused by the above traffic:—Held: (1) the traffic was extraordinary traffic within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23; (2) the felling of timber on the B. estate & its haulage thence by defts. did not constitute a "particular work" within Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 20), s. 12 (1) (b), & pltfs. were debarred by that sub-sect. from recovering expenses incurred by reason of any damage done to the roads by defts.' traffic before Aug. 4, 1901.—NORFOLK COUNTY COUNCIL v. They exercised no control over the user of the engines, the weights carried, or the route followed. The carriage of the ballast caused extraordinary traffic whereby the road was damaged. A complaint by the authority liable to repair the road against resps. to recover the expense of the repairs was dismissed by the justices. The road had not been made for engines, & none were used there before, though they were used on other roads near. The engine & trucks huled the road into the ditch on each side, & caused extra expenditure for repairs:—Held: there was evidence that E. ordered the traffic to be conducted, & this was extraordinary traffic within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23.—*ELLIS v. 1818. When liability arises—When damage done—Damage done after Act—Contract entered into before Act.]—Defts. owned land in pltf's. district, on which they intended to erect a lunatic asylum & entered into contracts with certain firms for the alteration & extension of a house standing thereon. The materials for the work were carted over certain highways in pltf's. district, but did not become the property of defts. until worked into the structure. Defts. never gave any orders as to the particular route the carting was to follow. The traffic amounted to extraordinary traffic, & damage was done to pltf's. highways. The bulk of this traffic took place under two large contracts, both of which were entered into before the date of the commencement of Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), but neither was completed till after this date. One contract was completed more than six months before the writ in this action was issued:—Held: (1) defts. were the persons by or in consequence of whose order the traffic was conducted & therefore they were liable to make good the damage to the highways caused thereby under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12; (2) inasmuch as it was not the giving of the order which created the liability, but the doing of the damage, defts. were liable if & to the extent that damage was done after the commencement of the Act although the contract which caused it was entered into before that date; (3) where there were several contracts under which traffic was being conducted, proceedings to recover extraordinary traffic expenses must be commenced within six months of the date of the completion of the particular contract under which the damage sued for was done; (4) a surveyor's certificate was sufficient if it made it clear that extraordinary expenses had been incurred, although it did not show on its face that in making it regard had been had “to the average expense of repairing highways in the neighbourhood.”—*EPSOM URBAN COUNCIL v. 1820. ————]—No instructions given by him.]—Deft., being about to build a house, entered into a contract with a brick co. to supply him with a quantity of bricks to be delivered at the place where he proposed to build. He had no instructions as to the manner, time, or amount in which the bricks were to be delivered, & the co. without his knowledge delivered them by means of a traction engine & trucks, the excessive weight of which damaged pltf's. roads to an extraordinary extent. In an action to recover the amount of the expenses to which pltf's. had been put in repairing the roads, the county ct. judge held that deft. was not, within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12, the person “by or in consequence of whose order” such weight had been conducted over pltf's. roads:—Held: the facts justified him in coming to that conclusion.—*EGHAM RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. 1823. ————]—S., a building owner, contracted with L. to deliver bricks at the R. estate by traction haulage. L. sub-contracted with E. to carry the bricks in this way. E. carried them over X. road. L. knew the size & weight of the engines to be employed, but he did not determine the particular road over which they were to be carried except in so far as an order to go to a particular destination involved the necessity of going by a particular road:—Held: L. was a person "by or in consequence of whose order" the traffic was conducted over this road within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1) (c).

I should like to say, although it is not necessary to decide the point in this case, that in my view as the sect. now stands, there is no reason why two or three persons should not be held liable in respect of the damage done to a particular road. The words "by whose order" bring in the contractor & the words "in consequence of whose order" bring in the building owner, & I do not see why either or both should not be liable (SCRUTTON, J.).

Semle: the sub-contractor would also be liable. WINDLESHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. SEWARD (1912), 77 J. P. 161; 11 L. G. R. 324, D. C.

1826. — Traffic must be consequence of order—Alternative modes of haulage employable.—Defts. entered into a contract with A. that he should construct a reservoir for them in four months. The contract did not specify the method or route of haulage to be employed in bringing the requisite materials to the site. A. for the space of eight months employed traction engines & trucks over second & third class district roads to bring the materials from the railway station to the reservoir, a distance of about a mile & a quarter. In an action for the extraordinary expenses of repairing the roads alleged to have been damaged by extraordinary traffic or excessive weight, the traction engines & trucks, conducted thereon by or in consequence of the order of defts., a surveyor called as a witness by plffs. said that "the same weight of stuff taken in carts during the same period would not have done injury," & defts.' engineer, called by plffs., said: "I thought the contractor would lay a light railway across the fields from the goods station without going on the roads at all. That would be feasible as also cart haulage." At the close of plffs.' case the county ct. judge gave judgment for defts., holding that there was no evidence that the traffic had been conducted on these roads in consequence of the order of defts.:—Held: there was such evidence.—REIGATE RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. SUTTON DISTRICT WATER CO. (1907), 71 J. P. 405; 5 L. G. R. 917, D. C.; subsequent proceedings (1908), 99 L. T. 103, D. C.; (1909), 78 L. J. K. B. 315, C. A.

Plffs., as the authority liable for the repair of highways in their district, incurred extraordinary expenses in repairing a highway in consequence of damage done to it by extraordinary traffic conducted over it in the haulage of stones by the contractors for the fulfilment of their contracts with the corpn. The last load of stones was carried on Mar. 31, 1905, & on Aug. 22, 1905, the plffs. commenced an action against the corpn. for the recovery of the extraordinary expenses:—Held: (1) the traffic was conducted in consequence of the orders of the corporation; (2) the damage was not the consequence of "any particular building contract or work extending over a long period" within Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1) (b), & therefore, under the first part of that sub-sect., plffs. could recover only the expenses incurred within twelve months before the commencement of the action.—BROMLEY RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. 1828. — Natural consequence.—For the purpose of erecting a new lunatic asylum for the joint use of a county council & a county borough council large quantities of materials were conveyed in waggons drawn by traction engines, & otherwise, over two roads in the borough by the contractor employed by the visiting committee of the asylum. The roads had not been adapted to such traffic, though they were fit for the traffic that might have been expected on them. The visiting committee were elected partly by the county council, & partly by the county borough council, & had purchased the site for the asylum from the latter council. Their contract with the contractor contained provisions by which he undertook to indemnify them against claims in respect of damage caused by excessive weight or extraordinary traffic over any highway in carrying out the works & against all costs & expenses in respect thereof.

The surveyor of the council certified in pursuance of section 23 of the Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), as regards each road, that, having regard to the average expense of repairing highways in the neighbourhood, extraordinary expenses had been incurred in repairs by reason of the damage caused by excessive weight & extraordinary traffic, etc.; but he had not taken out the actual figures of the expense of repairing such neighbouring highways:—Held: (1) as the surveyor must in the circumstances have been aware that the cost of repairing the most expensive of the comparable roads in the neighbourhood did not approach the actual cost of repairing the roads in question, & however he might make out the average cost for the highways in the neighbourhood, "extraordinary expenses" had been incurred on those roads, it was not necessary for him to go into details with regard to highways in the neighbourhood; (2) the traffic was in the circumstances the natural, though not the direct or inevitable, consequence of the building contract, & was therefore conducted "in consequence of the order" of the visiting committee, (3) the fact that the council elected some members of the visiting committee did not in any sense make them defts. to the action so as to prevent them from suing the committee in the name of their clerk; (4) the conveyance by the council of the site for the asylum did not, & could not, imply a grant of the right to damage public roads, so as to estop the council from recovering the expenses claimed; (5) so much of the expenses claimed as had been incurred in "betterment," namely, improving the roads by converting them from rag & flint roads, into granite macadam roads, or by widening or strengthening them, could not be recovered; (6) the amount recoverable could be ascertained by deducting from the actual expenses incurred on the roads respectively, the cost of the betterment & the ordinary expenses which would have been incurred if there had been no extraordinary traffic; such ordinary traffic being estimated having regard to the average cost for some years of repairing the comparable highways in the neighbourhood including the road in question; (7) deft. was entitled to be indemnified by the third party for damages recovered by plffs. & for all costs that he had been put to in defending the action, & for such costs as deft. had to pay to plffs.; & the costs of the proceedings between plffs. & the third party, to which deft. was not in fact a party should be included in the bill by plffs. against deft., in order that the latter might recover them from the third party; but deft. should not pay these costs to plffs. unless he got them from the third party. —*COLCHESTER CORPN. v. 1829. Nature of remedy—Action for tort—Actio personalis moritur cum persona—Liability of executor.]—Proceedings under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, for the recovery of extraordinary expenses incurred by reason of the damage caused by excessive traffic & weight on the highway, can only be taken against the person by whose order the traffic causing the damage was conducted, & cannot be taken against the personal representatives of such person after the death, as such proceeding is in substance an action of tort, & therefore dies with the person.

Extraordinary expenses were incurred on certain main roads, caused by extraordinary weight & traffic conducted over them by the order of A., whose traction engines & trucks had caused the damage. A. had, during his lifetime, offered to pay a certain sum in respect of such damage, but this sum was refused, & during A.'s lifetime the surveyor had not given a certificate of the amount of such damage. After A.'s death, & after the amount had been fixed by the certificate of the surveyor, proceedings were taken to recover the amount against the extrix. of A.:—Held: the extrix. of A. was not liable to pay these expenses, as the claim for such expenses, being in the nature of a tort, was a purely personal one against A., & died with him.—STORY v. SHEARD, [1892] 2 Q. B. 515; 61 L. J. M. C. 178; 87 L. T. 423; 58 J. P. 760; 41 W. R. 31; 36 Sol. Jo. 559, D. C.

expensive to maintain. In 1907 the predecessors of defts. opened a stone quarry on the M. Hills & conveyed quantities of stone by light motors along the road to the C. station. In 1910, defts. became the owners of the quarry, & in addition to the tractors already used, put on the road a heavy traction engine with trucks, more than doubling their traffic on the road from the quarry to the station, & thereby causing extraordinary expenses to be incurred by plffs. in maintaining the road. Plffs.' surveyor gave a certificate under Highways & Locomotives Amendment Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, that extraordinary expenses had been incurred to the extent of £770 in repairing "the highway known as main road No. 6" by reason of the extraordinary traffic conducted thereon by defts. In an action to recover this sum as "extraordinary expenses":—Held: (1) the traffic was extraordinary traffic," but it was not proper to take the ordinary expenditure on the other roads in the district, which were cheaper to maintain, as the basis of estimating the amount of the expenses; & the proper principle was to hold defts. liable for the excess of the amount actually spent in repairing the road over the amount which would have been spent in repairing the damage done to the same section of the road by the other traffic which used the road during the period; & as the road was not merely repaired but was improved & brought up to a higher standard, defts. ought not to pay for such improvement as distinct from repairs, & on this principle the amount recoverable should be £440; (2) an objection taken to the surveyor's certificate on the ground that while the certificate was as to the repair of main road No. 6, the statement of claim was only in respect of a part of such highway, was not a valid objection, as the certificate need not specify the exact parts of the highway where the damage was done. —LEDBURY RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. 1849. At whose instance given—Request of road authority.]—(1) Where traffic is diverted from one road to another the question of the necessity for the diversion is not relevant to the question whether the particular traffic is extraordinary on the latter road within Highways & Locomotives Amendment Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23.

(2) It is immaterial whether the certificate of the surveyor to the road authority required to be given under sect. 23 as a condition precedent to the recovery of expenses of extraordinary traffic is given at the sole instance of the surveyor or at the request of the road authority.

A co-operative society having several branch shops, in the ordinary course of its business, conveyed goods to its branch shops by means of wagons drawn by traction engines. The society diverted this traffic from a main road to an alternative road, which was a country road not adapted for heavy traffic, on the ground that the urban district council had, by completely paving the main road with granite setts, rendered it dangerous for traction engine traffic. The council appointed a special committee to consider the damage done to the road in question by the society's traffic. The committee resolved that, subject to a formal written certificate of the council's surveyor, a claim for extraordinary traffic should be made against the society. After the surveyor had signed the certificate the matter was reported to the council, who approved the decision of the committee, & an action was brought against the society to recover extraordinary expenses incurred by the council in repairing the road by reason of the damage caused by extraordinary traffic passing along it by order of the society. The society had constantly used the road in question for nearly two years before the commencement of the period covered by the claim:—Held: (3) the requirements of the statute as to the surveyor's certificate had been complied with; (4) there was ample evidence to support the finding of the judge that the traffic of the society was extraordinary traffic at the commencement of the period of the claim.

SUB-SECT. 3.—PERIOD OF LIMITATION.

See Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1) (b); Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1.

1850. General rule—Damage committed within twelve months of action brought.]—(1) Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1) (b), provides that proceedings by a highway authority for the recovery of the extraordinary expenses incurred by them in repairing a highway by reason of extraordinary traffic thereon "shall be commenced within twelve months of the time at which the damage has been done, or where the damage is the consequence of any particular building contract, or work extending over a long period, shall be commenced not later than six months after the completion of the contract or works":—Held: notwithstanding this limitation of twelve months, an action against a public authority, in respect of damage to a highway caused by them "in pursuance or execution of any Act of Parliament, or of any public duty or authority," must be brought within the six months limited by Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1.

(2) But, if the act which causes the damage to the highway is done by an independent contractor employed by a public authority in pursuance of his contract with them, he not being their servant or agent, the limit of six months fixed by sect. 1 of the latter Act, has no application. In such a case an action in respect of the damage can be brought against the public authority under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12, as persons "in consequence of whose order" the damage has been done, & the time within which the action must be brought is that which is fixed by sect. 12, sub-sect. 1 (b). The effect of the latter part of the sub-sect. is, "where the damage is the consequence of any particular building contract or work extending over a long period," to give a period of "six months after the completion of the contract or work," in addition to the twelve months fixed by the prior part of the sub-sect., within which the action may be brought.

A corp., in carrying out a scheme for the widening of one of the roads, entered into a contract with a contractor for the hauling of stone. The contractor used traction engines to haul the stone, & in so doing caused damage to some other roads which were repairable by the county council as the highway authority. The contract was for a year, commencing on Apr. 1, 1902, & terminating on Mar. 31, 1903. The damage to the roads took place between Jan. 19, & Mar. 24, 1903. The work of widening the road was completed in Sept. 1903. On Feb. 11, 1904, the county council commenced an action against the corp. to recover the additional expenses of repairing pths. roads in consequence of the use of the traction engine:—Held: (3) the action could be maintained against the corp. as the persons "in consequence of whose order" the damage had been done; (4) the limit of six months for bringing the action fixed by Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1, did not apply, because, the contractor not being the servant or agent of the corp., the act was not done by them, & it was done by him in performance of his private obligations under his contract, & not in pursuance or execution of any public duty or authority; (5) the time within which the action must be brought was that fixed by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1) (b); (6) the hauling of the stone was a distinct work from the widening of the road, & pths. could only recover in respect of the damage done since Feb. 11, 1903, i.e., within twelve months from the issue of the writ in the action.

(7) An alternative right is given to sue either the person by whose order the damage is done, or the person in consequence of whose order it was done (VAUGHAN-WILLIAMS, L.J.).—KENT COUNTY COUNCIL v. ordinary expenses incurred by a highway authority in repairing a highway by reason of damage caused by extraordinary traffic thereon are recoverable by an action in the High Ct. or county ct., & by (1) (b) proceedings for the recovery of such expenses "shall be commenced within twelve months of the time at which the damage has been done or where the damage is the consequence of any particular building contract, or work extending over a long period, shall be commenced not later than six months after the completion of the contract or work." It being conceded, having regard to Kent County Council v. Folkestone Corporation, No. 1850, ante, that where the damage was caused by work done under a building contract, or work extending over a long period, an action for recovery of expenses was in time if brought either within twelve months of the doing of the damage, or within six months after the completion of the contract or work:—Held: "the completion of the contract" meant the completion of the contract so far as it related to the work causing the damage which gave rise to the action.

(2) Therefore where the damage was caused by work done under a contract which the ct. assumed to be a building contract, & the contract contained a maintenance clause which provided that the entire work should be at the risk of the contractor for a certain period after completion:—Held: the contract was completed, within Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1) (b), at the date of the completion of the work, & the six months began to run from that date.—LANCASTER RURAL COUNCIL v. Accordingly where a contract provided for the construction of a watertight reservoir & the reservoir was so far completed that the water was let into it more than six months before the commencement of an action in the county ct. for the recovery of expenses of extraordinary traffic in relation thereto, but was not made watertight until within six months of the commencement of the action:—Held: the county ct. judge was justified in finding that the reservoir was not completed within Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1) (b), until it was made watertight, & the action was in time.—*REIGATE RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. By Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1) (a), "Expenses under" Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), "shall cease to be recoverable in a summary manner, but may be recovered if not exceeding £250 in the county ct.," & if exceeding that sum in the High Ct. In an action brought in the High Ct. by a local authority to recover a sum exceeding £250 from debt, in respect of expenses incurred by such authority in repairing certain roads over which locomotives belonging to debt. & others had travelled, the jury found that the weight was excessive & the traffic extraordinary, & assessed the damages at £120. Judgment was entered for the authority for £80, the amount of damage agreed by the parties to be attributable to debt., with costs, the judge stating that if necessary, & if he had the power to do so, he would certify for costs on the High Ct. scale:—Held: (1) under Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1) (a), the action might be brought either in the High Ct. or in the county ct., & apart from special legislation, the mere fact that it might have been brought in the county ct. did not affect the right of the local authority to costs, & the action having been tried by a jury, the costs would, under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 65, r. 1, follow the event unless otherwise ordered for good cause shown; (2) assuming the action to be founded on tort within county cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 116, then the only special legislation was that sect., & the judge, having a discretion under that sect. to certify for costs on the High Ct. scale, had exercised that discretion by granting a certificate in favour of the local authority.

It has been pointed out that a condition precedent to the right to bring an action to recover expenses is that there shall be a certificate of the surveyor that extraordinary expenses have been incurred by reason of damage caused by excessive weight or extraordinary traffic (COLLINS, M.R.).—*CHESTERFIELD RURAL COUNCIL v. expenses of extraordinary traffic not exceeding £250 ceased by virtue of Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), to be recoverable summarily under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), & became recoverable in the county ct.; & Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 17 (2), means that nothing in that Act is to affect light locomotives as distinguished from other vehicles, but it does not mean that light locomotives, as far as they have characteristics in common with other vehicles, one of which is that they may cause extraordinary traffic, are not to be dealt with by the new procedure established by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12 (1).—*R. v. 1870. — Duty of judge to take notes.—If the jurisdiction in these cases [actions under Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12] extending to an amount of £250, & exceeding very largely the amount sought to be recovered in many actions in the High Ct., is conferred upon the county ct., it is the duty of the judge who is trying such cases to see that a proper note is taken of the evidence, & that whether an application to do so is made or not. The difficulties arising in these cases are known to be substantial; what are the highways, proper certificates, what is extraordinary traffic, who are the persons responsible for it, & so on. This case is itself an illustration. . . . If this case came before any judge of the High Ct. he would deem it his duty to see that a proper note was taken (LORD ALVERSTONE, (C.J.)).—CHELTSEY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. BINNS (1905), 60 J. P. 1872. 1895. Extinguishment by implication—Works authorised inconsistent with existence of road.]—

A public right of way may be extinguished by statute by necessary implication as well as by express words. The saving clauses of General Pier & Harbour Act, 1861 (c. 45), do not apply to a public right of way. A corp. were empowered by a provisional order of the Board of Trade, made under the authority of General Pier & Harbour Act, 1861, & confirmed by a subsequent special Act, to construct a pier in accordance with certain deposited plans. The plans showed that the pier, when constructed, would be physically inconsistent with the existence of an alleged public right of access to the seashore from a street with which the pier was connected. The provisional order contained no words expressly extinguishing the right of way, or substituting another right of way for it:—Held: if the alleged right of way had ever existed, it was extinguished by necessary implication, & it was not saved by General Pier & Harbour Act, 1861 (c. 45).—*YARMOUTH CORPN. v. Where, under a private Act of Parliament, a new turnpike road was directed to be made, & a certain public bridleway across a farm directed to be closed to prevent the evasion of tolls, the freehold in the bridleway being by the same Act vested in the owner of the farm in exchange for lands taken for the purposes of the turnpike road, & penalties being imposed on those continuing to use the bridleway, & when the Act, which had originally been passed for twenty-one years, was continued in force by subsequent Acts, but eventually repealed:—Held: the right to use the bridleway was not revived by such repeal.—(*GWYNNE v. It is sufficient if the certificate state that the old highway will be unnecessary when the proposed alterations are completed. —R. v. PHILLIPS (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 618; 7 B. & S. 593; 35 L. J. M. 1901. ————Connections between termini & another highway.]—(1) It is not necessary for stopping up a road under an order of justices of the peace, that they should, by their order, substitute a new road reaching the whole distance from the terminus a quo to the terminus ad quem, it suffices if they set out a new road leading from the terminus a quo into a public highway, along which, & other highways connected with it, the subject may pass to the terminus ad quem. (2) If the orders & certificates of magistrates, diverting & stopping a road, be delivered to the clerk of the peace to be enrolled, it satisfies 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 19, although the clerk of the peace make no transcript thereof, the statute being only directory to the officer as to the enrolment. Qu.: whether the statute intend that a transcript shall be made. The statute not prescribing any particular form of certificate by the magistrates that the new road is complete & in good condition & repair, previous to the stopping up of the old road, it seems that a recital that they have so certified, contained either in the order for diverting the road, or in the order for stopping up the old road, is a sufficient certificate within sect. 19.

1904. — "Nearer & more commodious" way—Whether one alternative sufficient.]—A footpath led from the hamlet of W. to a turnpike road which led in one direction to the town of A., & in the other to various other places. It was proposed to divert a part of this footpath, by making it join the road at a point somewhat nearer to A. Two justices certified under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 85, for the diversion of this footpath described as leading "from W. to A." & stated in their certificate that the intended footpath was "nearer & more commodious" than the old. Against this diversion an appeal was tried at the quarter sessions, under sect. 88, & the grounds of appeal were, that "reference being had to the various places with which the original footpath communicated, the new line was not nearer & more commodious than the old. It appeared that the proposed new line of footpath joined the turnpike road at a point nearer to A. than the old, & was consequently nearer as between W. & A. only, but that it was not so near as between W. & the other places mentioned:—Held: the jury were properly directed to construe the word "nearer" not as between W. & A., but as between the point at which the new & old lines of footpath, diverged, & the point where the old line reached the road; the jury having found that the new path was not nearer than the old, but that it was more commodious, the order for diverting the footpath could not be made, as it was necessary under sect. 89 that the substituted line should be both "nearer" & more "commodious."—R. v. insufficient; but no power was given to stop up or divert highways. Proceedings were taken under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 84, for the purpose of diverting a footway within that portion of the parish of F. which was in the town of T. W., & a meeting of the inhabitants of F. in vestry assembled having approved the new footway, two justices made a certificate under sect. 85. —Justices of the peace have no power under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 85, to order a highway to be stopped up because, in consequence of matters to arise at some future time, another road not yet made will be "nearer or more commodious to the public." J., & that the justices had received evidence of the consent of T. J. in his lifetime:—Held: this order was bad, because it did not thereby appear that T. J. was the owner of the estate at the time when the order was made.—R. v. Kirk (1822), 1 B. & C. 21; 107 E. R. 9; sub nom. R. v. Denbighshire JJ., 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 52; 1 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 139.

Two justices certified that the new path was more commodious than the old, but made no mention in their certificate of any consent of owner. A written consent of the proprietors of the asylum was enrolled with the certificate & plan by the quarter sessions. This consent professed to be by the owners of the lands or grounds through, along, or adjoining which the footpath was intended to be diverted & turned, & they consented to the making & continuing of the new path through, along, or adjoining their said lands or grounds:—Held: upon a rule for a certiorari to bring up the order of quarter sessions for want of jurisdiction, an appeal having failed by reason of insufficient notice, this was a substitution of a new path; the certificate need not mention the consent of the owner; & this consent contained in effect what was mentioned in the scheduled form.—*R. v. l. By owner—When necessary.—A land assocn. registered a plan of a subdivision of land in a city, & sold lots according to the plan. M. bought from the assocn. several lots. The assocn. afterwards obtained an order directing that the registered plan should be amended by stopping up a certain part of H. avenue, & that that part of the street should be closed. The closing of that part did not deprive M. of access to adjacent public highways; but he opposed the application on the ground that the closing would depreciate the value of his lots.—Held: M.'s consent to the order for the closing was not necessary under Registry Act, R. Necessity for notice to justices—Reasonable notice.—13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 62, is applicable to proceedings by order of two justices under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 2:—Held: it was necessary to give reasonable notice of the special sessions at which any such order was to be made to the several justices acting & residing within the division; & unless such notices be given the sessions ought not to confirm & enrol such order, even though there were no appeal against it.—*R. v. 1920. Sufficiency of notice—Description of road.—An order of justices for diverting a highway & stopping up a part of it, described the highway by termini, & by reference to a plan; the part to be stopped up was described as so many yards of the said highway, lying between certain letters on the plan, & coloured blue. Notice was published, pursuant to 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, of the order having been made; but the notice had no plan annexed, & merely described the road by termini, & the part to be stopped up as so many yards of such road:—Held: the order explained by a plan annexed, was good; but the notice was insufficient.—R. v. HORNER (1831), 2 B. & Ald. 150; 109 E. R. 1099.

1921. — Date of proposed application.—Although the form of notice of intended application to quarter sessions for the diversion of a highway under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 85, contains a blank for the insertion of the date on which the application is proposed to be made, it is not necessary to state the date in the notice; it is enough that the notice makes it clear that the application will be made to the quarter sessions held next after the expiration of four weeks from the day on which the justices' certificate is lodged with the clerk of the peace. A certificate of justices for the diversion of a highway was lodged with the clerk of the peace on May 21. In the notice of intended application to the quarter sessions it was stated that the application would be made on July 4, that being the date on which the summer session would in the ordinary course be held. Subsequently, the county assizes having been fixed for July 3, it became necessary to alter the date of holding the quarter sessions. The justices accordingly altered it to June 20, & on that day the application for enrolment of the certificate was made. The four weeks from the lodging of the certificate with the clerk of the peace expired on June 18:—Held: notwithstanding the alteration of the date, the notice was a good notice, & the quarter sessions had jurisdiction to entertain the application.—*R. v. Where posted.—At each end of portions of highway proposed to be diverted—Several roads forming one system.]—There were three roads, each in a different parish, running from three turnpike roads, & forming, by their junction together, a figure like a capital Y. The three limbs met at D. & the ends of the limbs met the turnpike roads at A., B. & C. On application by the highway board of the district two justices made a separate certificate as to each road under Highway Act, 1864 (c. 101), s. 21, which incorporates Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), ss. 84–91, that the road from D. to A., from D. to B., & from D. to C. was unnecessary. These certificates were affirmed on appeal by orders of quarter sessions, & it was ordered that the roads should cease to be repaired by the parishes. E., an inhabitant of one of the parishes, & living in the neighbourhood of the roads, obtained a rule for a certiorari to bring up the orders & certificates for the purpose of quashing them on the ground that they were void by reason of the notices not having been affixed at the places required by law. By Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 85, after their view & before making their certificate, the justices are to direct the surveyor to affix a notice in form No. 19 at the place & by the side of each end of the highway from whence the same is proposed to be diverted or stopped up, etc., & such notices having been published, & proof thereof given, the justices shall proceed to certify. A notice had been posted at A., B., C. respectively, but no notice at all had been posted at D.:—Held: the actual publication of the prescribed notices at each end of the road to be dealt with was a condition precedent to the jurisdiction of the two justices; & although the roads formed one system, yet each of the roads having been treated as a separate road, this condition had not been fulfilled, & the orders were therefore void as made without jurisdiction.—*R. v. #### (a) Form.

1928. Must follow statutory form—13 Geo. 3, c. 78.—An order made by justices of peace under sect. 19 of above Act, for stopping up an old footway & setting out a new one, must follow the form prescribed in the schedule annexed to the Act, & set forth the length & breadth of the new footway; otherwise it is no answer to a justification of a right of way pleaded to an action of trespass quare clausum fregit brought by the owner of the soil over which the old way led. The Act requires, that the form set forth in the schedule

"shall be used on all occasions, with such additions & variations only as may be necessary to adapt it to the particular exigency of the case." Under these words a material variance from the form prescribed is fatal, & may be taken advantage of in a collateral proceeding.—DAVISON v. GILL (1800), 1 East, 64; 102 E. R. 25.

1932. Contents of certificate of view—Statement of view.—(1) An order of justices, for diverting a public highway & substituting a new one for it, containing also an order for stopping up the old highway, is bad, inasmuch as they have no power to stop up the old road until the new one has been made.

(2) An order for diverting an old highway & substituting a new one must show on the face of it that the justices viewed the line of the proposed new road.

(3) Where an order for diverting a road directed that it should be stopped up, but did not show on the face of it that the proposed new road was fit for the reception of travellers: Held: bad.—R. v. KENT JJ. (1830), 10 B. & C. 477; 8 L. J. O. S. M. C. 73; 109 E. R. 528.

1933. — — (1) In an order of justices for stopping up a highway as unnecessary, under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 2, the following recital, "We, A., B., & C., justices," etc., "assembled at a special sessions held," etc., on, etc., "having upon view found" that a certain part of a highway called, etc., is unnecessary, sufficiently shows that the justices viewed such highway together, & at the time when the order was made.

(2) Such order, if not made on a joint view, would be bad.

(3) A direction in such order, that the land of the discontinued highway be sold by the surveyors to H., whose lands adjoin thereto, if he shall be willing to purchase the same, if not, to some other person or persons, for the full value thereof, is sufficient under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 2, & 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 17, though the form of an order given in the schedule to the latter Act introduces the words "for the full value thereof," after the words "purchase the same," as well as in the subsequent part of the sentence.

(4) It is not necessary to the validity of such an order, that a certificate of sale should be subjoined to it, pursuant to 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, Sched. 19; or that any direction should be given in the order, as to the application of the purchase-money.

opened another road over his own land, between the same points, which the public used, & they ceased using the former road. Nine years afterwards, he obtained an order of justices for stopping up the old road as unnecessary, under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 2:—Held: (5) such order might properly be made, & it was not necessary to proceed as in case of diverting a highway under 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 16; (6) the justices might properly state in their order that they had viewed the old road, if they had viewed the ground over which the right of way was, although the road itself had gone into disuse; (7) an order directing the surveyors to sell the soil of the old highway to H., whose lands adjoin, if he will purchase, if not, to some other person, for the full value, is not bad, although if he himself the surveyor; at least if no fraud appear.—*R. v. 1934. ——— & finding.]—In an order of justices for stopping up an unnecessary highway under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, it must be stated that it appeared to the justices, on view, that the way was unnecessary; & therefore, an order, merely stating that the “justices had, upon view, found, or that it appeared to them,” that the way was unnecessary, is bad.—*R. v. 1935. ———.]—By an order of justices it was stated, that three justices having particularly viewed the public roads within the parish of A. thereafter described, & being satisfied that they were unnecessary to be continued, did order that such roads should be stopped up & extinguished:—Held: this order was invalid, inasmuch as it did not appear upon the face of it that the justices were, upon the view, satisfied that the roads were unnecessary. The ct. will make the same intendment in favour of an order of justices as in favour of a conviction.—R. v. DOWNSHIRE (MARQUIS) (1836), 4 Ad. & El. 698; 1 Har. & W. 673; 6 Nev. & M. K. 1936. ———.]—(1) An order of justices for stopping an unnecessary highway, under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 2, is bad, if it stop up half the breadth of a highway, leaving the rest open, although the other half be not within their division.

(2) Qu.: whether the justices of the two divisions could, by orders made concurrently, stop both sides.

(3) Justices cannot stop several highways by one order, except so far as they are authorised by Highway Act, 1825 (c. 50), s. 86.

(4) Semble: if an order has been properly made & enrolled for stopping a highway, it is not necessary, to make such order completely effectual, that an actual stoppage should have taken place.

(5) If an order for stopping a highway, under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, begins “We,” etc., “having upon view found, & it appearing to us,” that a certain highway, etc., is unnecessary, the recital does not imply that the justices acted upon any other information than their own view, & is well enough.

There is no part of the administration of the law by justices acting on their own authority in which it is more necessary for the ct. to look closely at their proceedings, than the stopping of highways (COLERIDGE, J.).—*R. v. When, therefore, justices certified that the proposed new highway would be more commodious to the public than the present highway, because “upon inquiries” they found that the old path was inconvenient & the new path convenient:—Held: the certificate was invalid.—*R. v. On appeal, by a party interested, the sessions held the certificate bad on this ground, & refused to proceed further. A rule nisi having been obtained for a mandamus to enter continuances & hear the appeal:—Held: (1) the appellate jurisdiction, given to the sessions by the Act, was not limited to the points mentioned in sect. 89, but was general; & consequently the sessions had jurisdiction to entertain the question whether the certificate was good or bad; but having exercised their jurisdiction, mandamus did not lie, even if they were wrong; (2) the certificate was defective, as not showing that the preliminaries necessary to give the two justices jurisdiction to certify had been complied with.—*R. v. 1950. Whether right of appeal absolute—Right not expressly given in local Act—Authorising stopping up by commissioners.—A local Act enabled the comrs. appointed thereby, with the consent of two justices, to stop up footways, & invested them generally with all the powers of the late Highway Act, 56 Geo. 3, c. 68, but did not in express words, give a right of appeal:—Held: a party aggrieved by an order for stopping up a footway by the comrs. could not avail himself of the right of appeal given by the latter Act, as it was not given in express terms in the local Act.—R. v. BIRMINGHAM JJ. (1838), 2 J. P. 424.

1951. Two orders—Appeal against second order—Appeal against first order not in time.—If two justices make an order for diverting & turning a public footway, & afterwards an order for stopping up the old footway, the party grieved may appeal to the quarter sessions against the last order, though he be too late to appeal against the first.—*R. v. 1952. How far findings of court final—Questions within court's own jurisdiction.—Where the ct. of quarter sessions confirmed an order of two justices for stopping up a highway without proof that the order was previously made at a special sessions, & an application being made to this ct. for a mandamus to enter continuances:—Held: the ct. would not interfere where the sessions had already decided upon a point peculiarly within their jurisdiction.—R. v. --- JJ. (1819), 1 Chit. 164.

1954. ——— ---.—(1) A local Improvement Act gave an appeal to quarter sessions to any person “who may think that he would be injured & aggrieved” if any highway, etc., should be discontinued, etc., upon giving to the comrs. or their clerk ten days' notice in writing of such appeal, together with a statement of the grounds thereof. It also enacted that applt. should not be heard unless he gave such notice & statement, nor on other grounds than those contained in the statement; that a jury should be impanelled to enable the quarter sessions to determine whether such highway, etc., should be discontinued, etc., or whether the party appealing would be thereby injured, etc.; & if, after hearing the evidence produced before them, the jury should return a verdict that such highway, etc., is unnecessary, “& that the party appealing would not be injured or aggrieved thereby,” etc., the ct. should dismiss the appeal; if the jury should return a verdict that such highway, etc., was not unnecessary, etc., “or that the party appealing would be injured or aggrieved thereby,” the ct. should allow the appeal. The comrs. having made an order for stopping up & discontinuing two footpaths, & the consent thereto in writing of two magistrates having been obtained, notice of appeal was given. The notice commenced by stating, “I think I shall be injured or aggrieved if such footpaths shall be discontinued & stopped up & further take notice that the grounds of such appeal are, that the order of the comrs. is bad, that the consent of the magistrates is bad, & that the footpaths were not, nor is either of them either useless or unnecessary.” At the hearing the Recorder discharged the jury without permitting the going into evidence, & made this entry: “Jury discharged on ground of insufficiency of notice of appeal in respect of the statement of the injury or grievance in respect of which applt. thinks that he would be injured or aggrieved”;—Held: if the Recorder discharged the jury on the ground that the notice of appeal was insufficient, the ct. could not, since Quarter Sessions Act, 1849

(c. 45), s. 9, interfere with his decision whether right or wrong; & the notice of appeal & statement of grounds of appeal were substantially the same thing, & the entry of the recorder shows that he considered the statement of the grounds of appeal insufficient.

(2) An appeal against an order of comrs. under a local Improvement Act, was entered upon sessions, & at the instance of resp. adjourned to the next:—Held: resps. were entitled to object at the sessions to which the appeal stood adjourned, that the notice of grounds of appeal was insufficient.

(3) A local Act of Parliament directed that certain appts. should give notice of appeal & the grounds of their appeal, & be confined to the grounds stated; & also, that a jury should be impanelled to try certain questions of fact raised on appeal:—Held: a resp. might, after the jury had been sworn, object to the sufficiency of the statement of the grounds of appeal.—*R. v. #### (b) Who may Appeal.

1958. Person aggrieved—Though new way more commodious—Function of jury.—In construing an Act "or" may be read as "and" if the context makes that the necessary meaning. Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 89, provides that if, on an appeal to quarter sessions under sect. 88 by a person who thinks that he will be injured or aggrieved by a proposed diversion of a highway, the jury find that the proposed new highway is more commodious to the public, or that the party appealing would not be injured or aggrieved, the ct. shall dismiss the appeal, but that if the jury find that the proposed new highway is not more commodious or that the party appealing would be injured or aggrieved, the ct. shall allow the appeal. A jury at quarter sessions found that a proposed new highway would be more commodious to the public, & that the party appealing would be injured or aggrieved if the existing highway were stopped up & the proposed new one substituted:—Held: sect. 89 was contradictory & could only be construed by reading the word "or" in the first part of the sect. as "and" & on the findings of the jury the appeal to quarter sessions must be allowed.—WALKER v. YORK CORPN., [1906] 1 K. B. 724; 75 L. J. K. B. 413; 94 L. T. 744; 70 J. P. 270; 54 W. R. 493; 22 T. L. R. 456; 50 Sol. Jo. 391; 4 L. G. R. 524, D. C.

(c) Notice of Appeal.

1960. Length of notice—Whether ten or fourteen days.—(1) Notwithstanding Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 88, it is necessary to give the fourteen days' notice required by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 1.

(2) Where proceedings are instituted under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 53), s. 84, at the desire of a person or persons other than the inhabitants in vestry, for stopping up or diverting a highway, it is not necessary that the certificate of the justices should state that the surveyor was authorised by an authority in writing of the chairman of the vestry meeting, to apply to the justices to view.—*R. v. 1962. ———.—Where quarter sessions are regularly held on certain fixed days at certain places in different divisions of a county, & in each division, except the first, by adjournment from the preceding, the ten days' notice of appeal against a certificate for stopping up a highway under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 88, is to be reckoned with reference to the first day of the sessions held in the first of such divisions, though the highway is not situate within such first division.—R. v. SUFFOLK JJ. (1848), 5 Dow. & L. 558; 3 New Sess. Cas. 146; 17 L. J. M. C. 143; 12 J. P. 393; 12 Jur. 480.

1963. ———.—Under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 88, an appeal against a certificate of justices for stopping a highway cannot be brought unless ten days' notice has been given before the quarter sessions held next after the expiration of four weeks from the lodging of the certificate with the clerk of the peace. Where the sessions had entered & respited an appeal, of which such notice had not been given, this ct. quashed the order of sessions on certiorari. Where the general quarter sessions commences on a certain day, & is in practice afterwards adjourned & held on another day in another place, for the purpose of deciding matters in its vicinity, the notice of appeal must be given ten days before the day first mentioned, though the highway is in the vicinity of the latter place.—*R. v. Contents of notice—Statement that applicant is party aggrieved—Necessity for.—A notice of appeal against an order for the stopping up of a footway, under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 3, must state that the party intending to appeal is "injured or aggrieved" by the order.

The ten days' notice of appeal under the Act must be computed one day inclusive & one day exclusive, & is not affected by a rule of the ct. of quarter sessions, which requires ten days' notice of appeal, exclusive as well of the day of service as the first day of the sessions.—*R. v. Afterwards on the same day applt. applied for costs under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 90, by which the quarter sessions are authorised & required to award to the party having or receiving notice of appeal such costs & expenses as shall be incurred in prosecuting or resisting such appeal, whether the same shall be tried or not:—Held: the quarter sessions were bound to make an order for the costs.

G. Effect of Order for Diversion.

1983. Extinguishment of highway Private right of way preserved.]—At a meeting of the trustees of a turnpike road it was resolved, under Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 72, that a part of a certain road, subject to the trust, should, between certain specified limits, be stopped up & discontinued as a private highway, on the ground that the same had become unnecessary by the completion of a new road, & "that the remaining part of such old road from the boundary gate before mentioned, be kept open as a private way only for the use of Mr. C., to join the private way leading to his house & lands situate in the parish of I., & that subject thereto such old road is become useless & unnecessary to the public":—Held: having regard to sects. 86 & 88 of the Act, after the completion of a new road all the legal rights & consequences incidental to a highway are to cease in respect of the whole of the old road, including a part sold subject to a right of way to particular lands, houses, or places; & the liability to repair any such way or passage, if any, can only be enforced by action, & not by public prosecution.—R. v. IFIELD (INHABITANTS) (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 63; 20 J. P. 262; 4 W. R. 458.

1984. — [Pltfs. had been entitled from 1855 to a carriageway to property of theirs over a railway by a level crossing. By an Act of Parliament obtained by the co. in 1875, reciting that it was expedient that the rights of way in respect of certain footways which crossed the railway on the level should be extinguished, it was enacted that all rights of way in, over, or affecting the footways numbered 2, 4, 5, 6, & 7 on the deposited plans should be extinguished. No provision for compensation was made. The roadway in question was numbered 5 on the deposited plans, & was thereon marked "roadway & footway," the others being marked simply "footway":—Held: upon the true construction of the Act, it did not interfere with private rights of way, but only with public rights of footway, & an injunction restraining the railway co. from obstructing the way had been rightly granted.—WELLS v. LONDON, TILBURY, & SOUTHEAST RY. CO. (1877), 5 Ch. D. 120; 37 L. T. 302; 41 J. P. 452; 25 W. R. 325, C. A.

1985. — [—] — Held: an old highway, which had been diverted & for which a new one over the railway had been substituted by the railway co., under Railways (Clauses Act, 1815 (c. 20), s. 16, was extinguished as a highway.—MELKSHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. GAY (1902), 18 T. L. R. 358.

1986. Soil reverts in original owner.—By Metropolitan Local Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 96, all streets being highways, & the pavements, stones, & materials thereof, vest in & under the management & control of the vestry or district board, & by sect. 154, the vestry may sell any property whatsoever vested in them which it may appear to them to be properly sold. A street having become closed & disused, pltf., the owner of the adjoining land, claimed the site thereof:—Held:—under the words "streets being highways" in sect. 96, a property in the streets was vested in the vestry or district boards so long only as they remained highways, & on their being legally stopped up, they became the property of the person on whose land they had been made.—*ROLLS v. 1987. Public footpath communicating with highway—Extinguishment of path—Construction of order.—By 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, justices were empowered to divert & stop up certain highways, & to sell the part stopped up; but by sect. 17, if they found it necessary, the old highway was to be sold subject to the right of way & passage to any lands, house, or place, according to the ancient usage in that respect. In 1827 orders for diverting, stopping, & selling a portion of a highway were confirmed at quarter sessions, containing the reservation of a free passage for persons on foot only over & along the land & soil of the said highway to & from a certain public footpath communicating therewith at the letter E., as delineated on an annexed plan, according to the ancient usage thereof:—Held: the effect of these orders was to render another public footpath which communicated with the old highway at another point, & was not marked in the annexed plan, a cul de sac; & applt. was justified in closing a door at the point of communication.—R. v. WALLER (1875), 31 L. T. 777; 39 J. P. 485.

1988. Diversion of footpath—Into new private road—Whole road becomes highway.—A certain public footpath existed prior to the passing of Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), & was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. In 1868 such footpath was closed by a diversion order. In 1869 a road now known as G. road was formed & made by a private owner, & had been used by the public ever since. A plan was annexed to the diversion order, & on that the old footpath was shown coloured blue, & also running along the new road, now known as G. road, on one side thereof was a strip of footpath coloured red, the proposed diversion, which it was admitted was legally to be regarded as a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The diversion order recited that the new highway would at all times be open & ready not only for the reception of foot passengers but also for persons travelling with carts & carriages:—Held: on an application under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), to hear & determine objections, there was evidence upon which the justices could come to the conclusion that the whole breadth of G. road & not only the strip coloured red was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, & therefore the local authority had no jurisdiction to make apportionments under the Act in respect of this road.—KINGSTON-UPON-THAMES CORPN. v. HAVERSTOCK (1909), 100 L. T. 935; 73 J. P. 378; 7 L. G. R. 831, D. C.

II. Presumption of Lost Order.

1989. In what circumstances presumed.—An inclosure Act authorised the comrs. therein named to divert or stop up any old road, public or private, leading between or over any of the old inclosures within the district to which the Act applied; with a proviso that no such road should be stopped up without the concurrence & order of two justices of the peace for the district. The comrs., by their award, "in pursuance of the powers & authorities vested in them by the said Act, & by the concurrence & order of, etc., two of his Majesty's justices of the peace acting in & for, etc.," stopped up a certain public footpath in the district. No order of justices was to be found in the place of deposit mentioned in the Act for the award & other documents relating thereto:—Held: the award itself, & the statement therein contained, was sufficient prima facie evidence that the road had been duly stopped up by the concurrence & order of two justices, the subsequent enjoyment not being shown to be inconsistent with the award.—MANNING v. EASTERN COUNTIES RY. CO. (1843), 12 M. & W. 237; 3 Ry. & Can. Cas. 637; 13 L. J. Ex. 265; 2 L. T. O. S. 104, 152; 8 J. P. 107; 152 E. R. 1185.

1990. — [—] — Marshes were allotted in 1819, when a gate, which had since been kept locked, was put up across an old road, but the road had since been used by foot passengers occasionally. The award of the comrs., executed in 1830, set out the new roads, & directed the old roads to be stopped up. A certificate of two justices, that the new roads had been formed & completed, under 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, s. 9, was put in & proved; but no order of two justices for stopping the old road was produced:—Held: it might be presumed that an order of two justices for stopping up the old road had been duly made.—WILLIAMS v. EYTON (1859), 4 H. & N. 357; 28 L. J. Ex. 146; 32 L. T. O. S. 330; 23 J. P. 243; 5 Jur. N. S. 770; 7 W. R. 291, Ex. Ch.

1991. —[.]—In 1842 R. grove was, pursuant to a resolution passed at a vestry meeting, substituted for an older highway called C. lane. R. grove ever since 1842 had been open & used by the general public, & upon one occasion many years back it had been repaired by the surveyor of L., but whether in his capacity as surveyor or not did not appear. No surveyor's accounts were produced, nor was any evidence given as to any certificate of justices having been enrolled or steps taken under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), ss. 23 or 84:—Held: the justices were justified in finding that R. grove was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.

It is, I think, a very violent presumption that the public should acquiesce in the stopping up of the old road unless it were done in a regular way, & I think the justices may well have presumed that the certificate of the justices was duly granted, & the formal proceedings duly taken to comply with the provisions of sect. 85. After so long a period a certificate of the justices may have been lost (BRUCE, J.).—LEIGH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. KING, [1901] 1 K. B. 747; 70 L. J. K. B. 313; 83 L. T. 777; 65 J. 1993. Street in more than one district—Presumption as to boundary line.]—An Act of Charles II., creating a new parish of A. in the Metropolitan, described the boundary as the houses abutting on a street. The other side of the street was in the parish of M., & there was evidence that in perambulating the parish boundaries of M., the middle of the street was regarded as the boundary of M.:—Held: the boundary of the new parish extended beyond the houses abutting on the highway to the medium filium of the highway.—*R. v. of Works made under Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 140, & Metropolitan Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 86, that a new street in more than one parish or district shall be under the exclusive management of one vestry or district board for the purposes of paving, & the expenses payable by each be divided equally between the two parishes or districts, does not entitle the managing vestry or board to require the other vestry or board to pay one-half of the expenses properly chargeable on frontagers under Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & Metropolitan Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77.—ST. 1995. Management transferred to borough council—Contribution by county council towards maintenance.—An application was made by several metropolitan borough councils to the Local Government Board to determine the amount to be contributed by the county council in respect of the maintenance of main roads which was transferred to the borough councils by London Government Act, 1899 (c. 14), s. 6 (1). The Local Government Board decided "otherwise than as arbitrators" that no contribution should be made:—Held: the ct. ought not to interfere.—R. v. LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD, Ex p. 1996. Power of local authority to open up street—To make connection for sewers—Builder's road.—A builder made drains from certain houses in a road to the boundary of the forecourts of the houses. The road was what is known as a builder's road, made & coated with gravel & ballasted. The footpaths were made with gravel & kerbed with granite. The houses on either side of the road were not completed & inhabited, but the road was open for carriages & foot passengers. It was lighted by the parish but had not been taken to as a public road. The vestry made branches from the drains into a sewer which belonged to them & ran along the centre of the road, & for that purpose they opened the road & footway. The builder declined to repay to the vestry the expenses incurred thereby:—Held: (1) the road was not the less a street within the definitions in Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & Metropolitan Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 112, because it came within the definition of a new street in the last-mentioned sect.; (2) Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 78, which authorises the opening of the pavement of any street for the purpose of branching private drains into a sewer, applies equally to streets & to new streets; (3) looking to the definition of the word "pave" in Metropolitan Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 112, the road was paved—& consequently, the vestry had opened a part of the pavement of a street & were entitled under Metropolitan Management Act

1855 (c. 120), s. 78, to recover the expenses incurred by them.—ST. JOHN, HAMPSTEAD, VESTRY v. HOOFEL (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 652; 54 L. J. M. C. 147; 49 J. P. 741; 33 W. R. 903; 1 T. L. R. 584, D. C.

1997. Power to lower level of street—Mains of water company thereunder.—A water co. in exercise of statutory powers laid down pipes under the surface of a street, & the highway authority of the district afterwards, in exercise of the power in that behalf given by Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 98, proposed to lower the surface of the street, & to do so without altering or disturbing the position of the pipes, but so as to leave only a few inches of soil over them. In an action by the water co. to restrain the highway authority from lowering the surface of the street without at the same time lowering the pipes of the co. to a corresponding depth under the new surface:—Held: the sect. did not impose upon the highway authority, when exercising the power thereby given to them of altering the level of a street, any express or implied duty to exercise also at their own expense the power by the same sect. given of altering the position of the pipes thereunder, for the benefit of the water co., in a case where the highway authority did not require for their own purposes to interfere with such pipes.—SOUTHWARK & VAUXHALL WATER CO. v. WANDSWORTH BOARD OF WORKS, [1898] 2 Ch. 603; 67 L. J. Ch. 657; 79 L. T. 132; 62 J. P. 756; 47 W. R. 107; 14 T. L. R. 576, C. A.

1998. Power to compromise with frontager.—The corp'n. of a metropolitan borough has power for the purpose of widening & improving a street, to enter into an agreement with the owner of a public-house in the street, whereby he shall be permitted to erect a signpost at the edge of the footpath.—HOARE & CO., LTD. v. LEWISHAM CORPN. (1902), 87 L. T. 464; 67 J. P. 20; 18 T. L. R. 816; 46 Sol. Jo. 715, C. A.

1999. Power to reduce width of footway.—In 1883 building land in the metropolis was demised to C. for a term of eighty-two years, & L., under an agreement with C., built several shops on a part of the land which fronted a highway. The shops were not built to the edge of the demised land, but a strip of land 3 feet wide was left between the front wall of the shops & the public footway. Subsequently in 1883 L. applied to the local authority to pave the footway in front of his shops right up to the building line, & the local authority informed him that on the slip of land being given up to form part of the public footway the footway would be paved. L. made no reply, & the footway was paved up to the wall of the shops. In the meantime C., who had no knowledge of L.'s application to the local authority, had granted L. separate underleases of the shops for eighty years, & had also assigned to him for value the head lease with a proviso against merger. In 1898 C. repurchased the head lease for value from L.'s successors in title. In 1906 the London County Council under the powers of a special Act converted a horse tramway in the highway in question into an electric tramway, & in connection with this work they widened the road & reduced the width of the footway & took up the pavement (including the pavement of the 3 foot strip of land) in front of the shops. This work was done under an agreement made in May, 1906, with the borough council, whereby the borough council, in consideration of the reconstruction of the tramway, consented to the narrowing of the footway & agreed to pay part of the cost of paving, which was to be done by the county council. C. & the assignees of some of the underleases then brought this action against the London County Council for an injunction & damages in respect of the taking up of the pavement of the strip of land & the reduction of the width of the footway. In answer to the first claim defts. alleged that the strip of land had been dedicated to the public by L. in 1883 & was part of the public footway, & in answer to the second that the borough council had power to authorise defts. to make the reduction in the width of the footway, & that the work was done by defts. under the authority of the borough council given by the agreement of May, 1906: Held: Metropolitan Paving Act, 1817 (c. xxix), s. 52, empowered the borough council, as the road authority, to alter the division of the roadway into footway & carriageway; they must be taken by their agreement to have authorised defts. to execute these alterations on their behalf, & this was not a delegation of their statutory powers; consequently in respect of the narrowing of the footway plffs.' claim failed.—CORSELLIS v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1908] 1 Ch. 13; 77 L. J. Ch. 120; 98 L. T. 475; 71 J. P. 561; 24 T. L. R. 80; 6 L. G. R. 78, C. A.

2000. Improvement by London County Council—Power to impose improvement charge—London County Council (Improvements) Act, 1899 (c. cclxvi), s. 61.—The improvement charge, which by above Act is placed upon all lands adjacent to, & enhanced in value by, the operations carried out under the Act, is an overriding charge upon the lands as a whole. The council have a statutory right to recover the full amount of the charge from any owner, lessee, or occupier, & they are not limited in their right to recover against lessees by the fact that the council have abandoned the charge as against the freehold reversioners.—*HOLBORN & FRASCATI, LTD. v. #### A. What is a New Street.

See Part I., Sect. 6.

B. Width of Carriageway and Footway.

2001. Power of local authority to vary widths—Liability of frontagers.—The council of a metropolitan borough, when proposing in the exercise of the powers conferred by Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, to pave an old road which has become a new street, have no power to alter the respective widths of the carriageway & footpaths, so as to cast upon the frontagers the expense of throwing portions of the footpaths into the carriage-way.

Speaking for myself, I should have great difficulty in coming to the conclusion that the construction of a gully, that is to say of the connection of the channel with the sewer, is part either of the paving or the formation of the road. The paving of the road is one thing. The making of improved drainage to take away water which will require to be taken away more rapidly in consequence of that paving is another (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—*WANDSWORTH BOROUGH COUNCIL v. 2004. Notice by local authority to repair new street—Subsequent resolution to pave Right to recover cost of paving from frontage owners.—A metropolitan vestry, on Dec. 27, resolved that notice under Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 106, & Metropolitan Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 80, be given of their intention to repair E. street, a new street. On Feb. 7, following, the vestry resolved that E. street be paved according to a plan submitted by the surveyor, & the expense was apportioned among the owners, of whom P. was one. Under the first resolution the vestry contemplated general repairs, but under the second paving only, & the costs under the first proceeding would not fall on the owners, whereas the second would:—Held: though the vestry under the second resolution, proceeded under a different sect. of their Act, still that circumstance did not prevent them from afterwards proceeding with that, & executing the paving before the general repairs.—ST. GEORGE THE MARTYR, SOUTHWARK, VESTRY v. PETHBRIDGE (1867), 31 J. P. 279.

2005. Duty of authority to charge paving on frontagers—Not on general rate.—When within the metropolis, as defined by Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, a new street is paved for the first time, the vestry or district board executing the work cannot at their discretion charge the cost thereof upon the general rate under ss. 90, 98 of that Act; they are bound to charge the expense of laying the pavement upon the owners of the adjoining houses & land, under sect. 105 of that statute, as varied by Metropolitan Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77. In 1855 a road in P., within the metropolis, as defined by Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, ran between an irregular line of houses & market gardens upon the south side, & market gardens upon the north. Between that year & 1874, a continuous line of houses was built along the north side, & several houses along the south. The district board, within whose jurisdiction the road lay, in 1874, paved a footpath by the side of the road, & paid for the cost of the work under Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), ss. 96, 98, out of the general rate levied upon the inhabitants of P.:—Held: (1) between 1855 & 1874 the road had become a "new street" within Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105; (2) the district board had no power to charge the cost of paving the footpath upon the general rate, but it was compulsory upon them to obtain payment thereof from the owners of the adjoining houses & land, under that sect., as varied by Metropolitan Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77.—*DRYDEN v. 2007. Street may not be repaved at expense of frontagers. ]—A board of works in a metropolitan district paved a new street, which had not been dedicated as a highway, under Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, which enacts that the district board may pave any new street at the expense of the owners of the adjoining houses, & shall from time to time keep such pavement in repair. The street having afterwards become out of repair, the board refused to repair it on the ground that a post & rails had been erected along the kerb of the footway by the owner of the estate. On motion for a mandamus to the board to repair:—Held: the board, having paved a new street, were bound afterwards to keep the pavement in repair, whether it had become a highway or not.—*R. v. 2008. ———. ]—In 1876 a local authority caused the footpaths of a new street, within Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), to be paved at a cost of £1,425 raised out of the general rates, & subsequently repaired them from time to time. Ten years afterwards a resolution was passed at a vestry that these paths should be paved under the powers of Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & Metropolitan Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, & the costs apportioned among the adjoining owners. Upon an objection being taken by an adjoining owner that the local authority, having laid out a substantial sum in making permanent footpaths in 1876, which was then charged to the general rates, were estopped from exercising their power of paving the street again under these sects. & throwing the cost upon the adjoining owners:—Held: the work having been once done the local authority could not, ten years afterwards, throw the burden of paving upon the adjoining owners.—ST. GILES, CAMBERWELL, VESTRY v. HUNT (1887), 56 L. J. M. C. 65; 52 J. P. 132, D. C.

2011. Land let on building agreement—Lease to be granted on completion—Liability of freeholder. ]—A., the owner in fee of land, entered into a building agreement with B., by which B. was to have possession of such land & to build thereon a certain number of houses, & to inclose & lay out a portion of the land as an ornamental pleasure ground, for the exclusive use of the inhabitants of such houses. A lease was to be granted by A. of each house when finished, & with the lease of the last house was to be granted a lease of the inclosed pleasure ground; & until all the leases were granted B. was to pay A. yearly rent in respect of the whole land, but the agreement was not to operate as a demise nor to give B. any estate or interest in the premises until the leases were executed. B., under this agreement, inclosed & laid out the pleasure ground, & built some of the houses of which, & of which only, leases were granted to him; but not having completed all the houses:—Held: A. remained the owner of the land which had been inclosed as such pleasure ground within Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & therefore, as such owner, liable under Metropolitan Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, to contribute to the expense incurred by the parish vestry in paving a new street abutting on such pleasure ground.—*HOLLAND (LADY) v. 2012. ———. ]—The freeholder of certain land made a building agreement with a builder, the scheme of which was that the builder was to take possession of the land & immediately commence to erect thereon a certain number of houses, & was in the meantime, until leases should have been granted, to pay to the lessor a rent of £200 a year, or so much thereof as should not have been reserved by any lease actually granted, & upon each house being completed a lease of such house was to be granted to the builder for a term of years, & the agreement contained a clause that "this agreement is intended to operate as an agreement only, & not as an actual demise of the premises, or to give the intended lessee any legal interest therein until the leases herein before agreed to be granted shall have been executed." No houses had been built & no use of the land had been made by the builder, but he had paid the £200 yearly rent, which was found not to be the rack rent of the land:—Held: the freeholder, & not the builder, was the person who would be entitled to receive the rack rent of the premises, & the builder was therefore not the "owner" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & was not liable for the expenses of paving a new street upon which such land abutted.—*DRISCOLL v. 2013. — Builder holding land on terms of lease—Liability of builder.—Deft. was owner of some houses, & occupied land abounding or abutting on a new street, which plffs. had paved under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & sewered under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 52. Amongst other items which plffs. had apportioned to deft.'s contribution were costs of collecting apportioned amounts, of survey plan & obtaining names of owners, & of filling up, printing, advertising, & serving notices. These sums were all paid to persons employed for the purpose, & not plff.'s servants, although plffs. had in their employ a surveyor & a clerk, & payments were requested at their office. Deft. occupied the land under a building agreement, by which the owner of the land agreed to demise to deft. or his nominees the several pieces of land upon which deft. was to build, as the houses & buildings respectively became erected & covered, for eighty years, at the rent of the pepper-corn for two years, & of sums increasing every year up to £361 in the sixth & following years. Deft. was to be considered as holding the undemised portion on the terms of the leases. There was a power of re-entry upon non-completion of the building covenants. The houses at this time were in every stage of building progress, & some had been demised to other persons at deft.'s nomination:—Held: upon an action to recover deft.'s apportionment, with the exception of the houses demised to other persons, deft. was liable as owner of all the premises, & the above items were incidental costs & charges within Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 120), s. 77.—*POPULAR BOARD OF WORKS v. The chapel was registered as a place of religious worship, but had not been consecrated, & there was no dedication of the land in perpetuity. Attached to the chapel was a vestry, & there were also rooms for a caretaker, besides lecture & schoolrooms underneath the chapel: Held: the trustees were the owners of a "house" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, or of land within Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, & were liable to contribute to the expense of making & paving the street.—*CAIGER v. 2018. — — — — — (1) By the term "houses," in Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & the term "land," in Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862, (c. 103), s. 77, it is intended to include, with certain exceptions, all the frontage of a new street, so as to make all the owners of the frontage liable to contribute to the expense of paving the new street. The word "house" includes every building which is capable of being used as a human habitation. If a building which is physically capable of being so used is prevented, either by common law or statute, from being ever put to such a use, it is exempted from the liability to contribute to the expense.

(2) A consecrated church of the Established Church of England is exempted, because, by reason of its consecration, it becomes by the common law for ever incapable of being used as an habitation for man. (3) A leasehold chapel fronting on a new street, the chapel being vested in trustees, on trust to permit it to be used as a place of religious worship by congregation of Wesleyans, is a house within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, on the ground that, by the consent of the landlord, the trustees, & the census que trustent, the trusts might at any moment be put an end to. (4) The trustees are the "owners" of the chapel, & as such liable to contribute to the expense of paving the new street.

(5) Whether in the case of premises which were prevented by an Act of Parliament from being let at a rack-rent there ever could be an owner within [Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120)], s. 250, I very much doubt (BOWEN, L.J.).—WRIGHT v. Burial ground.—Liability of cemetery company.—A cemetery co. were, by statute, prohibited from selling or disposing of any of the consecrated land belonging to them, & such land was for ever to be set apart & used exclusively for purposes of Christian burial; but they were empowered to make profits by selling or disposing of, at prices to be agreed upon, the exclusive right of burial, either in perpetuity or for a limited period, in vaults made by them, & the right to make family & other vaults, with the exclusive right of burial therein either in perpetuity or for a limited period. The co. having been called upon by the vestry of the parish to contribute to the expenses of paving a new street on which consecrated land, forming part of their cemetery, abutted:—Held: the co. were "owners" of the land within Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & liable to contribute to such expenses. ST. 2022. Public recreation ground Liability of local authority.—An open space in a square, the roads in which were streets within Metropolitan Management Acts, was acquired by a vestry, under Metropolitan Open Spaces Act, 1881 (c. 34), by assignment of a lease, under which the vestry held in trust to allow the enjoyment by the public of the open space. The assignment contained a covenant by the vestry that the land should be held & used for the purposes of a public garden, pleasure ground, or open space, & on failure so to use it, to reassign. The owners of houses in the square refused to pay the amount apportioned on them in respect of the expenses of flagging the footway of one of the roads, on the ground that the apportionment was bad, because the vestry had not been charged, as owners of the open space, with any proportion of the expenses:—Held: the vestry was the "owner" of the open space, within Metropolitan Management Acts, & the apportionment was bad.—ST. MARY, ISLINGTON, VESTRY v. COBBETT, [1895] 1 Q. B. 369; 64 L. J. M. C. 36; 71 L. T. 573; 43 W. R. 44; 39 Sol. Jo. 10; 58 J. P. Jo. 716; 15 R. 83, D. 2023. ———.]—Land was conveyed to a vestry in fee simple "to the end & intent that the same premises should be at all times thereafter kept & maintained as an open space for the perpetual use thereof by the public for exercise & recreation." The land was an open space abutting on a new street, & was acquired under the powers conferred on the vestry by Open Spaces Acts, 1877 (c. 35), & 1881 (c. 34), by which the land was held in trust for the perpetual use thereof by the public for exercise & recreation & for no other purpose. By London Open Spaces Act, 1893 (c. lxxi), the vestry might erect on the land convenient & ornamental buildings & such appliances as they might think fit for purposes of exercise & recreation & for other like purposes. They erected a band stand a cloak room & a refreshment stall. The refreshment stall was let at a rent to a caterer. The band stand was not let but seats for the public were let by the vestry to a contractor at a rental. The vestry assessed resp., as owner of houses on the opposite side of the street, upon the basis that the cost of paving the new street should be defrayed by the owners of the houses & lands on the opposite side of the street & not in any part by the owners of the land which included the open space. A summons to recover the amount apportioned on the resp. was dismissed on the ground that the apportionment was invalid because a part of the cost of paving ought to have been apportioned on the vestry as owners of the open space:—Held: the open space was not land which was incapable of becoming a source of profit & therefore the vestry were the persons who would receive the rent of the land if the same were let at a rack rent & were owners of the open space within Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & were liable as owners to contribute to the cost of paving the new street, & the summons was rightly dismissed.—FULHAM VESTRY v. 2024. ———.]—By virtue of a scheme certified by the Inclosure Comrs. pursuant to Metropolitan Commons Act, 1866 (c. 122), & afterwards confirmed by Metropolitan Commons (Supplemental) Act, 1873 (c. lxxxvi), a common was vested in the Metropolitan Board of Works, whose successors are the London County Council, for the purpose of being dedicated to the public as a recreation ground. By the scheme it was provided that the common should be regulated & managed by the Board, & that no house or other buildings should be erected on it, except such lodges or other buildings as might be necessary for the maintenance & management of the common or recreation ground. The county council derived small annual profits from the herbage on the common & from certain buildings erected thereon for purposes subsidiary to its use as a public recreation ground, but the expenses annually incurred by the county council in the management & regulation of the common far exceeded the amount of any profits so received by them. The Wandsworth Borough Council claimed from the London County Council, as owners of the common, a sum of £319 as their proportion of the estimated expenses of paving a new street, on which the common abutted to the extent of 474 feet, under Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & Metropolitan Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77:—Held:

the London County Council were not "owners of the common within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & they were not liable to pay the amount claimed.

2025. Embankment of river—Liability of conservators.—The conservators of a public navigable river purchased under their statutory powers a strip of land, which they used for the purpose of a retaining bank for the waters of a cut forming part of the navigation. They were empowered to take tolls for the use of the navigation, but any moneys received by them under their Acts were applicable only to payment of the expenses of carrying out their Acts, & of moneys borrowed for the purposes of those Acts, & interest thereon, & not to any purposes of profit beyond what might be necessary for such payment. They had power to construct docks, wharves, & other works on the river, & to sell any lands vested in them which they might not require for the purposes of their Acts. It appeared that it would be possible if a retaining wall were substituted for the bank, that the residue of the before mentioned land might be otherwise applied for purposes of profit:—Held: the conservators were "owners" of the land within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & liable under Metropolis Management Acts to contribute in respect of it to the paving expenses of a new street on which it abutted.—*HACKNEY CORPN. v. The co. acquired the land, & planted & fenced a strip along & contiguous to the whole length of the street:—Held: the railway co. were "owners" of the strip of land within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & were liable to contribute to the expense of paving the street as a new street.—*HAMPSTEAD CORPN. v. Building standing back from street—Communicating with street by passage.—To the north of High street, Whitechapel, & communicating with the street by means of a covered gateway there is a yard called the "Kent & Essex Yard," around which are several dwelling houses, warehouses, stables, sheds, a booking office, & other buildings. The yard, with the exception of the width of the gateway, & all the dwelling houses, etc., round same, are suitable at the back of several houses & premises which front High street. The entrance into the yard is through carriage gates & along a covered gateway. No part of the yard was ever paved or repaired by the courts, nor had they, within the yard, at any time exercised any of the powers conferred on them by 11 Geo. 3, c. 15, & Metropolis Paving Act, 1817 (c. xxix):—Held: the occupiers of the yard & houses therein were liable to be rated in respect of the paving & repairing of High street, the premises being, for that purpose, "within the street," inasmuch as they had a frontage on the street, & their sole communication was with the street.—*BADDELEY v. The school house did not immediately front the street but stood back from it some seventy or eighty feet in a large yard, the whole area being about 20,500 square feet. There was a row of eleven small houses, with gardens at the back of them, between this area & the street; but the only access to the school was by a private passage which ran along one side of the last house & garden into the school yard with gates opening from the street in question, the width of the passage being 20 feet & the length about 64 feet:—Held: (1) the school house though not actually one of the houses "forming the street" yet practically formed part of it, within sect. 105; (2) the school board were "owners" within the definition in Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250.—*LONDON SCHOOL BOARD v. 2033. ————]—Railway crossing street.—A railway in the metropolitan district was carried across a new street by an arch. On one side of the street the railway was carried forward on arches, & on that side was a strip of land, 10 feet wide, left open for the purpose of repairing the arches; this abutted for 10 feet on the street. On the other side, the railway was carried forward on an embankment, & the sloping part or buttress of the embankment abutted on the street about 36 feet, & at the foot of the embankment was an open space, also about 36 feet wide, also abutting on the street, which was left for the purpose of allowing of slips in the embankment. The vestry of the parish, having determined to pave the street, sought to make the railway company contribute, under Metropolitan Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, as owners of "land" abutting on the street:—Held: the above pieces of land, including the slope of the embankment were "land" within that sect.—*HIGGINS v. 2034. Premises at end of cul de sac.—D. was owner of a house, the back premises of which had a door leading into an alley or lane which had been used about fifty years in common by tenants of nine houses as an access, but there was no thoroughfare through it:—Held: there was evidence justifying the magistrate in finding that this was a new street, the expense of paving which fell on the owners of the houses abutting on the alley.—DODD v. ST. PANCRA'S VESTRY (1869), 31 J. P. 517.

2035. Private road intersecting highway.—On Jan. 1, 1856, when the Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), passed, there was an ancient highway & public carriageway in the parish of L., within the district of the Plumstead Board of Works, which from time out of mind had been repaired by the parish. At that time there were two houses adjoining the highway, but distinct from one another. Between Jan. 1, 1856, & Aug. 7, 1862, when the Metropolitan Local Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), passed, twenty-one more houses were built along one side of the highway, some being in a block & some detached. Between 1862 & June 23, 1869, ninety additional houses were built, of which fifty-six were built on the opposite side. Roads were made intersecting the highway, the roads being private, & the soil thereof being in appt. N. Appt., P., was the owner of some of the houses. Resps., the Board of Works, having determined that the highway should be made into a hard road to an extent greater than it had been before, & that pathways should be formed, apportioned the amount which was to be paid by N., in respect of the soil of the private roads, & by P. in respect of the houses of which he was the owner:—Held: the highway was a "new street" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), & Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), & resps had a right to throw upon the appts. the cost apportioned upon them of the work to be done.—*POUND v. 2036. —.]—Defts., a land co., being owners of certain lands, in 1863 laid them out for building purposes, & made roads & ways across them; & nearly the whole of the estate was sold in lots to different purchasers, & conveyed to them by metes, bounds, & admeasurements set forth on coloured plans attached to the conveyance. Each lot had a frontage upon one of the roads. The roads had been dedicated to the public, as far as any act of defts. could do so, but no proceedings were taken to make them repairable by the parish. Pltfs., the board of works of the district, from time to time paved the new streets formed by the houses on the estate, & apportioned the costs among the owners of houses forming the streets & the owners of land bounding & abutting on the street; & in so doing they assessed defts. in respect of the new streets & roads were bounding or abutting on the sides or ends of the streets paved, as "lands abutting" on those streets, under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77.—Held: assuming the soil of the roads to be in defts., they were improperly charged under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, for that they were not, in respect of the roads which had been irrevocably dedicated to the public, "owners of land" within the meaning of that sect. & Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250.—*PLUMSTEAD BOARD OF WORKS v. 2037. Premises without access to street—Dead wall.—B. was the owner of a house which had its front & only entrance in F. street, & behind it a garden with a dead wall at the further end. A new street was made parallel to F. street, of which the dead wall at the end of B.'s garden was part of the line of street. This new street was a mew which the metropolitan board allowed to be made of 20 feet width:—Held: B.'s land abutted on this new street, & so B. was liable for his proportion of expenses of paving, etc., it under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, (c. 102), s. 77.—PADDINGTON, VESTRY v. BRAMWELL (1880), 44 J. P. 815, D. C.

2038. Effect of narrow strip of land at side of street.—By Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, the word "owner" shall mean the person for the time being receiving the rack rent of the lands or premises in connection with which the word is used, or who would so receive same if such lands or premises were let at a rack rent; & by Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, which is to be read as one with the Act of 1855, "owners" of land abutting on any new street are made liable to contribute towards the expenses of paving same. Appl. having a strip of land about 4 inches wide & 265 feet in length, abutting upon the north side of a new street, had erected a boundary fence upon the land along its whole extent, under a covenant to erect & for ever after maintain a fence thereon made with his vendor, who was owner of the land adjoining the strip on the north side:—Held: appl. was the "owner" of the strip of land within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & therefore liable to contribute towards the expense of paving the new street.—*WILLIAMS v. 2039. —.] Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, empowers the local authority to pave any new street within its district which is not paved to their satisfaction & charge the owners of the houses forming such street with the expenses thereof; & by Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, the owners of the land bounding or abutting on such street are made liable to contribute to the expenses of paving it as well as the owners of houses therein. B. land, which had never been dedicated to the public, was bounded on the east side by old buildings, & along the same side there was a paved footpath over which was a public right of way, but the remainder of the road was private. On the west side the road was bounded by the backs of other old buildings, including a public-house, a row of cottages, & an oil mill, from none of which was there any access to the road. In order to prevent such access ever being had, appl., the owner of the road, had reserved to himself & marked off partly by a fence & partly by stones let into the soil, a narrow strip of land, a few inches wide, between the containing walls of the above mentioned buildings & the road:—Held: (1) there was evidence on which the magistrates could find, as they did, that appl. was a frontager, on the west side of the road; (2) B. lane was not a "new street" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105.—*ARTER v. Sect. 1.—Metropolitan: Sub-sect. 3, D. (d) & (e), & E. (a) & (b).]

there was a piece of land on which houses had been erected fronting upon a road which ran parallel to the new street & having gardens at the back which ran down to an old wooden fence which separated them from the new street. The local authority apportioned the expenses among the owners of the houses on both sides. The owners of the houses on the west side objected upon the ground that the land upon which the fence stood belonged to another person & that therefore their houses & land did not bound or abut on the new street. The local authority thereupon, before the works were completed, rescinded the apportionment, & made a new apportionment, charging the expenses upon the owners of the houses on the east side only & charging a nominal sum in respect of the strip of land upon which the fence stood:—Held: upon the facts, the land upon which the fence stood belonged to the owners of the houses on the west side of the new street, & therefore the gardens of those houses bounded or abutted on the new street, & the owners were liable to have some of the expenses apportioned upon them; & the second apportionment not being upon the right persons, even though made bond fide, was invalid, & a declaration to that effect was accordingly made.—*ELSDON v. Relying on this apportionment, deft. took building leases of certain plots of land lying behind the old fence, & built houses thereon. The houses fronted on another street & had gardens behind them extending up to the strip of land, but had no access over the strip to the new street. In Eldson v. Hampstead Corpn., No. 2041, ante, it was held that the strip of land had been conveyed to the adjoining owners together with the land on either side of it, & that the houses & gardens abutted on the new street. A fresh apportionment was then made, including the houses & gardens. In an action to recover the money so apportioned:—Held: it was a question for the jury whether there was or was not an intervening strip between deft.'s land & the new street at the time when deft. bought the land.

(2) The jury finding that there was such a strip, but that the borough council, pliffs., had taken possession of it as part of the new street:—Held: deft. was liable to pay the contribution apportioned on his houses & lands as aforesaid.—*HAMPSTEAD BOROUGH COUNCIL v. 2050. — Costs of paving point of intersection.—The words "point of intersection of streets" are not limited to the cutting or crossing of at least two streets each by the other, each street continuing its course from each end of the intersection, so as to constitute in effect four streets running into each other, forming the shape of an X., but also apply to the case of where street A. runs into street B. on one side thereof, but is not continued, forming the shape of a T., & the expenses of paving a granite crossing wholly on the soil of street B., the cross line of the T., connecting the footpaths on one side of street B., where street A., joins it, may be apportioned under Metropolis Management Acts on the frontagers of street A. BRIDGETT v. WANDSWORTH CORPN. (1905), 93 L. T. 519; 69 J. P. 391; 3 L. G. R. 1186, D. C.

2051. No limit of time for apportionment.—[Under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 53], there is no limitation of the time within which the amount payable by the owners of land & houses is to be apportioned. Where therefore a sewer had been constructed, within the sect., in 1868, & no apportionment of the amount of the cost of constructing it, to be borne by the owners of the houses in the street, was made until 1876: Held: the apportionment was valid.—*BRADLEY v. 2052. An estimate was given in evidence, signed by the surveyor, who was not called as a witness, but the estimate had been acted on by the vestry: Held: the signed estimate was some evidence that the surveyor had made it & determined the amount, & the magistrate was right in enforcing payment. *HOBMAN v. 2054. Right to make fresh apportionment.—On Nov. 9, 1898, the H. vestry resolved that R. street be paved as a new street, & apportioned the sum of £37 16s. 8d. on resp., which he refused to pay. On Sept. 15, 1899, the H. vestry summoned resp. for that sum, but the summons was dismissed on the ground that R. street was not a new street within the Metropolis Management Acts. On June 13, 1900, a resolution was passed by the H. vestry rescinding the above apportionment, & on Mar. 14, 1901, the H. borough council resolved that R. street be paved as a new street, & apportioned on resp. the sum of £32 16s. 1d., which he refused to pay, & thereupon the present summons was issued. The magistrate held that the adjudication of Sept. 15, 1899, was conclusive, & dismissed the summons: Held: the decision of Sept. 15, 1899, was not conclusive & the present case should be heard on its merits.—SCOTT v. LOWE (1902), 86 L. T. 421; 66 J. P. 520, D. C.

(b) Mode of Apportionment.

2055. Resolution to pave whole street—Expenses must be apportioned between whole body of owners.—A board of works, under Metropolis Management Acts, passed a resolution that a certain road should be repaired, & instructed the surveyor to estimate the cost & apportion it on the owners of property through which the road passed. The surveyor divided the road into four sections, & apportioned the cost of repairing each section amongst the owners of property in each section respectively. These apportionments were confirmed by resolutions of the board:—Held: although the board might, under Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105; 1862 (c. 102), ss. 77, 112, have resolved that part of the road should be repaired, yet as they had resolved that the whole road should be repaired, there ought to have been but one apportionment on all the owners along the entire road; & the separate apportionments were invalid, & could not be enforced. *WHITCHURCH v. 2056. Street paved on one side—Apportionment on owners on both sides.—By Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, & Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, the costs of paving a new street, under the compulsory powers of the former Act, are payable by the owners of the houses forming & of the land abutting upon such street, & are to be apportioned by the vestry or district board of works. By the interpretation clause of the latter Act the expression "new street" is to include a part of any such street. Buildings & land belonging to defts. abutting upon a new street which the vestry directed to be paved over half its breadth only, the part paved being that nearest defts.' premises. The vestry apportioned the whole cost of the paving upon the houses forming defts.' side of the street, omitting those on the other side:—Held: the apportionment was invalid, & the owners of the houses on both sides of the street ought to have been charged. *MILE END VESTRY v. 2057. — — — Unless part paved amounts to new street.—In 1870, a road which was then an unpaved new street, with houses & a footpath on the north side only, & vacant land on the south side, was paved to the satisfaction of the local authority under the provisions of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105. The expenses of such paving were apportioned upon & were paid wholly by the owners of the houses on the north side, & the vestry afterwards kept the whole of such pavement in repair, & paid the cost out of the general rates. In 1888 the owner of the vacant land on the south side, by an arrangement with the vestry for widening the road, set back his fence 13 feet, & dedicated this strip, & the vestry kerbed a new footpath 7 feet in width on the south side, & paved & metalled the remaining 6 feet, making it uniform with the carriage way already paved, & they paid the expenses, as well as the expenses of the subsequent repairs, out of the general rates. The only part left unpaved was the new footpath of 7 feet, & houses having been built on the south side of this footpath, the vestry resolved in 1894 to pave this footpath, being, as they said, a new street, & they apportioned the expenses of paving the new footpath on the owners on the north side of the road as well as the owners on the south side:—Held: the apportionment was upon a wrong basis; as in 1870 the whole breadth of the road was completely paved to the satisfaction of the local authority under sect. 105, & as they had exercised their powers under the sect., & compelled contribution from the owners of the houses adjoining, they had no jurisdiction afterwards to declare this road a new street, & the only new street was the new footpath which formed no part of the old road, & as the houses on the north side did not abut on this new footpath, the owners of such houses could not be called upon to contribute to the expenses of paving same.—*WHITE v. 2065. — In absence of mala fides.—An apportionment by a vestry or district board of the expenses of paving a new street under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, is not invalid by reason of its being at a higher rate in the case of one piece of land abutting on the street than in the case of another. Such an apportionment, on the true construction of the sect., need not be made on any uniform principle, but is in the absolute discretion of the vestry or board, & can only be questioned on the ground of want of good faith.—*STOTESBURY v. 2066. —.]—In making, under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 77, an apportionment of the expenses, or estimated expenses, of paving a new street, the local authority is not bound to charge the owners of land bounding on such street ratably inter se, according to frontage or otherwise, & the apportionment cannot, in the absence of mala fides, be questioned.—METROPOLITAN DISTRICT RY. 2067. —[1] The expression "new street" in Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, is not limited by the definition of "new street" in Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), & includes a new street in the popular sense of the term. Therefore a district board can under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 105, pave & charge the expenses of so doing on the frontagers of a road which, although it was a turnpike road until 1865, & from that date until 1869 was bounded by open fields separated from the road by a hedge & ditch, yet after the latter date became a new street in the popular sense of the term by reason of the erection of a number of houses; & the district board are not prevented from enforcing the provisions of sect. 105 by reason of their having done temporary repairs to the footway of such road.

(2) The principle upon which the costs & expenses of paving a new street are apportioned by a district board amongst the frontagers cannot be questioned either before a magistrate or in any other ct.

(3) The words "comrs., trustees, or other authorities" in Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 112, do not include turnpike trustees, but authorities who have the general control of the pavements or highways in the parish or place within their district.—DAVIS v. Defts. issued a summons against pltf., under Metropolitan Management Acts, to recover his proportion of certain street improvement expenses alleged to be due from him as the owner of premises abutting on a street in the district of defts. Pltf. paid the money before the summons was heard, & the summons was withdrawn. Harbours for "filth" would mean that they were capable of becoming so, or were likely to become so. One cannot suppose that places of this sort are kept as receptacles for filth, or for depositing filth, but that they are places which might become filthy, or which might be used for filthy purposes (DAX, J.).—R. v. CLOETE, ETC., JJ. (1890), 64 L. T. 90; 55 J. P. 310, D. C.

A railway co. took land covered with houses, & pulled down the houses for the purpose of constructing their railway, & then sold the land as building ground to plff.:—Held: plff. had not lost the right to rebuild the houses on the same site as that occupied by the houses before they were pulled down; & for this purpose the yard of a house was held to be equivalent to a house. In determining the general line of buildings of a street the architect of the Metropolitan Board of Works ought to have regard to the frontage of houses previously existing, & which may be rebuilt, as well as to those still standing.—AUCKLAND (LORD) v. WESTMINSTER DISTRICT BOARD OF WORKS (1872), 7 Ch. App. 597; 41 L. J. Ch. 723; 26 L. T. 961; 20 W. R. 845, L. J.J.

projects beyond the general line of buildings in a street, without the sanction of the Board of Works, as required by the last mentioned Act.

By the express enactment of sect. 143, if the building be erected beyond the general line of the buildings of the street in which the same is situate, then, without the consent in writing of the Metropolitan Board of Works, it may be dealt with as the subsequent part of that sect. provides. Therefore, I cannot say that this Ct. has any power to grant an injunction against that being done which the law permits (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).—*ECCELESIASTICAL COMRS. v. 2089. Application to streets not highways.—A street in the metropolis had been newly laid out, & buildings completed along half of it, each building having a space of about five feet between the front line & the edge of the foot pavement. N. built stables on one plot on same side coming close to the foot pavement. The street had no gate at either end, & was already watered & sewered by the vestry. N. being summoned for building beyond the general line of street:—Held: Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 75, applied whether the street had become a highway in the legal sense of the term or not; & N. was liable to the penalty.—*POPPIAR BOARD OF WORKS v. 2092. — In 1890 the owner of land in the Metropolis adjoining a newly laid out street deposited with the vestry of the parish plans for the erection of a shop on the side of such street, & in the same year, in accordance with the plans, he constructed the footings for the external walls of two sides of the shop, one side being that adjoining the street, & upon the footings on that side he raised the external wall to a height of twelve feet above the level of the street; he then suspended his building operations. At that date there was no other building on either side of the street. In 1892 he built a row of houses on the same side of the street, but standing ten feet further back from the street than the shop above mentioned. Subsequently he leased the site of the shop to applt., who in Jan. 1893, without obtaining the consent of the London County Council, proceeded to erect the shop in accordance with the plans deposited by his lessor. In Mar. 1893, the superintending architect of the London County Council decided the general line of buildings on that side of the street to be the main fronts of the above mentioned row of houses. Applt. was thereupon summoned for having, contrary to Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 75, erected a building beyond the general line of buildings in the street without the consent in writing of the London County Council:—Held: the wall which had been built before the general building line came into existence was not, in fact, a building, structure, or erection within the Act, & the land was therefore at that time vacant land for the purposes of the Act; the acts of applt. after the building line came

County Council, erected upon the steps & landing a show case of wood & glass, the length of which was 7 feet 6 inches, the width 1 foot 10 inches, & the height above the street level 9 feet 3 inches. The show case stood upon resps.' property, & took the place of a shop front, which projected 6 feet 3 inches beyond the general line of buildings. The houses in the street in which resps.' premises were situated had bay windows in front of the general line of buildings, & the show case was slightly in front of the bays:—Held: the show case was not a "structure" within London Building Act, 1894 (c. cxxiii), s. 22, & resps., by erecting it without the consent of the Council, had not acted in contravention of that sect.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. HANCOCK & JAMES, [1907] 2 K. B. 45; 76 L. J. K. B. 526; 96 L. T. 618; 71 J. P. 268; 23 T. L. R. 417; 5 L. G. R. 572, D. C.

2100. Wall.—Applt. erected upon his land in a new street in the Metropolis a wall in advance of & at right angles to the general line of buildings without the consent in writing of the London County Council. The said wall extended 20 feet towards the centre of the roadway from the front of applt.'s house which was in the general line of buildings, & within 50 feet of the highway. The wall was 9 inches thick, & from 7 feet to 7 feet 8 inches high above the level of the pavement, & 14 inches thick & 8 feet deep below the said level:—Held: the wall was a "building, structure, or erection" within Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 75, & could not be erected within 50 feet of the highway, & in advance of the general line of buildings in the street, without the consent in writing of the London County Council.—*ELLIS v. 2102.—The question whether a wall is a "building, structure, or erection" within Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 75, depends upon the height of the wall & the purpose for which it is built. The forecourt of a house in a street in the Metropolis had for many years been bounded on the side nearest the street by a dwarf wall between 2 & 3 feet high. The owner of the premises pulled down the dwarf wall & built on its site a wall 11 feet high, which was intended to be used as a screen on which to exhibit advertisements, & also to serve as a boundary to the forecourt. The new wall was beyond the general line of buildings in the street, & was erected without the consent of the London County Council:—Held: (1) the dwarf wall was not a "building, structure, or erection" within above sect., & so long as it existed the site on which it stood was to be regarded as vacant land for the purposes of the sect., but the substituted wall was a "building, structure, or erection" within the sect., & the magistrate had jurisdiction to order its demolition; (2) the issuing of the certificate of the superintending architect of the general line of buildings was not a condition precedent to the taking out of the summons against the owner of the house; & as the order was made after the certificate had been issued, the order was valid.—*LAVY v. Sect. 1.—Metropolitan: Sub-sect. 7, C. & D.]

2108. —.]—Applts. caused to be placed over the main entrance of a building in O. Street a projection consisting of an open iron framework filled in with glass & illuminated by lamps inside. It was fixed by tailing into the building the two ends of the channel iron & of the iron rod, & for this purpose it had been necessary to cut into the wall of the building to the depth of about a foot, & there was also two stay rods bolted into the wall. The projection was in advance of the general line of buildings to the extent of 5 feet 6 inches, & no consent had been given by the London County Council to its erection. The magistrate found as a fact that the projection was a structure within sect. 22 (1) & also a projection within sect. 73 (8) of London Building Act, 1891 (c. ccxiii) & that the erection had become part of the structure of the building. He therefore convicted applts.:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings of the magistrate, & the conviction was right.—PEARS (A. & F.), LTD. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL (1911), 105 L. T. 525; 75 J. P. 461; 9 L. G. R. 831, D. C.

Conclusiveness of decision—As to general line of buildings.]—(1) In a proceeding before the magistrate, under Metropolitan Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 75, for erecting an "erection" beyond the general line of buildings in a street, the certificate of the superintending architect of the Metropolitan Board of Works as to what line is "the general line of buildings," does not preclude the magistrate from questioning & determining whether such line be the general true line of buildings in that street or not.

The vestry of the parish then made complaint before a magistrate, charging that applt. had erected a building beyond the general line of buildings, contrary to the conditions of consent of the board, & in contravention of above sect. The day before the hearing of the complaint, the superintending architect of the board certified that the "original line of buildings" was the "general line of buildings." 2114. ———. Power of local authority to change line by giving consent.—[In part of a London street there were old houses built before 1802. Between 1802 & 1894, with the consent of the Metropolitan Board of Works under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1892 (c. 102), s. 75, shops of one storey were built in front of the old houses & between them & the pavement line of the street. Upon an application by the owners of the shops in pursuance of London Building Act, 1894 (c. cxxiii), s. 22, the superintending architect certified that the frontage line of the old houses formed the general line of buildings in that part of the street. The tribunal of appeal varied that certificate by determining that the frontage line of the shops was the general line of buildings in that part of the street:—Held: without expressing any opinion upon the construction of London Building Act, 1894 (c. cxxiii), ss. 27, 216, the Metropolitan Board of Works had not altered the old general building line by consenting to the erection of the shops.—*FLEMING v. 2115. ———. —[E. Road was laid out in 1755 under an Act of Parliament which enacted that no buildings should be erected on new foundations in the road within 50 feet of the highway & that if so erected the buildings should be deemed to be common nuisances. This provision was repealed & re-enacted from time to time, but was ultimately repealed by Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1892 (c. 102), which enacted that no building should, without the consent in writing of the Metropolitan Board of Works, be erected beyond the general line of buildings, if the distance of that line from the highway did not exceed 50 feet, such line of buildings to be decided by the superintending architect. This provision was repealed & substantially re-enacted by London Building Act, 1894 (c. cxxiii), the London County Council being substituted for the Metropolitan Board of Works.

There existed at the present time in E. Road a row of buildings about 50 feet back from the highway & a second row of buildings of irregular size & shape erected on the forecourts of the main buildings with frontages to the inner edge of the pavement, & substantially all these buildings had been erected before 1802. In 1807 some of the frontagers presented a memorial to the Metropolitan Board of Works, praying that the inner edge of the pavement should be adopted as the general building line. The superintending architect reported that if the suggestion of the frontagers were found practicable the building line should be kept at least 11 feet from the kerb line of the road, & the Board passed a resolution recommending that the 11-foot building line as proposed by the architect should be adopted as the general building line. In 1909 the lessee of the owners of a building in this road was proceeding to re-erect it on the 11-foot line. The superintending architect being called in to define the general line of buildings certified that it was the old building line lying 50 feet back from the road, & his certificate was affirmed, as to the part of the road in question, by the tribunal of appeal:—Held: (1) the resolution of the Metropolitan Board of Works, so far as it purported to alter the general building line, was ultra vires & ought to be disregarded; (2) in defining the general line of buildings, such of the buildings in front of the old 50-foot line as had been erected either unlawfully or with the consent of the proper authority ought to be disregarded; (3) there was evidence to support the finding of the tribunal of appeal that the bulk of the buildings in the front row had been erected on new foundations; (4) the general line of buildings had been rightly defined by the superintending architect.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. A railway co. were empowered by their special Act to widen a branch of their railway passing through London, & to build additional stations. In conformity with the powers so given they proceeded to erect a station on their land by the side of a highway, within the distance required to be left between buildings & highways in London, by Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), which had passed shortly after the special Act of the co.:—Held: the powers conferred on the co. by their special Act were not controlled by the later statute, & the co. were authorised so to build their station.

or discovery of the offence. In 1864, several plots of land abutting on one side of a lane were sold for building purposes; the lane was an ancient carriage way, & had buildings at intervals on both sides erected before 1862; the lane varied in width from 41 feet to 28 feet, which was the width opposite the plots, & on the other side of the road was a permanent inclosure belonging to a church, & other buildings erected before 1862. In July, 1865, A. bought the plots, houses having been built on two of them, the front walls of the houses being 27 feet from the old wooden boundary fence of the lane. On Sept. 26, 1865, A. began to remove this fence, which had been left untouched, & to substitute a permanent wall & railing, & the work was completed on Oct. 14. On Oct. 6 the Board of Works were informed of what A. was doing, & in Mar. 1866, they laid an information against him to recover penalties for contravening the statute. At the hearing, the magistrate found that A., by taking down the old fence & erecting the permanent fence, did begin to form & lay out the road for building as a street on Sept. 26, & completed such forming on Oct. 14; that the road was not required by sect. 98 to be widened to 40 feet from the opposite fence, but only to the width of 20 feet from the centre of the roadway to the boundary fence of A.'s ground; & he convicted A. in certain penalties:—Held: the conviction was right.

It is . . . a question of fact for the magistrate to decide whether deft. has begun to lay out the street.—TAYLOR v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 213; 36 L. J. M. C. 53; 31 J. P. 581; 15 W. R. 765.

There was a side door leading from the shop into the vacant space. At the back of the shop he also erected a stable, the only access to which for carriages & horses was along the vacant space. This space, which was the property of the freeholder of the estate, was marked on the estate plan as a proposed street, but at the time of the erection of the shop & stable it had not been in fact laid out by the freeholder as a street; &, although resp. expected that it would be laid out as a street, there was no contract by the freeholder that it should be so laid out:—Held: as resp. had no control over the soil of the vacant space, he did not by erecting the shop & stable commence to form a street within the meaning of sect. 8 of the above Act.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. DIXON, [1899] 1 Q. B. 496; 68 L. J. Q. B. 526; 80 L. T. 232; 63 J. P. 390; 47 W. R. 521; 15 T. L. R. 206; 43 Sol. Jo. 279, D. C.

of the said piece of ground. An 18 inch sewer was laid along this road as far as the factory. A. submitted for the approval of the London County Council the plan of a proposed new street to run through the said tunnel (to be widened to 40 feet), over the line of the said rough road, & onwards right across the said piece of ground, & over the railway loop on the other side of the ground by a bridge, to be built, thus connecting two roads on the outer sides of the two loops. This plan was sanctioned by the Council on the conditions that the roadway of the new street should be clearly defined & thrown open as a highway within a certain time, & that no new building should be commenced to be erected "upon either side of such roadway or upon a site abutting on such roadway," unless the roadway should have been made up in a certain way, & other provisions complied with. A. agreed to lease a plot of his ground, which was fenced off, the nearest corner of which was 187 feet from the existing road, with a right of way over the intervening strip of about an acre in extent, & over the road through the tunnel, & also over the roadway of the new street, if it should afterwards be erected. A. also placed fresh clinkers from time to time on the road, & lengthened the sewer along the road to serve two new buildings which he commenced to erect on the plot he had agreed to lease. The road was not continued across A.'s ground, the tunnel was not widened, & the bridge was not built. A summons under sect. 200 (1) (a) of the above Act against A. for commencing to form & lay out a street not in accordance with the said conditions of the council was dismissed by the magistrate, who found that A. had commenced to form & lay out a part of the proposed new street, but that he had not commenced to erect new buildings "upon either side of such roadway or upon a site abutting on such roadway":—Held: (1) A. had not commenced to form & lay out the proposed new street; (2) A. had not commenced to erect new buildings "upon either side of such roadway or upon a site abutting on such roadway" within the second condition of the Council's sanction.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. On this plot he built a house 50 yards from the private road. To facilitate the entrance of building materials he took down a post & rail fence along the front of the plot, afterwards replacing it by a permanent oak fence pursuant to an undertaking by him in the conveyance of the plot, by which he had a right of way along the private road to his plot. The private road extended about 1,200 feet & afforded access to some four or five residences built shortly after the road was laid out. In 1904 it appeared from notices placed in the vicinity that land adjoining the private road was for sale & that resp. was erecting or would erect other residences:—Held: resp., by building his house & by erecting a permanent oak fence along the front of his plot, had not commenced to form & lay out a street within sect. 7, or to adapt a way for carriage traffic within sect. 10 of the above Act.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. By sect. 26 of Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (c. 122), "The following rules shall be observed as to projections . . . (2) In any street or alley of a greater width than 30 feet any shop front may project ten inches & no more. (5) Except in so far as is permitted by this sect. in the case of shop fronts, & with the exception of . . . window dressings, & other like architectural decorations, no projection from any building shall extend beyond the general line of fronts in any street, except with the permission of the Metropolitan Board of Works. . . ." Resp. built upon one side of a public street four houses or shops upon four plots of ground of which he was lessee, & erected against the fronts of them five stone pilasters, forming parts of shop fronts, the bases of which pilasters encroached upon the public footway to the extent of 6 inches in depth. Appls., having passed a resolution declaring the pilasters to be inconvenient & incommodious to passengers along the footway, served resp. with a notice to remove them, & upon his default took out a summons against him under sect. 72 of Metropolis Paving Act, 1817, for not removing them. The magistrate dismissed the summons:—Held: sect. 26 of Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (c. 122), did not amount to a repeal pro tanto of sect. 72 of the Paving Act; that it only authorised projections in cases where but for a statutory prohibition they would be lawful, & did not authorise projections which would interfere with the user by the public of a public foot-way; & the decision of the magistrate was wrong.—ST. MARY, ISLINGTON, VESTRY v. GOODMAN (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 154; 58 L. J. M. C. 122; 61 L. T. 44; 54 J. P. 52, D. C.

2180. Dangerous bridge over canal.]—By a private Act, which authorised applt. co. to construct a canal, the co. were required, where they cut through a highway, to make & maintain a bridge to carry the highway across the canal, & also to make & maintain bridges for the benefit of adjoining owners. It was further provided that the owners of lands through which the canal was constructed might, with the consent of the co., provide additional bridges at their own expense. In 1819 the co. cut through a public footpath, & erected a bridge to carry such footpath across the canal. This bridge was admitted by the co. to have been their property, & repairable by them. In 1858 a landowner, under an agreement with the co. which had been lost, substituted a larger bridge for the one constructed in 1819. There was no evidence of the contents of the lost agreement. The bridge became dangerous, & the London County Council served a dangerous structure notice on the co. under sect. 106 of London Building Act, 1894 (c. ccxiii), requiring them to take down or secure the bridge. The co. failed to comply with such notice, & the council thereupon applied to a magistrate under sect. 107 of the Act for an order requiring the co. as "owners" of the bridge to take it down or secure it. The magistrate held that the co. were the "owners" of the bridge & made the order asked for, but stated a case for the opinion of the High Ct.:—Held: the magistrate was right in holding that the co. were the "owners" of the bridge within sect. 5 of the Act.—*REGENT'S CANAL & DOCK CO. v. "Building structure or work"—Electric street boxes.]—Appls., being a local authority within Electric Lighting Acts, 1882 (c. 56), & 1888 (c. 12), had in pursuance of those Acts obtained a provisional order confirmed by a statute. Under that order they constructed boxes in the street in connection with the supply of electric light:—Held: such boxes were buildings, structures, or works within London Building Act, 1894 (c. ccxiii), s. 145, & notice under that sect. must be served on the district surveyor before the erection of such boxes.—WHITECHAPEL

Reps.' house was built at the corner of an old street & of a new street less than 50 feet wide; the front of the building & the main entrance were in the old street. The house was, without the written consent of the London County Council, built to a height greater than the width of the new street:—Held: although its main frontage was in the old street, the house was nevertheless “erected on the side of a new street” within sect. 85, & an offence had therefore been committed by resps. against that sect.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. LAURANCE & SONS, [1893] 2 Q. B. 228; 62 L. J. M. C. 176; 69 L. T. 344; 57 J. P. 617; 41 W. R. 688; 9 T. L. R. 521; 37 Sol. Jo. 583; 5 R. 494, D. C.

2185. House erected to prohibited height—Continuing offence—Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 107.]—Sect. 85 of the above Act prohibits the erection of a building on the side of a new street of a less width than 50 feet, which shall exceed in height the distance from the front of the building to the opposite side of the street, without the consent of the London County Council, & imposes penalties for offences against the Act, & in case of a continuing offence, a further penalty for every day during which such offence shall continue after notice from the County Council. By sect. 107, no person is liable to a penalty unless the complaint has been made within six months next after the commission or discovery of such offence. Resp. was owner of a building of a height prohibited by sect. 85. No proceedings were taken against him in respect of the erection of the building. More than six months after the completion of the building the London County Council served a notice, requiring him to comply with the law with respect to the building, subject to the penalties provided by the sect., & afterwards summoned him for penalties for each day after the date of the notice:—Held: the continuance at a prohibited height, after notice, of a building already erected was a continuing offence within the Act, & complaint having been made within six months next after the commission or discovery of the offence, resp. was liable.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. 2186. Unfinished road on private property.]—

An unfinished road, in a parish mentioned in Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), Sched. (A), containing inhabited houses along part of it, communicated, at one end only, with another road containing houses placed singly at long intervals. The soil of such unfinished road was private property; & the road itself had not been dedicated to the public. The vestry of the parish refused to light the road under sect. 130 [of the Act]. On a motion for mandamus to compel them to do so, the ct. discharged the rule, on the ground that the vestry were not bound to treat the road as a street under sects. 130, 250.—R. v. ST. MARY, ISLINGTON, VESTRY (1858), E. B. & E. 743; 22 J. P. Jo. 383; 120 E. R. 687.

2187. Accident owing to insufficient lighting—Liability of council for negligence.]—A vestry having the charge of the lighting of a parish turned out some of the lights before daylight. A jury found that an accident occurred owing to the lights being out. The county ct. judge found that the vestry had lawfully exercised their discretion to turn out the lights under the latter part of sect. 30 of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), & were not liable for non-feasance. On appeal it was submitted that they were liable for misfeasance in turning out some of the lights that had already been lighted:—Held: the county ct. judge was right.—*YOUNG v. ST. 2188. ——— Unlighted street refuge.]—Pltf., a taxicab driver, was driving his cab at night along a street which was under the control of defts., a borough council, & the cab collided with a refuge & was damaged. The refuge was generally lighted by a lamp controlled by a lighting co., but in an action by pltf. against defts. for negligence the judge found that though at the time of the accident the light was out there was nothing to show how it came to be extinguished, & that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of defts. or of the lighting co.:—Held: on the facts there was evidence to justify the judge's finding.—BROWN v. LAMBETH BOROUGH COUNCIL (1915), 32 T. L. R. 61, D. C.

Scmble: the casualties & accidents, for the prevention of which the authority was given, are such as affect the public, not such as operate as a nuisance to a private individual, & for which the law has provided the party with a remedy.—PULLER v. TAYLOR (1837), 6 L. J. C. P. 275.

Held: such an exercise of the board's powers would be an interference with the "rights & privileges vested in pltf. in reference to a market" within the exception contained in Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 91, & an injunction was granted restraining the proposed action of the board.—*HORNER v. 2195. What is a hoarding—Not ladder erected against house.—A surveyor appointed under Metropolitan Paving Act, 1817 (c. xxix), has no right, under sect. 75 of the Act, to remove a ladder placed against a house for the purpose of white-washing it, for that sect. applies only to the erection of hoards or scaffoldings, or to the placing of posts, bars, rails, or boards, by which an inclosure is made.—DAVEY v. WARNE (1845), 14 M. & W. 199; 15 L. J. Ex. 253; 5 L. T. O. S. 242; 10 J. P. 107; 153 E. R. 448.

person who is about to build or pull down any house, wall, etc., to erect a hoard or fence, which licence is to state the name of the street in which, & the purpose for which, it is to be made & the time for which it is to be permitted to continue; & for every such licence a fee is to be paid to them according to a scale to be prepared by them, to be regulated with reference to the space of ground to be enclosed, & the length of time for which it is to continue, not in any case exceeding £10.

A., having contracted to erect a large building which would take two years in its erection, applied to the comrs. for a licence to erect a hoarding to enclose the space, which hoarding would run into four streets. The comrs. refused to grant a licence, except upon the terms that there should be a distinct licence for the hoarding in each of the four streets, that it should continue for two months, that a fee of £10 should be paid for each licence, & that no placards or other materials for advertising should be placed against the said hoard:—Held: (1) the comrs. ought not to have required four licences for the hoarding, but only one licence; (2) they ought not to have limited the duration of the licence to two months, but should have granted the licence for such a length of time as would be reasonably requisite for the erection of the building; (3) they had no right to impose the condition that no placards, etc., should be placed against the said hoard.—R. v. LONDON SEWERS COMRS., Ex p. BRASS (1870), 22 L. T. 582.

See Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), ss. 101, 102.

Applt. was the owner of a house which in front of it had an area & cellars. The cellars were formed of brick walls, one of which was the outer wall of the area, & the other ran parallel with such outer wall at a distance of 11 feet 9 inches. There were also two thin partition walls at right angles to these brick walls, separating the cellars of each house. Extending from the outer wall of the area to the wall which ran parallel with it were large flagstones, the ends of which rested on the walls in question; they formed a covering to the cellars, which without them would have been open at the top. The outer or upper surface of these flagstones had been used by the public as a footway from the time they had been laid down, & had been worn out by the traffic over them:—Held: the cellar in front of applt.'s house was not a cellar within the meaning of sect. 102, which applied to cellars which were a complete construction in themselves, arched over & with roofs independent of the pavement; & the vestry of the parish were bound to repair the flagstones as part of the pavement.—*HAMILTON v. The first pavement was, in pursuance of the original order, laid down on Tuesday morning, & approved of by the borough surveyor (the control of the pavement being vested in the town council), but it required to lie two days to consolidate. On Wednesday morning W. took it up, & substituted blue brick:—Held: W. having obtained authority to replace the first pavement before it was laid down, the justices properly refused to convict W. of the offence of wilfully taking up pavement within above sect.—*TILL v. #### SUB-SECT. 2.—WIDENING AND IMPROVEMENT.

See Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 154; Public Health Act, 1925 (c. 71), ss. 33–35.

2206. Purchase for widening & improvement.—Power to sell or exchange portion of existing highway.]—Before a high road, which is not a street within Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 34), & Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), can be obliterated & dealt with as no longer a highway, it is necessary to obtain a decision & order of a ct. of quarter sessions to that effect. The highway comrs. for B. diverted, altered, & widened a high road named P. lane, but did not obtain a decision & order of quarter sessions obliterating & altering the status of the old road condemned by them. This high road was not a street with continuous rows of houses on either side, but was in a suburb of a town with detached mansions at irregular intervals, & on one side there ran a garden wall. The comrs. gave in exchange to P., deft., a considerable portion of the old road, & allowed him to advance & erect his garden wall over it, so that for some distance it bordered upon & touched one side of the new road. C., prosecutor, complained that this wall lessened the value of his property by damaging his frontage, & alleged that the comrs. were not legally authorised to sell or exchange to deft. the portion of the old road, & the latter was not entitled to build the wall, but was infringing the rights of the public. C. not succeeding in his complaint indicted P. for unlawfully & injuriously obstructing the highway. A formal verdict of guilty against P. was entered for the Crown, & the question of law involved was reserved for the consideration of the full ct.:—Held: the verdict was right, & as the locus in quo was not a street within the meaning of the Acts of 1847 & 1875, the comrs. not having applied to the ct. of quarter sessions for an order obliterating the highway were not empowered to exchange or sell to deft. such portion of the highway, & deft. was not legally authorised to erect the wall in question.—R. v. PLATTS (1880), 49 L. J. Q. B. 848; 43 L. T. 159; 44 J. P. 765; 28 W. R. 915, D. C.

2207. Discretion of local authority.—Method of paving road.]—The ct. refused to order a writ of certiorari to issue to bring up & quash certain resolutions of the corpn. of B. for the payment of two sums of money for paving a road with tarmac, the corpn. having bond fide arrived at the conclusion that the work would improve the highway for use by the inhabitants of, & visitors to, the borough, although the occasion of the work was to enable the Automobile Club to hold their meeting for motor car speed trials at B.—*R. v. 2208. Paving under Town Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 34), s. 53.—“Theretofore” made good.]—The word “theretofore” in above sect. is to be construed in its ordinary grammatical sense, & refers to streets which have at any time been well & sufficiently paved & flagged, or otherwise made good to the satisfaction of the comrs., & not to the state of such streets at the time of the passing of the special Act, incorporated with the general Act. Therefore, where a street, which was a public highway, had once been put in good repair, but which, at the time of the passing of the special Act, was out of repair:—Held: the comrs. had no power, under sect. 53 of the general Act, to do the necessary repairs, & charge the expenses on the adjoining occupiers.—*GREAT WESTERN RY. The property owners to be assessed brought action to compel the corpn. to carry on the work in accordance with the bye-law:—Held: the corpn. having passed a bye-law for the construction of a certain class of road, they were contravening the provisions of that bye-law by constructing a different kind of road, & the property owners to be assessed had a right to object.—*ARBUTHNOT v. in their capacity as the corpn. of P., bought some land of resps. abutting upon a country high road within the district to which the local Act applied, & in pursuance of an agreement then made with resps., at their own expense widened & improved the road & laid out a footpath along the side, & gravelled, channelled, & kerbed the footpath. In 1879 appts., in their capacity as the urban authority, paved & flagged the footpath & sought to recover the expense of so doing from resps. as adjoining owners under the powers of sect. 53. The jury found that before the paving & flagging in 1879 the road was not a street in the popular sense of the term, & that the footpath had been "made good" within sect. 53:—Held: resps. were not liable, upon the ground that the footpath had been "theretofore made good" within sect. 53, but without deciding whether the road was a "street" within that sect.

See Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 150, 276; Public Health Act, 1925 (c. 71).

2211. Order of Local Government Board.—Whether road or street—How far conclusive.—Applt. owned premises fronting upon a road, 900 feet long, which had several houses in it on the south side but none on the north. By an order of the Local Government Board, Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, was declared to be in force in the district in which the road was situated, & the road was declared to be a "street." The road was a public highway, but there was no evidence of its formal dedication. There was some evidence of its user prior to 1835, but none inconsistent with its having been a mere occupation road or a footpath. Applt. was summoned for non-payment of expenses incurred by the rural authority in sewerage, levelling, & paving the road. The justices decided that the order of the Local Government Board declaring the road to be a street was conclusive, although in their opinion it was not a street according to the common use & simple ordinary meaning of the word; they also decided that it was a street by virtue of the definition in sect. 4 of the Act of 1875, & subject to a case stated for the opinion of the ct., held applt. liable to pay the amounts claimed:—Held: the order of the Local Government Board was not conclusive with reference to the application of sect. 150 to the road in question; but the road was within the definition "street" in sect. 4, & was, therefore, a street within sect. 150.—*FENWICK v. The urban authority, finding the condition of the footpath unsatisfactory, gave notice to R. & other adjoining owners to level & pave this new street:—Held: the justices were right in holding that such strip, irrespective of the old highway, together with the houses adjoining were a new street within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, & so R. was liable for the expense of paving, etc.—*RICHARDS v. old footpath & strips of land alongside which had been recently added to widen it. The old footpath was repairable by the inhabitants at large. The justices found that the road was in part an ancient footpath or highway, but that it had been altered, widened, & added to, & houses having been built abutting thereon it was a street within sects. 4 & 150; that the frontagers were liable to contribute to the expenses of improving it; & an order was accordingly made for the payment by the frontagers of such expenses:—Held: having regard to the terms of sect. 150, the frontagers were chargeable with the expenses of improving the whole street & not merely such part of it as had been added to the ancient highway, & the order was valid.—*EVANS v. 2219. — Widened road to be repairable by inhabitants at large—Good consideration.—By an agreement between a local authority & a landowner, in order to settle disputes as to the user of a road, which was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, & which was bounded on each side by the land belonging to the landowner, it was agreed that as soon as any portion of the land abutting on the road should be laid out for building the landowner would add a piece of land to the road so as to increase its width. Accordingly as & when any part of the land on both sides of the road was laid out for building a piece of land on each side of the road was added to the road, but the widened road had never been adopted by any resolution of the local authority. The local authority paved the road & apportioned the expenses of so doing on the frontagers under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150:—Held: the additions to the old road were made as part of a bargain for good consideration with the local authority, & they must be taken to be accretions to the old road, so that the whole was subject to the same incidents of repair; & the frontagers were therefore not liable to pay the apportioned expenses.—*PORTSMOUTH CORPN. v. ### (c) Preparation of Plans and Estimates.

See Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150.

2220. Whether deposit of plans & estimate a condition precedent—Local Government Amendment Act, 1861 (c. 61), s. 16.—A local board of health gave notice, under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 69, to the owners of premises fronting two streets to level, pave, etc., & the owners having made default, the board did the work themselves. An apportionment was made by the surveyor of the board, & a notice was served on applt., an owner of premises in one of the streets, that his proportion was £20 2s. Applt. did not pay, & a complaint against applt. was heard before justices, when it was objected by applt. that the apportionment was bad, on the ground that the expenses of the two streets had been lumped together, & the aggregate amount divided amongst the owners in the two streets; & the justices dismissed the complaint on that ground. The surveyor then made a fresh apportionment, & a notice was served on applt. that his proportion was £19 11s. He gave notice that he disputed the apportionment, & a summons was taken out before two justices to settle the apportionment under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 64. It was objected before the justices that the surveyor, having made one apportionment, could not make another apportionment; that plans had not been deposited at the office of the board before giving the notice to do the work, as required by Local Government Amendment Act, 1861 (c. 61), s. 16, but only at the office of the surveyor; that the works required by the notice differed from the works shown on the plans, & that the works done by the board differed from both. These objections the justices overruled; they also refused to go into the question whether the money had been in point of fact expended; & after calculation they made an order that the proportion payable by applt. was £19 11s., & they went on to adjudge that applt. do pay the same, & that in default of payment a distress warrant should issue. On a case under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43):—Held: (1) the first apportionment was a nullity, & the surveyor, therefore, was not functus officio, & was right in making a fresh apportionment; (2) the deposit of plans was not a condition precedent to the validity of all subsequent proceedings; (3) whether the justices were acting as arbitrators as to the apportionment, or as justices to enforce the payment, they had no jurisdiction to inquire into the question whether the amount alleged had been actually expended; & if applt. was aggrieved by the alleged overcharge, or by the alleged variances, his remedy was by memorial to the Secretary of State, under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 120, & 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 65.

(4) Seem: the justices, when acting as arbitrators under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 64, had no jurisdiction to order payment, etc.—COOK v. IPSWICH LOCAL BOARD (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 451; 40 L. J. M. C. 169; 24 L. T. 579; 35 J. P. 565; 19 W. R. 1079.

In order to obtain access from the property to the street in question, it was necessary either to get into the street by means of a public footpath which communicated with the street, or to go to the end of the wall, & so gain access to it:—Held: the property in question did not front, adjoin, or abut on the street within above sect.—LIGHTBOUND v. but had no beneficial interest in them. The premises consisted of two floors, of which the upper floor was used as a chapel, & exclusively appropriated to public religious worship, but the lower was used for the purposes of a Sunday school & for a young people's institute in connection with the chapel, & for lectures, concerts, a bazaar, & similar entertainments in connection therewith. On the refusal of the trustees to pay the sum claimed, the local board preferred a complaint against them, upon which the justices made an order for the payment of the sum:—Held: as the trustees were "owners" of the premises at the time when the works were completed, they were liable for the amount claimed, & were not exempted from liability by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 151, as they were not the "incumbent or minister" of the chapel, & the whole of the premises was not appropriated to religious purposes.—*HORNSEY LOCAL BOARD v. The school, etc., was built & used according to the trust, no rent whatever being received by the trustees. The local board gave the proper notices, for paving the street along which the school etc., fronted, to applt. & the owners of other premises fronting the street, under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 69; & they charged applt., as "owner" of the school, the proportion according to the frontage of the school:—Held: applt. was "owner" within sect. 2, which enacts that "owner" "shall mean the person for the time being receiving the rack rent of the lands or premises, whether on his own account or as agent or trustee for any other person, or who would so receive the same if such lands or premises were let at a rack rent:" & applt. was liable to pay the proportion of the expenses.—*BOWDITCH v. The local authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, made up a street on part of which the school premises abutted & served the trustees with notice under that Act to pay the apportioned expenses:—Held: (1) the trustees were liable for those expenses as "owners" within the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), & the expenses were, until recovery thereof, a "charge" upon the premises

2242. — Service on several frontagers—Default by one—No necessity for further notice.]—Applt. & five others were the owners of premises within the district of resps., an urban authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55). These premises abutted upon a street (not being a highway), which street was not sewered, levelled, paved, flagged, & channelled to the satisfaction of resps. Resps. gave a separate notice to each of such owners requiring them to sewer, level, pave, flag, & channel the parts of the street in front of their premises, within a specified time. Five of the owners executed the works in front of their premises, but applt. made default. Resps. thereupon executed the works required to be done in front of her premises, & their surveyor having made his apportionment, gave her a notice stating that the expenses had been apportioned by their surveyor, who had settled that £213 13s. 6d. was payable by her according to the frontage of her premises, & that they required payment of that sum:—Held: (1) Resps. were not bound before executing such works to give applt. a fresh notice specifying the particular works which remained to be done by her; (2) applt. not having given notice to dispute the apportionment, it became binding on her within the three months limited by sect. 257 of the Act, & that summary proceedings might be taken under that sect. for the recovery of the amount due from her; (3) in such summary proceedings it was no objection to the validity of a summons that it was issued more than a year after the complaint upon which it was founded; (1) the notice of apportionment, which concluded with a demand of payment of the amount apportioned, was not a "notice of demand" within sect. 257, & the six months within which, under sect. 252, summary proceedings must be taken, were not to be reckoned from it but from a subsequent notice of demand.—SIMCOX v. HANDSWORTH LOCAL BOARD (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 39; 51 L. J. Q. B. 168; 46 J. P. 260; 30 W. R. 273, D. C.

pltfs. a receipt for a payment in respect of the same expenses:—Held: (1) pltfs. were not entitled, inasmuch as the service of the notice under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 69, was a condition precedent to liability on the part of defts. in respect of the expenses; (2) the payment by B. could not operate as a waiver of the omission to give the notice.—*FARNWORTH LOCAL BOARD v. 2246. What amounts to good service on owner—Receiver of rack rent.]—Certain premises requiring to be sewered, etc., resps. inquired of the occupier who the landlord was, & who received the rent of the premises; the occupier said, as the fact was, that it was F. Due notice to F., on May 15, 1861, was accordingly given to sewer, etc.; he neglected to sewer, & the local board completed it on Mar. 13, 1862. F. received the rent up to Feb. 2, 1862. It afterwards appeared that applt. was the real owner on & subsequent to Oct. 31, 1860, but had never really interfered with either M., the land rent, or occupier. The expenses of resps. were £115:—Held: as F. received, for the time being, the rack rent of the premises, & was bond fide treated by the occupier as his landlord, the service of the notice to sewer, etc., by resps. on F. was a sufficient service on the "owner" within Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), & 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, & applt. was liable for the expenses incurred by resps.—PREK v. WATERLOO BOARD OF HEALTH (1863), 2 H. & C. 709; 3 New Rep. 131; 33 L. J. M. C. 11; 9 L. T. 338; 27 J. P. 807; 9 Jur. N. S. 1344; 12 W. R. 252; 159 E. R. 293.

2247. — Previous owner.]—In Jan. 1883, a local board passed a resolution for the paving & sewerage of a certain street, & on May 11, 1883, notice was served on P. & Co. requiring them to pave & sewer the street. P. & Co. had been the owners of the land abutting on the street, but, by a conveyance of Apr. 27, 1883, had conveyed their estate to resp.; the local board, however, had no notice of this conveyance. In an action by the local board to recover the paving expenses from the resp.:—Held: P. & Co. were not at the time of the services of the notice either "owners or occupiers" of the premises, & as the proper steps prescribed by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, had not been taken, resp. was not liable.—*WALLSEND LOCAL BOARD v. which the local authority resolved should be made up. The local authority prepared the usual notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, requiring the street to be sewerred, levelled, paved, etc., addressed it to "the owner," & affixed it in a conspicuous place on the strip of land pursuant to sect. 267 of the Act. The owner did not do the work. The local authority thereupon did the work & apportioned the expenses on the owner. The owner did not pay. In proceedings to recover the amount before the justices, they found that the owner & his place of residence were known to the surveyor & the assistant surveyor of the local authority, but not to the clerk who drew & posted the notice, & that the notice did not come to the knowledge of the owner. The justices held that the notice was not properly served, & dismissed the complaint:—Held: the justices were wrong, & the notice was properly served under sect. 267.—SHARPLEY v. BEAR (1903), 67 J. P. 442, D. C.

2250. ———.]—Two strips of deft.'s land, of about 41 feet frontage, abutted on a private street, being separated from each other by a strip of land of about 20 feet frontage, belonging to another frontager, which had been reserved on the original sale of deft.'s land as an approach to a cemetery. Pltfs., in proceedings under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), relating to the said street, purported to serve on deft. a copy of the resolution approving a provisional apportionment, etc., by placing the copy on a post 4 inches thick planted partly (2 inches) on the intervening strip & partly (2 inches) on one of deft.'s strips of land. In an action brought by pltfs. to enforce a charge on deft.'s land, a county ct. judge found that the notice was not posted on a "conspicuous" part of deft.'s land within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 267, & he therefore gave judgment for deft. On appeal:—Held: the county ct. judge had only decided a question of fact, & the ct. would not interfere with his decision.—WEST HAM CORPN. v. THOMAS (1908), 73 J. P. 65; 6 L. G. R. 1043, D. C.

2251. Works to be executed—Reference to deposited plans.—(1) A notice [under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 69] informing the owners that the street was not "sewerred, levelled, paved, flagged, & channelled, metalled, & made good to the satisfaction of the board," & requiring the parties within one month to sewer, level, etc., the same, & intimating that in default the works would be executed by the board:—Held: sufficient, without going on to specify the breadth, level, or any other particulars,—the notice containing a note at the foot,—"Particulars of the necessary works may be obtained from the borough surveyor, Office, No. 3 Town Hall," where plans & specifications were lodged.

(2) The power of the arbitrator under sect. 123 of the Act, is limited to an inquiry into the apportionment of the expenses amongst the several owners of property liable to contribute; & he is not entitled to inquire whether the gross amount of the expenditure was reasonable or necessary.

The local board, on Apr. 8, 1861, gave notice to the owners of certain property under sect. 69, & on default being made, executed the works themselves, & by their surveyor apportioned the expenses amongst the several owners, & on Mar. 11, 1862, demanded payment. The landowners on June 10, gave notice to the board that they disputed the proportion settled by the surveyor to be due from them in respect of the works executed by the board, "on the ground that the cost of the said works was excessive & unfair." The board, treating this notice as a nullity, issued summonses against the owners, which summonses were on Oct. 11, dismissed. On Oct. 14, the landowners gave notice to the board that they abandoned their notice of June 10, & that they did not dispute the proportions of the expenses incurred by the board. Notwithstanding this, the board afterwards, on Oct. 18, gave notice of arbn., & appointed an arbitrator, who on Dec. 31, made his award, slightly reducing the demand:—Held: there being no longer any matter in dispute, the appointment of the arbitrator was void, & his award consequently incapable of being enforced.—*BAXLEY v. 2252. ———.]—A notice by a local authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, to the frontagers of a new street, not repairable by the inhabitants at large, requiring them to metal & make good the same, should substantially follow Form G. in Sched. IV. to the Act, & must specifically refer to the deposited plans & sections of the work required to be done & state that such plans & sections are open to their inspection at the office of the local authority.

A notice which merely refers in general terms to the provisions of above sect. is insufficient & bad.

Frontagers when served by a local authority with a notice under above sect., referring in general terms to the sect. & requiring them to metal & make good a new street, did nothing. The local authority then executed the required works, & the expenses incurred by them in so doing were apportioned by their surveyor amongst the frontagers in proportion to their respective frontages. The frontagers when served with notice of the apportionment did not dispute it & did not pay the amount of the proportion alleged to be due from them. In proceedings by the local authority under sect. 257 of the Act to enforce payment of the alleged proportion:—Held: the frontagers were entitled at the hearing to object that the notice under sect. 150 was insufficient & bad.—*STOURBRIDGE URBAN COUNCIL v. R. 183.

2253. Time for execution.—Where a statute provides that an authority may serve a notice requiring work to be done within a time therein specified, the notice must specify a time within which the work can reasonably be completed, having regard to the nature of the work & all the circumstances. The least time that can be fairly & reasonably allotted for the completion of the work, being ascertained, is the least time to be inserted in the notice; there is a discretion to allow further time for the completion of the work, but not to fix any shorter time.

A local authority served a notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, on frontagers requiring them to execute certain works "within one calendar month from the date of the service hereof" without having exercised any discretion whatever in considering what was a reasonable time to allow for the execution of the works. The frontagers did not commence the works nor object to the validity of the notice, & after three months the local authority, without the consent of the frontagers, began the works & completed them within four months, & served on the frontagers the usual demand for payment. The frontagers thereupon presented a memorial to the Local Government Board under sect. 268 of the Act appealing against the apportionment on the ground (inter alia) that the notice requiring them to execute the works within one month was unreasonable & bad, having regard to the fact that the local authority were unable to do the work themselves under four months. The board held an inquiry & eventually intimated that they were prepared to make an order confirming the apportionment. Thereupon the frontagers withdrew their memorial with the approval of the Board. In an action by the local authority to recover payment from the frontagers of the expenses incurred in doing the works:—Held: (1) the notice was bad in not specifying a reasonable time for the execution of the works, & the local authority could not recover the expenses from the frontagers; (2) the frontagers, in standing by & doing nothing, had not waived their rights under sect. 150, nor estopped themselves from objecting that the notice was bad; (3) the frontagers were not estopped by their proceedings before the Local Government Board under sect. 268 of the Act from raising the point as to the validity of the notice, inasmuch as, although the Board had intimated that they proposed to decide it against them, no order had in fact been made & the appeal had been withdrawn with the sanction of the Board. — BRISTOL CORPN. v. SINNOTT, [1918] 1 Ch. 62; 87 L. J. Ch. 30; 117 L. T. 644; 82 J. P. 9; 62 Sol. Jo. 53; 15 L. G. R. 871, C. A.

2254. — Reasonable time.—In July, 1912, a corp. gave notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, to defts. as frontagers in two streets in the borough requiring them to make up those parts of these streets on which their premises abutted within three calendar months. The notices were not complied with, & the corp. did the work. Defts. having failed to pay their proportion of the cost of making up the roads, the corp. now claimed a declaration that defts. respective premises were charged under sect. 257 of the Act with the amounts. Defts. contended that the notices were invalid, because the period of three calendar months had not been affixed after consideration by the corp., & the time specified was not reasonably sufficient. The evidence was that at a meeting of the highway committee to the borough council on Apr. 25, 1921, it was resolved that the town clerk be instructed to serve notice under sect. 150 on the respective frontagers in the two streets. The resolution was approved & confirmed by the borough council on May 1, 1912. No time within which the work was to be executed having been determined by these resolutions, the town clerk sent the borough surveyor the notices with the time left blank. The borough surveyor then consulted the highway committee, who, after an informal discussion, decided on three calendar months as a reasonably sufficient time.

The notices were then issued with this time specified, without any reference of the matter to the council. Evidence was also adduced on the question whether the time allowed was reasonably sufficient:—Held: (1) as the effect of the resolution of May 1 was that the corp. sanctioned the issue of notices mentioning a reasonable time, there was no objection to the corp. leaving it to a competent person to fix that time; (2) if a reasonably sufficient time was named in the notices directed to be issued, the manner in which the specification of that time was determined was immaterial; (3) in considering whether the period allowed was reasonable, regard should be had to the work to be done by the particular frontagers & not to the whole work to be done in the road, but that on either view the time allowed was reasonably sufficient.—MACCLESFIELD CORPN. v. MACCLESFIELD GRAMMAR SCHOOL, [1921] 2 Ch. 189; 90 L. J. Ch. 477; 126 L. T. 15; 65 Sol. Jo. 663.

2255. Validity of notice—Partly good & partly bad.—A notice given to the owner of premises under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 69, containing directions, some of which are ultra vires, will be good, & may be enforced in respect of such directions as are legal.

A local board acting under above sect. gave resp. notice to sewer, level, pave, flag, & channel certain premises, including the gardens in front of the houses:—Held: although that part of the notice applicable to the gardens was invalid, the rest was lawful, & the notice could be enforced pro tanto.—HALL v. POTTER (1869), 39 L. J. M. C. 1; 21 L. T. 454; 34 J. P. 515.

2256. ——An urban sanitary authority, acting under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, served deft. & other frontagers of a new street with notices requiring them to execute certain works, including a particular work which could not legally be included in such notices. The notices not being complied with, the urban authority did the works, & apportioned the expenses incurred by them in so doing on the frontagers. A summons to recover from deft. the sum of £650, the amount charged to him under the apportionment, having been dismissed by the magistrates, the urban authority made a second apportionment, deducting the expense of the work which had been wrongly included, the amount charged to deft. therein being £579. They then brought an action under sect. 257 of the Act, to establish a charge on deft.'s premises for £579, or, in the alternative, for £650:—Held: the urban authority had power to make a second apportionment; & notwithstanding the dismissal of the summons, they were entitled to a charge on the premises for £579.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. HAMPSON (1880), 35 W. R. 331; 3 T. L. R. 466, D. C.; on appeal (1887), 35 W. R. 591, C. A.

2258. Notice binding on authority—Notice declaring expenses to be private improvement expenses.—A notice by a local board of health requiring an owner to execute certain repairs, & that in default of such execution by the owner the board will proceed itself to execute such repairs, & that the expenses thereby incurred as private improvement expenses binds the board on such default by the owner to treat the expenses as private improvement expenses, & precludes them from recovering such expenses by summary process.

The local board of B. served in Mar. 1875, a notice upon H. requiring him to execute certain repairs upon his property in B., & stating that in default of his executing the works the local board would do the repairs themselves & charge the owner with the expenses of such repairs. H. took no steps to comply with the notice, & died in Aug. 1875; appts. were the exors. The local board proceeded to execute the works mentioned in the notice. In Feb. 1876 the local board served another notice on appts. requiring them to execute further & other repairs, & that in default of their executing them, the local board would proceed to execute & charge appts. with the expenses of the works as private improvement expenses. Appts. took no steps to comply with this notice, & the local board proceeded to do the necessary repairs. The proportion of the amount for the two sets of repairs payable by appts. was settled, & sought to be recovered summarily before the justices, who decided in favour of resps. Appts. objected that resps. must be taken to have executed the works on the footing of charging them as private improvement expenses, & could not therefore summarily recover the amount for such works. The justices overruled this objection:—Held: as the local board had elected in their notice to appts. to treat the expenses incurred in the execution of the works as private improvement expenses, they were bound by their election, & could not recover the amount for such works by summary proceedings before the justices, whose decision was wrong & must be reversed.—*GOULD v. #### 2262. Paving—Discretion of local authority.]

(1) In order that a local authority may declare a street, not repairable by the inhabitants at large of their district, to be a highway so that it may become repairable by such inhabitants, it is necessary that each of the works specified in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 152, shall, at the time of declaration, have been executed upon the street to the satisfaction of such authority.

(2) Local authorities have not, under the sect., any discretion as to which of the works mentioned in the sect. they will require to be executed. Their discretion is limited to their being satisfied with the efficiency of each description of work when done.

(3) Semble: kerbing a road does not answer the requirement in the sect. that the road must be flagged, “flagged” meaning paved with flagged stones; (4) wooden paving does not come within any of the requirements of the sect.—A.-G. v. BIDDER (1881), 47 J. P. 263.

(i) Sewering.

Sewers generally, see SEWERS & DRAINS.

2263. Acceptance of previous sewer by local authority—Inferred after reasonable time—Sewer laid by building owners.]—A street having been laid out by the owners of a building estate, a sewer was made by them for the drainage of the houses in the street. Subsequently, in the year 1868, a local board was formed whose district included such street. The sewer, which discharged into the Thames, was sufficient for the purposes of the drainage of the street, assuming that draining into the Thames could be continued. In 1884 the local board, having received notice from the Thames Conservators to discontinue the discharge of sewage into the Thames, gave notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, to the frontagers in the street to make a new sewer, & on their default themselves constructed such sewer & sought to charge the expenses upon the frontagers:—Held: (1) the original sewer was not a sewer made by the owners for their own profit & therefore had vested in the board under the Act; (2) the board, not having taken any steps to compel the frontagers to sewer the street within a reasonable time after the sewer became vested in them, must be taken to have been satisfied with the sewer, & could not afterwards proceed against the frontagers under sect. 150, but were bound themselves to keep the sewer in repair under sect. 15 of the Act, & if it became necessary, to enlarge or alter it under sect. 18; & consequently the expenses of constructing the new sewer were chargeable not on the frontagers but on the general district rate.—*BONFILLA v. 2264. ————.]—The owners of a building estate, who were the predecessors in title of deft., deposited plans, which were approved by the local authority, showing a road running down the slope of a hill & crossing the New River at the foot, with a sewer running the whole length of the road & crossing the New River to join another sewer on the farther side. An agreement was made by the New River Co. with the estate owners to divert the New River so as to enable the sewer to be laid across the old bed of the stream. In 1885 the sewer was made as far as the New River where it stopped, the river not having then been diverted; it had no outfall, & was never, in fact, used as a sewer; but the work was from time to time inspected by a servant of the local authority, who authorised the covering in of the various sections, & made reports to the local authority, who never expressed dissatisfaction with the work. Nothing more was done to the sewer which became out of repair & ruinous; & in 1890 the local authority gave to the frontagers in the road notice, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, to sewer the road down to the New River; on their default the local authority themselves constructed a new sewer, which they carried across the bed of the New River & connected with the sewer on the other side, the diversion of the river having been completed during the execution of the works by the local authority. The local authority having sought to charge the frontagers with the expenses of making the new sewer, the question of the amount to be paid by deft. was referred to arbn., & in an action on the award, the jury found that the local authority had accepted the old sewer as a satisfactory sewer:—Held: (1) the local authority had power to accept the original sewer, although it had no outfall, & was at the time of acceptance incapable of being used as a sewer; (2) the road having once been sewered to the satisfaction of the local authority, the expenses of constructing the new sewer were not chargeable on the frontagers.—HORNSEY LOCAL BOARD v. 2265. ————.]—A road having been made by the owners of a building estate about 1859, a 12-inch pipe was laid by them along it from end to end. Houses were built from time to time in the neighbourhood of the road, & some of their owners connected their drains with the 12-inch pipe; but certain of the houses which were first built had a separate system of drainage into cesspools in a wood at the back of their premises. Drainage into the 12-inch pipe commenced at least as early as 1876. The 12-inch pipe discharged into a culvert, & thence into a river. Pltfs.' predecessors, the W. Local Board of Health, were constituted in 1878, & could in that year have put into operation Public Health Act, 1875

(c. 55), s. 150. There was evidence that in 1882 their surveyor knew of at least one connection of drains with this pipe, & that complaint having been made in 1892 or 1893 as to the outfall of the pipe's contents into the river, the local authority subsequently proposed a scheme of drainage by which the drainage was to be diverted from the 12-inch pipe & carried into septic tanks:—Held: (1) the pipe was a sewer within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, & had vested in pltfs.; (2) on the evidence as a finding of fact, the local authority must be taken to have been satisfied with the sewer, & could not now re-sewer the road & proceed against frontagers under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150.

(3) Semble: when a sewer has thus existed for a long period of years, it must be inferred that the sewer has been accepted by the local authority as a sewer laid to their satisfaction.—WILMSLOW URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. SIDEBOTTOM (1900), 70 J. P. 537; 5 L. G. R. 80.

2266. ————.]—The owner of a building estate deposited plans in accordance with the bye-laws of a local authority, made under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 157, showing the course of an intended new sewer to be constructed of 9-inch pipes along a certain new road. After the plans were approved, the line of pipes or sewer was constructed under the inspection of the local authority, & when completed was passed & authorised to be covered in. No houses were built on the land fronting the new sewer, & it was not in use:—Held: the line of pipes, immediately after it was approved & authorised to be covered in, was a sewer which vested in the local authority under sect. 13 of the Act, & they had power under sect. 16 to connect it with their other sewers.—TURNER v. HANDSWORTH URBAN COUNCIL, [1909] 1 Ch. 381; 78 L. J. Ch. 202; 100 L. T. 194; 73 J. P. 95; 7 L. G. R. 255.

Accordingly, the local authority may, although these private sewers are vested in them under sect. 13, require the frontagers, under sect. 150, to sewer the street, unless the local authority have, either expressly or by inference from circumstances, determined that it is already sewered to their satisfaction within that sect.; in which case their powers under that sect. are no longer exercisable, & any required new sewers must be provided at their own expense under sects. 15 & 18.

(2) The notice under sect. 150 to frontagers to sewer a street must be served upon every frontager.

(3) If the proportion of sewerage expenses payable by any frontager under sect. 150 is referred to arbn. under sect. 180, all objections to the validity of the proceedings of the local authority on the ground of insufficient notice, such as neglecting to serve every frontager, or otherwise, must be raised, if at all, before the arbitrators; & it is too late to raise them by action or other proceeding after the award, which is by sub-sect. 15 of that sect. made "final & binding" on the parties.—HANDSWORTH DISTRICT COUNCIL v. 2269. — Sewer laid by local authority.—In a road which was a street within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, but which was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, an urban authority in 1881, at the cost of the rates, constructed a sewer for soil only, the surface water from the road & the adjoining houses, both before & after 1881, being carried away by channels at the side of the road. In 1904, there having been no change since 1881 in the number or character of the adjoining houses, the urban authority gave notice under sect. 150 to the frontagers in the road to construct a sewer in the road for the purpose of carrying away the surface water. The frontagers, contending that the road was not a street not sewered to the satisfaction of the urban authority within sect. 150, did not comply with the notice, & on their default the urban authority themselves constructed the sewer & sought to charge the expenses on the frontagers:—Held: it was a question of fact for the justices whether the road was a street not sewered to the satisfaction of the urban authority, & the fact that the urban authority had themselves constructed a sewer in the road in 1881, & had done nothing further with regard to the drainage of the road until 1904, did not as a matter of law preclude the justices from finding as a fact on the evidence that in 1904 the road was not sewered to the satisfaction of the urban authority.—*BLOOR v. 2275. Right of contractor to recover expense from authority.—A local board of health for a non-corporate district, acting under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), gave notice to the owners of the premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on certain streets, requiring them to "sewer, level, pave, flag, & channel" same, according to the provisions of sect. 69 of that Act. These notices not being complied with within the specified time, the board entered the contracts with a third person for the performance thereof, which contained provisions that the contractor was to be paid for the work when the money was collected from the owners of the adjacent properties. The work was done accordingly, but the owners having refused payment, the justices of the peace before whom they were summoned for non-payment dismissed the summonses:—Held: on a case in which the ct. was empowered to draw inferences of fact, the contractor was entitled to sue the board of health for the work done by him under the contracts.—*WORTHINGTON v. 2276. Power of authority to deviate from terms of notice—Use of cheaper material.—Under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, an urban sanitary authority gave notice to the owner of premises to pave part of a street upon which his premises abutted, specifying the materials & mode & (inter alia) requiring him to lay down concrete. The owner having failed to comply, the sanitary authority did the work themselves, but finding that the concrete would be an unnecessary expense, omitted it:—Held: the omission to follow strictly the terms of their own notice did not prevent the sanitary authority from recovering from the owner his proportion of the expenses incurred.—*ACTON LOCAL BOARD v. On default the local authority carried out more extensive sewage works, but including the work necessary for drainage of the street itself, & apportioned on the frontagers part of the cost of the more extensive works, being the amount which it would have cost to sewer the street in accordance with the notices:—Held: the amount so apportioned was recoverable by the local authority.—*ACTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. the local authority of that fact, & that he proposed, with the consent of the other frontagers, to make up the whole of the road himself, waited until the works in the other road were finished. In Mar. 1912, the works being finished, pltf. began the work in C. Gardens, but the local authority refused to supply the levels, or to co-operate unless pltf. signed an agreement as to the making up of the street which it was alleged by the council pltf. had agreed to enter into after the six weeks specified in the notice had run out. On May 1 the works were ready for the connections with the sewers to be made, but upon pltf. requesting the authority to make the same, they refused to do so, or to allow him to do so, on the ground that the works were not being done under the notice & that the agreement had not yet been signed. Pltf. then made a connection, which the council caused to be disconnected. Pltf. then issued a writ against the council for an injunction, & subsequently an arrangement was come to by which the council made the connections at pltf.'s expense:—Held: pltf. had bond fide endeavoured to comply with the notice; there had been no unreasonable delay on his part; he was entitled to have the connections made when he called upon the council to make them, & defts. must pay the costs of the action.—*DENMAN v. 2281. Principles of apportionment—In proportion to linear frontage.—(1) Under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 69, the expense of sewerage & paving a street must be apportioned among the owners or occupiers of all premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on the street, whether the premises have direct access to the street or not, & in proportion to the linear frontage of the premises to the street, & irrespective of the width of the street.

2294. ———.—(1) A defaulting owner, on receiving notice of apportionment [under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150], sent to the authority a letter which appeared to be rather an objection to the prime cost of the work than to the mode in which that prime cost was apportioned. The ct. below held that a dispute as to the prime cost was not a dispute as to the apportionment within the sect., & that the urban authority were not bound to go to arbitration before commencing an action to recover the apportioned amount. On appeal:—Held: the letter might have been treated by the urban authority as not being a notice disputing the apportionment but as they had in letters to the owner, & by resolution passed at their own meeting, treated the letter as a good notice, it must be treated as such, & an action brought by them before proceeding to arbitration must be dismissed.

2301. ———.]—An urban authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, paved & made up a place as being a "street" within the Act, & their surveyor apportioned the expenses among the frontagers. One of the frontagers gave notice of objection to the apportionment upon him upon the ground that the greater part of the place paved & made up was private property & not a "street," & that only a small part of his premises fronted on a "street." The urban authority thereupon appointed an arbitrator under sect. 180 of the Act, & the frontager, who had not appointed an arbitrator before the expiration of fourteen days after service upon him of notice of the appointment of the arbitrator by the urban authority, gave notice to the urban authority that he withdrew the notice disputing the apportionment upon the ground that the sole question was one of law as to whether the whole of the place paved & made up was a "street" which the arbitrator could not determine. The urban authority refused to accept the notice of withdrawal, & the arbitrator appointed by them proceeded with the arbitration as sole arbitrator, & made an award against the frontager for the sum apportioned in respect of his premises, stating in his award that he found as facts that the place was a "street" within the Act, & that it was not repairable by the inhabitants at large. Upon a motion by the frontager to set aside the award:—Held: (1) the frontager, not having appointed an arbitrator to act for him, was entitled to withdraw his notice disputing the apportionment within the fourteen days; having done so there was no submission by him to arbitration; & therefore the arbitrator had no power to act as sole arbitrator, & the award was a nullity & must be set aside; (2) even if the arbitrator had jurisdiction to make an award, he had exceeded his jurisdiction in determining that the place was a "street" within the Act & was not repairable by the inhabitants at large, & upon this ground also the award must be set aside.—Re STOKER & MORPETH CORPN., [1915] 2 K. 2302. ———.]—Notices to sewer & pave roads having been in 1872 served by a board of health on an owner he took no notice during his lifetime & the works having been executed by the board notices to pay apportionments were on July 30, 1875, served on the tenant for life under the will of the owner, & on the exors., who within the statutory three months served counter notices on the board, disputing the amount of the apportionments & alleging that the roads were public roads. The board then commenced proceedings by arbn. which the owners refused to attend, & in their absence an award was made in favour of the board on Aug. 9, 1877. On Jan. 19, 1878, the award was made a rule of the Q. B. Div. On Feb. 12, notices of demand were served by the board on the owners, & on July 9, 1878, proceedings in the Q. B. Div. to enforce the award were commenced & subsequently abandoned. On Aug. 1, 1878, proceedings were taken in the Q. B. with reference to the costs of the award & these on Jan. 23, 1879, were transferred to the Ch. Div., in which an administration action was pending:—Held: (1) where a notice served by a board of health upon an owner calling upon him to pay an apportionment of expenses incurred in the sewerage & paving of roads is met by a counter notice disputing the amount alone such demand may be the subject of arbn.; but where the counter notice disputes the liability to pay, such a demand must be tried by justices, who, if the counter notice also disputes the amount may exercise their jurisdiction as to the amount also; (2) a summons by the board for leave to prove in the administration action for the amount awarded must be refused, on the ground that the remedy of the board was by a summary proceeding before justices & had become barred by the operation of Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11.—*WEST v. made upon him for the amount. Under sect. 268 he, deeming himself aggrieved by the "decision" of the authority, addressed a memorial by way of appeal to the Local Government Board, stating the grounds of his complaint. On a rule for prohibition to the Local Government Board:—Held: an appeal lay by the memorial to the Local Government Board, & no prohibition ought to be granted.

justices by a local board under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), for the recovery of a proportion of the expenses of sewerage of a street from the owner of premises abutting thereon, was dismissed by the justices on the ground that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The local board some years afterwards made an application against the same person for the recovery of a proportion of paving expenses subsequently incurred in respect of the same street, & a stipendiary magistrate made an order for the payment of such expenses:—Held: the adjudication of the justices that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large on the first application was beyond the jurisdiction of such justices, which was only to make or refuse the order for the expenses claimed, & such adjudication on the first application did not estop the local board from claiming the expenses they claimed on the second application, & the magistrate might make the order which he made for their payment.—*R. v. On default of payment after demand made, the urban sanitary authority proceeded to "recover the expenses in a summary manner" before justices:—Held: the owner having by the submission indorsed on the notice admitted the right of the sanitary authority to issue the notice, could not require proof to be given before the justices of the fulfilment of the conditions precedent to the existence of such right. The owner could not by such submission give jurisdiction to the sanitary authority if in fact they had none, but he did thereby waive the proof by them of the preliminaries to the notice, & made it incumbent on himself to disprove their original authority, if he wished to dispute it.—*LEWIS v. 2338. — ——. (1) Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, applies only to streets which are in the ordinary & popular sense of the word "streets" & the word "street" in sect. 150 does not necessarily include every meaning given to it by sect. 4 of the Act.

(2) In summary proceedings to recover expenses under sect. 150, it is for the justices, having regard to the surrounding circumstances, & to whether there is any intention of building along a road so as to convert it into a street, to find as a fact whether one road in question is a street in the ordinary & popular sense of the word; & it makes no difference that the sect. has been applied or may apply to a portion of the road other than that in question. Where the justices find a road, or a portion of a road, is not a street in the ordinary & popular sense, they will be right in holding that the sect. is not applicable to the road or portion.—*R. The owner had given no notice, under sect. 257 of the Act, disputing the apportionment within the specified time. At the hearing of the complaint it was shown that the carriageway of the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, but that the footway on which the owner's premises fronted was not:—Held: the urban authority had jurisdiction to give the notice & make the apportionment in respect of the footway, & the owner having failed to dispute the apportionment under sect. 257, it was conclusive against him, & he could not at the hearing before the justices dispute his liability to pay any part of the apportioned sum.—DERBY CORPN. v. In Sept. 1870, resps. declared these expenses should be paid by annual instalments. A demand having been made on applt. he refused to pay, & was summoned before justices:—Held: as resps. had in Jan. 1861, demanded from applt. payment of his proportion of the costs, they had elected to treat the amount due as a debt from him as owner; & they could not afterwards, in Sept. 1870, declare them to be private improvement expenses.—*WILSON v. 2353. Power to revoke resolution declaring amount improvement expenses—Recovery of charges.—A local board, in the year 1864, determined to do certain works in a street adjoining deft.'s house, for the expenses of which deft., among others, was made liable under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 60, & for which, consequently, there was a charge on the property under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 62. Before the works were done they resolved that the expenses were private improvement expenses under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 90, & should be recovered from the owners & occupiers by annual instalments. In 1872 they revoked the resolution, & made a fresh rate for the whole amount then remaining unpaid to be paid by the owners & occupiers. This rate being unpaid in 1875, they brought an action against deft. to enforce the charge on his land under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 62:—Held: (1) the limitation of six months, within which summary proceedings must be taken before the justices or in the county ct. under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 61, does not apply to the enforcing of the charge created by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 62; (2) the election of the board to declare the expenses to be private improvement expenses did not prevent them from enforcing the charge on the land, but they could only enforce it in respect of the instalments that were for the time being in arrear.

(3) As against the land there is to be a charge for the sum payable with interest at 5 per cent. per annum with no limit fixed as to the time within which that charge is to be enforced, & in my opinion, the only proper limit is that which Stat. Limitations fixes (COTTON, L.J.).—TOTTENHAM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH v. ROWELL (1880), 15 Ch. D. 378; 50 L. J. Ch. 99; 43 L. T. 616; 29 W. R. 36, C. A.

The sum apportioned on N. was £2,412, & the local board, by resolution, duly resolved to make the sum payable by N. by instalments during twenty years at 5 per cent. The owner did not comply with the notices & the local authority executed the works themselves & subsequently sent in a demand to him for an apportioned part of the expenses incurred by them. The owner did not pay, & thereupon the local authority issued a summons against him claiming a declaration that they were entitled under sect. 257 of the Act to a charge for the full amount due on all the premises of the owner in the two roads:—Held: under sect. 257 the local authority were only entitled to a charge for an apportioned sum in respect of each of the premises fronting on the road in respect of which the apportioned expenses were incurred.—*CROYDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. The action was entered & entitled "The Wealdstone Urban District Council, of Council Offices, Peel Road, Wealdstone, ptfs., & the owner of plot No. 188, Canning Road, Wealdstone, defts." An order was then obtained by ptfs. for substituted service on defts. by advertisement. This order was obtained on an affidavit by ptfs.' surveyor that he had made repeated efforts, but had failed, to ascertain the present owner of the plot, & that notices of apportionment & of a demand for payment had been posted on the said land. Subsequently an order was made that the expenses & interest were a charge upon the land, & that ptfs. were to be at liberty to sell the premises subject to a reserved price, & a further order was made declaring that upon such sale the owner of the plot should be a trustee for the purchaser within Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), & that ptfs. be appointed to convey the said plot for the estate of the said owner. 2376. Notice served on tenant for life—Death of tenant for life before apportionment.—Under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 257, the relation of debtor & creditor can never arise between a local authority & an owner of property in respect of work executed by the local authority. When such work has been done & the period within which summary proceedings may be taken has expired, & it is no longer possible to take such proceedings, the charge for the work attaches to the property, & commences, not from the completion of the work, but from the date at which the amount is assessed.

In 1882 G. executed a deed of gift of two leasehold houses, upon trust for himself for life, he paying all outgoings & performing the covenants in the leases, & after his death for his son, L., absolutely. In 1884 the local board served a notice on G. in respect of each house, under sect. 150 of above Act, requiring him to make up a private road on which the houses abutted. G. did not comply with the notice, & in Feb. 1885, the board completed the work themselves. In June, 1885, G. died, having by his will, in which he recited that he had given the two houses to his son "unincumbered," given his residuary estate to trustees on trust for his widow for life, with remainder to his children. On his father's death L. entered into possession of the houses, & in Sept. 1886, was served with notices by the board assessing the expenses of making up the road; & on Feb. 21, 1887, he was served with notices demanding payment of the money by ten annual instalments. L. then took out a summons to determine whether the assessment should be paid out of his father's estate or by himself personally:—Held: the amounts assessed would have been "outgoings" & payable by G. if the board had taken summary proceedings, under sect. 257 of the Act, in G.'s lifetime; but as they had not done so, & the time for doing so had expired, the charge only commenced from the service of the notices demanding payment, & was payable by the son.—*Re BOOR, BOOR v. 2381. Notice to make up street under Public Health Acts—Subsequent adoption of Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57)—Effect of adoption.]—An urban local authority served notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, to sewer & make up a private street. Under this notice if the frontagers did not do the work within a limited time the local authority had a right to do it themselves & charge the frontages, with the expense to be apportioned as provided by the above sect. The frontagers having made default the local authority took steps towards doing the work; but before it had been commenced they adopted above Act, which by s. 25 provides that from its adoption in any district Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, shall not apply to that district. The work was subsequently done by the local authority & the expense apportioned according to the Act of 1875:—Held: sect. 25 of above

Act did not affect the validity or effect of the notice given while sect. 150 was in force in the district though after the adoption of above Act no fresh notice could be given under sect. 150, & if there would otherwise have been any doubt on the point, it was removed by Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 32 (2), which saves everything duly done under a repealed enactment before its repeal & every right obligation or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under it before the repeal & the subsequent proceedings of the local authority under the notice were effectual.—*HESTON & ISLEWORTH URBAN COUNCIL v. 2382. Notice to repair private street—Counter notice by frontagers to make up street—Mandamus to local authority to proceed—Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (c. 53), s. 19.]—The local authority of a district in which the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), had been adopted, & to which above sect. had been applied, served notice to repair a road under above sect. on the persons whom they understood to be the owners of the adjoining premises. The notice recited that the road was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, but in fact there was along the middle of the road a footpath which was so repairable. The majority of the owners served a counter-notice requiring the local authority to proceed under the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57). The local authority approved a provisional apportionment under that Act, & some of the owners served notice of objection on the ground that the works were unreasonable & too costly. The local authority then withdrew their original notice, being satisfied that it would be unwise to make up the road in a permanent manner as damage would be done to it by building operations. It also appeared that some of the owners of adjoining premises had not been served with the original notice, & no notice had been affixed to the land. On an application for a mandamus to the local authority to proceed under the Act of 1892:—Held: in the circumstances the ct. would not grant a mandamus to the local authority. Semble: after the service of a counter-notice by the owners to proceed under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), the local authority have a discretion as to whether they shall so proceed or not.—*R. v. street works apportioned by a provisional apportionment under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), may include in addition to the actual estimated cost of the works & the commission in respect of surveys, etc., allowed by sect. 9, a percentage on the estimated cost for contingencies.

Where a tramway is laid in a street, the two strips of the street on either side of the tramway track & the parts of the road adjacent to it for the repair of which the tramway promoters are liable may be dealt with under the Act of 1892 as together constituting a "part of a street" within the meaning of sect. 6 of the Act, & where this course is adopted the tramway promoters are not chargeable as frontagers in respect of the tramway.—*STANDRING v. 2386. — Strip of land adjoining street—Marked off by pillars.]—Resp. council in a provisional apportionment made under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), charged applts. with a portion of the expenses of making up a street, & applts. were charged as owners of land abutting upon a strip which was alleged to be part of the street. The strip of land had been shown upon a plan deposited some four years ago by applts.' predecessors in title, & approved by the council under their bye-laws. On this plan the strip, which was coloured green, was bounded by a dotted line on the side adjoining the then existing street, & on the other side by a corner shop which was to be set back in line with existing buildings, & which was built in accordance with the plan. There had been a wall where the dotted line was marked, but it had been removed & five stone pillars erected along its site. The strip between the pillars & the shop was asphalted, & foot traffic was allowed to pass over it without hindrance. After the council had taken proceedings under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), with respect to the making up of the street, applts. put wooden rails between the stone pillars & across the strip. Objection having been taken by applts. under sect. 7 that the strip of ground did not form part of the street being made under the Act, & the justices having found that the strip was a part of the street & that applts. were properly chargeable:—Held: there was evidence on which the justices could find that the strip of ground had become part of the street, & the apportionment was right.—*BELL & SONS v. 2388. — Construction of agreement.]—The owners of, & frontagers on, certain roads, agreed with the urban authority, by deed made in 1879, that from Jan. 1, 1880, the roads should be dedicated to the public, & should be accepted by the urban authority as public highways, repairable by the inhabitants at large, & should be maintained & repaired accordingly, & that the urban authority should be at liberty to plant trees & to erect & maintain seats for public use thereon, & to do all other acts, & to exercise all other powers, under a local Act of 1855, & Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55). It was, however, further agreed that the urban authority was to retain & have the same powers of requiring the frontagers, so soon, & to such extent only as their lands should be actually occupied for building purposes, to sewer, level, pave, etc., such of the said roads as should for the time being not be sewered, levelled, paved, etc., to the satisfaction of the urban authority, & such powers of executing & of recovering expenses, & of taking proceedings in relation to the matters aforesaid, as the urban authority would for the time being have or be capable of exercising under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), or the local Act, if the said roads had, for the time being, not been accepted by the urban authority as public highways, & were not highways repairable by the inhabitants at large.

The corpn., who had adopted Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), sued a successor in title of one of the frontagers on one of the said roads, under sect. 14 of that Act, for the apportioned expenses of private street works executed on the road. The frontager had taken no objection to the provisional or to the final apportionment under sects. 7 & 12 of the Act:—Held: if the meaning of the deed was that the roads were, as between the parties, to be deemed highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, & that—by implication—the corpn. undertook not to put into force Private Street Works Act, 1892, against the frontagers, it was ultra vires. If the deed had no such meaning, it was no bar, in the present case, to proceedings under sect. 14 of that Act.—FOLKESTONE CORPN. v. ROOK (1907), 71 J. P. 550; 6 L. G. R. 69, D. C.

The works comprised the making up of the roadway, & the paving & kerbing of a footpath on the north side only; no footpath was made on the south side. The surveyor of the local board made a provisional apportionment, by which the expenses of paving & kerbing the footpath were apportioned among the owners of premises abutting on the north side only, all the other expenses of the proposed works being apportioned among the owners of premises abutting on both side of the street, including the local board, as the owners of land on the south side:—Held: the provisional apportionment of the expenses of the footpath was wrong, & they were properly apportionable among the owners of premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on both sides of the street.—*CLACTON LOCAL BOARD v. 2391. "Court, passage, or otherwise"—Includes private road.]—(1) By Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 10, an urban authority about to execute private street works in any street may include in a provisional apportionment of the expenses of the works "any premises . . . access to which is obtained from the street through a court, passage, or otherwise," & which will in their opinion be benefited by the works:—Held: there may be included premises access to which is obtained through a private road made primarily for the purpose of giving access thereto, but not premises access to which is obtained through a road which is or is intended for a public street.

(2) The doctrine whereby in construing statutes or other instruments the words "other" & "otherwise" are limited to things or means not before mentioned but being ejusdem generis with those already mentioned in the instrument is well known; it has been invoked in the present case to show that in the phrase "access . . . through a court, passage or otherwise" the access other than through a court or passage must be of a width not greater than that of a court or passage. To hold that would be to shut one's eyes to the real intention of the legislature, which was to enable the local authority to include property which gets access to the street in which the works are being executed, & I decline to hold that premises which have such access are not to be included in an apportionment because the means of access may be of a width greater than that which is usual for a court or passage, or that they are only to be included when the access is by means of a court or passage or something of that character. A court does not usually convey any idea of narrowness, & therefore "court or passage" gives no measure whereby to limit the narrowness of the means of access embraced in the words "or otherwise" (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—NEWQUAY URBAN COUNCIL v. Lane, which was not a public highway or street. Applt.'s premises did not front or abut upon that portion of G. Lane upon which the works were being carried on, but access therefrom to the premises was obtained through the remaining portion of G. Lane, a length of about 516 yards:—Held: the words "court, passage, or otherwise" mean a court or passage or something in the nature of a court or passage, but do not mean a portion of the street itself; & therefore access to applt.'s premises was not obtained through a "court, passage, or otherwise" within the meaning of sect. 10 of the Act, & the sect. did not empower resps. to include applt.'s property in the provisional apportionment.

The words "or otherwise" must mean some means of access of a similar character to that of a court or passage (LORD READING, C.J.).—CHATTERTON v. GLANFORD RURAL COUNCIL, [1915] 3 K. B. 707; 84 L. J. K. B. 1865; 113 L. T. 746; 79 J. P. 441; 13 L. G. R. 1352.

2396. — Side lane.]—(1) In the district of an urban authority which had adopted Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), there was a terrace consisting of two blocks of ten houses each numbered respectively 1 to 10 & 11 to 20, which had been taken over by the authority as a public highway, & a street passing from the middle of the terrace Nos. 10 & 11 therein & at right angles thereto. There was also a lane 10 feet wide, which had been made for the convenience of the occupants of the terrace, & which had not been ballasted, metalled, or rolled, passing from the terrace along the side of No. 1 therein, then round behind Nos. 1 to 10 to the said street, then on behind Nos. 11 to 20, & then round along the side of No. 20 back into the terrace. There was a back entrance from the lane to No. 1 in the terrace. The urban authority having passed a resolution to make good the said street:—Held: No. 1 in the terrace was not so connected with the said street as to come within the words of sect. 10 of the above Act "premises . . . access to which is obtained from the street through a court, passage, or otherwise," & consequently, that house could not be included in a provisional apportionment of the expenses of making good the said street.

(2) Under sects. 6 & 10 of the Act an urban authority passed a resolution that a certain street should be made good, that their surveyor in accordance with the provisions of the Act should prepare as respected the street (inter alia) a provisional apportionment of the estimated expenses among the premises liable to be charged therewith under the Act & that in settling the apportionment of the expenses among the owners of the premises "fronting, adjoining, or abutting on the above-mentioned street" regard should be had to certain matters. The surveyor prepared a provisional apportionment of the expenses, which included certain premises which did not front, adjoin, or abut upon the said street, as coming within the words of sect. 10 "premises . . . access to which is obtained from the street through a court, passage or otherwise" & which would be benefited by the works. The urban authority then passed a second resolution approving of the provisional apportionment:—Held: the resolutions were sufficient to authorise a provisional apportionment of the expenses upon premises which came within the above words of sect. 10.

We think it would be more in conformity with the provisions of the Act that the resolution should state expressly that the council "think it just to include" such houses (per cur.).—OAKLEY v. 2400. Indemnity by local authority—Against expense of making up street.]—In 1878 a local authority did some work on the causeway or pavement of a street within their district, which street was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. A portion of the expenses incurred by the local authority was paid by two frontagers, J. & S. In the following year the local authority passed the following resolution: "Resolved that an indemnity be given to J. & S. against liability on account of further expenses that may be occasioned in connection with" the street in question, & delivered a copy of such resolution to J. & S. In 1902 the local authority resolved to put in force Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), in the said street, & objection was taken to the provisional apportionment under sect. 7 that the premises of J. & S. ought to be excluded from the provisional apportionment, relying on the above resolution. The justices ordered the premises to be excluded on this ground. On appeal:—Held: the above resolution afforded no valid objection for excluding the premises from the provisional apportionment.—DODWORTH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. IBBOTSON (1903), 67 J. P. 132, D. C.

2401. Land belonging to railway company—Not used for railway purposes.]—A railway co. acquired a piece of land solely for the purpose of their railway & works, but for the time it was used as garden ground for which the railway co. received rent. The justices found as a fact that the land was not used by the railway co. solely or in any way or at all as a part of their railway or works, & that therefore the co. were not entitled to the exemption provided by sect. 22 of Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57):—Held: this was a question of fact on which there was evidence for the justices, & the ct. would not grant a writ of mandamus for them to state a case.—*R. v. Half of the road was in fact in the contributory place of G., which was not included in the order. On objection being taken to a provisional apportionment relating to the whole of the road, on the ground that the local authority had no power under the order to make up the whole of the road at the expense of the frontagers:—Held: there was no power in the justices to make any order on the basis that the whole road could be dealt with under the powers of the order of the Local Government Board.—*R. v. 2405. Chapel—Not used exclusively for religious worship.]—By sect. 16 of Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), a church, chapel, or place appropriated to public religious worship, which is by law exempt from poor rates, is exempt from the expenses of private street works; & by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 30, s. 1, a place which is "exclusively appropriated to public religious worship" is exempt from poor rates. A building described as a "disused Wesleyan chapel," had up to five years ago, when a new church was built, been used as a church. The premises were now used on Sundays for a Sunday school, & on week nights for religious services. A debating society met therein, & there had also been held therein a political meeting, an "At Home" in connection with the church work & entertainments open to the public were given, for which a charge for admission was made. The moneys arising therefrom were applied by the owners to meet the expenses of the church. The premises had not in fact been rated for the relief of the poor. Expenses having been incurred by the local authority in executing private street works:—Held: the premises were not a place "exclusively appropriated to public religious worship" & were not by law exempt from rates for the relief of the poor, & therefore did not come within the exemption in sect. 16 of Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), & the owners were liable to the expenses of the private street works.—*WALTON-LE-DALE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. 2407. Plans—Inspection—Duty of frontager.]—(1) On premises adjoining a highway, which were the property of & occupied by deft., there was a coal shoot formed by an opening at the bottom of the wall of the house, abutting on the pavement, which was part of the highway. In 1901 the local highway authority, acting under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), raised the level of the pavement, & in order to preserve access to the coal shoot left an opening in the pavement. This condition of the pavement remained until Oct. 1914, when pltf. in passing along the pavement, put her foot into the hole, & suffered personal injuries, for which she brought her action against deft.:—Held: the action failed, inasmuch as, where a nuisance is created by a highway authority on a highway under their control, the owner or occupier of the land adjoining the highway is not liable for an accident caused by the nuisance.

(2) Semble: there was no duty on deft. to inspect the plans prepared by the local authority in 1901 in connection with the work of raising the level of the pavement.—HORRIDGE v. MAKINSON (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1294; 113 L. T. 498; 79 J. P. 484; 31 T. L. R. 389; 13 L. G. R. 868, D. C.

Service upon a reputed owner in occupation of the premises is not sufficient. Semble: a copy of the resolution addressed & sent to the "owner" of the premises, without naming him, at the premises, is effectively served upon the owner under the Act.—WIRRAL RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. The owners of certain premises shown in the provisional apportionment as liable to be charged with part of the expenses of executing the works, delivered to the corpn. a memorial stating that they had no desire that the road should be taken over by the sanitary authority, & that the proposed works were unreasonable & unnecessary, & asking that before further steps were taken to carry out the works inquiry should be made into the matter:—Held: the memorial was not a notice of objection within sect. 7 of Private Street Works Act, 1892, & therefore that it did not cast upon the urban authority the obligation of taking the proceedings prescribed by sect. 8 (1) of that Act.—SOUTHAMPTON CORPN. v. 2416. Locus not a "street" within the Act—Footway repairable by inhabitants at large.]—The definition of "street" in Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 5, excludes "a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. By sect. 8 an urban authority is empowered with respect to streets to do certain sewerage works.

An urban authority proposed to do sewerage works in a certain place in their borough. The place in question (which was called a street) was formed before 1816 & had always been open at both ends into highways & the place & buildings had existed in the same condition for seventy years & since its formation the way had been used by foot-passengers without interruption. Neither public nor private repairs were proved. On a case stated on the hearing & determination by justices of objections to the proposed works:—Held: (1) the place in question was not a "street" within the Act being a footway repairable by the inhabitants at large, & therefore the urban authority had no power to execute the proposed works.

(2) The onus probandi is upon the authority to show that a street is a street within the Act.—RISHTON v. HASLINGDEN CORPN., [1898] 1 Q. B. 294; 67 L. J. Q. B. 387; 77 L. T. 620; 62 J. P. 85; 14 T. L. R. 155, D. C.

2417. ——— Evidence admissible to show highway repairable by inhabitants at large.]—By sect. 7 of Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), the owner of premises liable to be charged with any part of the cost of executing works under the Act may by written notice to the local authority object to the proposed works on the following, amongst other, grounds: (a) that an alleged street is not a street within the meaning of the Act; (b) that a street is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. By sect. 5 the expression "street" in the Act means a street as defined by the Public Health Acts, & not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large:—Held: where the ground of objection was that the alleged street was not a street within the Act, evidence was admissible to prove that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.

Qu.: whether on the hearing of an objection under the Act, the justices can amend the notice of objection so as to let in evidence which would be inadmissible under the notice as drawn.—CAREY v. The question whether the path is a street within Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), cannot be raised at all unless duly raised under s. 7 of that Act. At the date of the agreement the road was properly made up, but the footway was not paved. The local authority having decided under the powers conferred by Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), to pave the footway, they served notices of apportionment on the frontagers:—Held: the frontagers were not liable, as the road was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, & the powers which the local authority attempted to enforce did not apply to such a highway, & the local authority could not, under the agreement make the frontagers liable.—*FOLKESTONE CORPN. v. 2424. Proposed works insufficient—Narrow street—Jurisdiction of magistrates.]—An objection was taken to works of paving, levelling, sewerage, & lighting a street proposed by an urban authority to be done under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 17), the ground of objection being that the proposed works were "insufficient" & "unreasonable" within sect. 7 (d). On the hearing of the objection before a ct. of summary jurisdiction it was proved that the works were necessary & proper in order that the street might be safely & conveniently used as a street; but the justices allowed the objections, holding that the works were insufficient, & therefore unreasonable, because the street at one point was too narrow, & the urban authority did not propose to take any steps to have it widened:—Held: the expression "insufficient" in sect. 7 (d) limited the jurisdiction of the ct. of summary jurisdiction to determining whether or not the works were insufficient to effect the purpose proposed to be effected by them, & therefore the justices' decision, being founded upon considerations which they ought not to have entertained, was wrong.—*MANSFIELD CORPN. v. 2426. Jurisdiction of magistrates—To amend scheme—Power of local authority to proceed—After amendment.]—Where a resolution has been passed by an urban authority under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 6 (1), approving the plans, sections, estimates, & provisional apportionments for making up the whole of a street, & the resolution has been published & copies thereof have been served on the frontagers under sub-sect. 3, the justices have, on the hearing of an objection by a frontager under sect. 7 that part of the street is repairable by the inhabitants at large, jurisdiction under sect. 8 (1), to amend the resolution, plans, etc., by limiting the scheme to the remaining portion of the street: & the urban authority can then carry out the amended scheme without it being necessary for them to begin their proceedings de novo or to pass a resolution approving the amended scheme.

Where, on the hearing of an objection to the original scheme, the justices have decided upon amending the scheme, the question whether or not, under sect. 8 (1), they shall adjourn the hearing & direct any further notices to be given, is a matter entirely within their discretion; but where the amendment is of a material character,

Applt. appeared in the provisional apportionment as liable to be charged in respect of certain land abutting on the south side of the street, & a colliery co. appeared therein as owners or reputed owners of certain agricultural land abutting on the north side of the street. Applt. gave written notice of objection on the ground that the provisional apportionment was incorrect in respect of the degree of benefit to be derived by the owners & occupiers on the north side. The justices ordered that the provisional apportionment should be amended & that the expenses should be apportioned according to frontage, & that notice should be given to the owners or reputed owners shown as liable to be charged, & they adjourned the hearing. At the adjourned hearing the justices found that the colliery co. were only lessees & they ordered the name of the Duke of P. to be substituted as the owner of the agricultural land, that notice should be given to the duke & that the hearing should be further adjourned. On the further adjournment the ct. found that the duke's land did not abut upon the street & they ordered his name to be omitted & the provisional apportionment to be amended, & they adjourned the hearing again. In the provisional apportionment thus amended applt. appeared as owner or reputed owner of a strip of land lying between the duke's land & the street. On the final hearing it was proved that applt. was the owner of this strip of land & the justices, confirmed the provisional apportionment as thus amended:—Held: although there had been no notice of objection to the provisional apportionment on the ground of the omission of the name of applt. as the person chargeable in respect of the strip of land, the justices had power to amend the provisional apportionment in this respect & to confirm it as so amended.—HALL v. the apportioned expenses of private street works executed under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), become a charge on the premises in respect of which they are apportioned as from the date of the completion of the works, & not merely as from the date of the final apportionment. £137 7s. 9d. was charged on deft.'s premises, which consisted of nine houses. A summons was taken out for payment of this sum with 5 per cent. interest. Deft. paid £137 7s. 9d. with 4 per cent. interest, & objected that (a) the action had been commenced before three months had expired from the date of the notice; (b) 4 per cent. only should have been asked; (c) the £137 7s. 9d. was asked as a whole sum & not apportioned on the houses individually; (d) the proceedings ought to have been brought in the county ct. An application for leave to interrogate was adjourned into ct. to come on with the summons, & the summons was amended by stating in a schedule how the £137 7s. 9d. was apportioned upon deft.'s premises:—Held: deft. must pay the costs. Semble: an originating summons in the Ch. ### iii. Objections to Final Apportionment.

2443. When objection must be taken—Departure from specification.—By Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 12, "When any private street works have been completed, & the expenses thereof ascertained," the urban authority's surveyor shall make a final apportionment of the expenses, which final apportionment shall be conclusive for all purposes, & the owners of premises affected thereby may, within one month after receiving notice thereof, object thereto upon the grounds (inter alia), or either of them, that the final apportionment has not been made in accordance with the sect., & that there has been an unreasonable departure from the deposited specification, plans, & sects.

An urban authority employed a contractor to execute, under the powers given by the Act, works of paving, &c., in a street according to a specification, plans, & an estimate duly made & deposited. Being satisfied on the report of their surveyor, who had inspected the work from time to time during its progress & given certificates for payments on account to the contractor, that it had been satisfactorily completed, they paid the contractor the balance of the contract price, & the surveyor then made a final apportionment of the expenses among the owners, notice of which was served upon them. Applt., an owner affected by the final apportionment, did not object thereto within one month after he received the notice; but the urban authority having, after the month had expired, taken summary proceedings to obtain payment of the sum apportioned upon him, he objected before the justices that the works had not been "completed" within sect. 12, because the road & footways of the street had not been formed & levelled, not had they been ballasted & metalled to the thickness, or with the materials, specified in the specification, nor did the channeling & kerbing comply therewith, & the surveyor had, therefore, no power to make a final apportionment of the expenses:—Held: applt. could not take those objections before the justices, & they were right in rejecting evidence in support of them.—HAYLES v. SANDOWN URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1903] 1 K. B. 169; 72 L. J. K. B. 48; 88 L. T. 61; 67 J. P. 177; 51 W. R. 348; 1 L. G. R. 187, D. C.

Resp. knew nothing of the agreement. Appls. having decided to make up the street under sect. 6 of Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), caused a notice to be served on resp. as a frontager, & no notice of objection was given by resp. under sect. 7 of the Act. The work having been done by the urban authority, notice of the final apportionment, which included the cost of the sewer previously laid as aforesaid, was served on resp., & no objection was taken by her under sect. 12. Upon proceedings before the justices to recover the amount of the final apportionment:—Held: resp. having failed to object either under sect. 7 or 12 of the Act, no objection could be raised by her that the cost of the said sewer ought not to have been included in the apportioned expenses.

2445. — Premises wrongly included in apportionment.—An urban authority, under the provisions of a local Act analogous to Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), resolved to execute certain private street works, & served statutory notices on a firm of estate agents as “owners,” within sect. 4 of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), of premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on the street. The agents made no objection to the provisional or final apportionment of expenses. Some time after the works had been completed & the final apportionment made, the agents discovered that the boundary wall fronting the street was not part of their premises, but was the property of other owners, & they therefore denied liability for the apportioned expenses:—Held: inasmuch as their names appeared in the provisional apportionment as owners of the premises fronting the street, & although served with the statutory notices, they had made no objection to the proposals of the urban authority on the ground that their premises ought to be excluded from the provisional apportionment, the agents were liable for the apportioned expenses.—*WALLASEY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. 2446. — Agreement with local authority—For exemption of premises.—Where an urban authority has adopted Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), & has duly published the resolution required by sect. 6 of that Act with reference to the making up of a new street, an objection by an owner of property fronting on the street, who is shown in a provisional apportionment as liable to be charged with an apportioned amount of the expenses of the making up, on the ground that by agreement with the urban authority he has been exempted from liability in respect of his property, is, if not an objection that the property “ought to be excluded from . . . the provisional apportionment” within sect. 7 (e) of the Act, at any rate an objection “that the provisional apportionment is incorrect in respect of some matter of fact,” within sect. 7 (f), which must be taken by written notice to the urban authority within one month after the publication of the resolution; & having regard to sect. 8 (2), of the Act, the objection cannot be taken in proceedings to enforce the charge upon the property to secure the apportioned amount.—PORTHCAWL URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. BROGDEN, [1917] 1 Ch. 534; 86 L. J. Ch. 393; 116 L. T. 405; 81 J. P. 137; 61 Sol. Jo. 300; 15 L. G. R. 601.

(j) Contribution to Expenses by Local Authority.

2447. Necessity for resolution of local authority—Power of magistrates to amend resolution.—Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 6, provides that an urban authority may pass a resolution with respect to private street works, & sect. 10, that the expenses incurred in executing such works shall be apportioned among the frontagers, unless the urban authority otherwise resolve.

By sect. 7 provision is made for objections by frontagers & by sect. 8 these are to be heard & determined by a ct. of summary jurisdiction, which may quash or amend the resolution on the application of either an objector or of the urban authority. By sect. 15 the urban authority may at any time resolve to contribute the whole or a portion of the expenses of any private street works & may pay the same out of the district fund:—Held: in the absence of a resolution of the urban authority under sect. 15, justices engaged in hearing objections under sect. 8 have no power to insert by way of amendment to a resolution under sect. 6 a resolution that the urban authority shall contribute in whole or in part to the expenses of private street works.

In considering an objection under sect. 7 (d) that the proposed works are unreasonable the justices are entitled to consider, among other things, whether the proposed works are reasonable in the sense that it is reasonable that such works should be done at the frontagers' expense (SALTER, J.).—*CHESTER CORPN. v. ##### (a) Execution of Works.

i. In General.

2448. Execution of works by frontager—Not owner of soil of street—Not trespass.—By a local Act, the material provisions of which were substantially the same as those of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), comrs. were created, having duties with regard to streets & buildings within a certain area. In 1878 it was proposed to lay out an estate within such area for building, & plans were submitted to & approved by the comrs. By agreement between them & deft., he was, on completion of certain roads, to throw 18 feet of his land into those roads, so as to increase the width to 36 feet, which was done, but not to make the roads. In 1887 the powers of the comrs. passed to the pltf. corpn.

In 1892 the corpn. by an order required deft. to sewer, drain, level, flag & metal the roads (being the 18 feet width which was not on his land) so far as his premises fronted, adjoined, or abutted thereon. Deft. had done the necessary work of sewerage & paving on the 18 feet portion of his land which he had, as agreed, thrown into the roads for the purpose of making them 36 feet wide. The order not having been complied with, the corpn. executed the work themselves, & on making request for payment deft.'s agent disputed that the property was liable. A summons was accordingly taken out by the corpn. to have the sums expended declared a charge on the property:—Held: (1) half of each of the roads was a "street" within the Act, so as to bring it within the power of the corpn. to sewer & pave it compulsorily, at the expense of the adjoining owners, in case of their not complying with a proper notice to do so; (2) the notice was properly made & served on deft.; (3) entry on lands in obedience to the order did not constitute a trespass; (4) as deft. did not rest his defence on a wrong apportionment, there was no question within the jurisdiction of an arbitrator to decide, & his decision was unnecessary; (5) the proper course for deft. was by way of appeal to the Secretary of State by memorial for relief.—*WEST HARTLEPOOL CORPN. v. A subsequent sect. commencing, "Provided always, & be it enacted," directed, that before the comrs. should cause the streets to be paved, they should in the first place give notice to the owner or occupier of every house, land, etc., adjoining the street, requiring him to pave the same as the comrs. should direct; & if any such owner or occupier should for six months neglect to pave pursuant to the notice, then it should be lawful for the comrs., & they were thereby required, to cause the same to be done, & to recover the expenses from such owner or occupier:—Held: the giving of this notice was a condition precedent to the comrs. executing the paving themselves, & charging the expenses on the owner or occupier,

& it must be averred in the declaration, in an action brought under the Act for the recovery of such expenses.—SALFORD CORPN. v. ACKERS (1846), 16 M. & W. 85; 16 L. J. Ex. 6; 7 L. T. O. S. 341; 10 J. P. Jo. 359; 153 E. R. 1100.

2451. Validity of notice—Insufficient specification of works required—Formation of new street required.]—A local Act of Parliament authorised resps., when any street, not being a highway, was not sufficiently sewered, levelled, paved, flagged & channelled, to give notice to the respective owners of the premises fronting, etc., such street, to sewer, level, pave, flag, or channel, & if the requirements of the notice were not complied with, resps. might execute the works referred to in such notice, & recover the expenses from such owners. Resps. gave notice to applts. & others, owners of premises in a street not a highway, to "repair form & pave the same":—Held: the notice was bad, (1) because it did not sufficiently specify the works required to be done; & (2) because it went beyond the provisions of the Act in requiring the formation of a street.—*PARKINSON v. In a notice under the Act requiring the owners to make up certain roads, two roads were described as "backroads between E. Street & K. Street." On one side of each of these two roads the sides & not the backs of houses in E. Street & K. Street abutted:—Held: as no one could be misled by the misdescription the notice was sufficient.

(2) By the above Act, damages, etc., incurred by the corpn. in making up the roads may be recovered summarily before justices, subject to a limitation of six months imposed by reference to Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11, "or, if the corpn. think fit, in the superior cts. or any ct. of competent jurisdiction":—Held: the limitation of six months is not applicable to proceedings in the High Ct.—*BLACKBURN CORPN. v. 2457. — Old & new streets.—Sects. 55 & 56, of a local Act for the improvement of a township, enabled the comrs. executing the Act, to pave in a sufficient manner, on default of the owners or occupiers for six months after notice requiring them to do so, the public streets, ways, & passages within the township which are now built upon, but not made, paved, flagged, cleansed, or otherwise put into good order & condition, & all such other streets, etc., within, etc., which are now making or being built upon, or may hereafter be made, laid out, or built upon, or such thereof respectively as may require the same. Sect. 56 empowered the comrs., after such streets should have been completed as to paving & other matters required by the comrs., & the owners, etc., should have paid the expenses, to declare them highways. Sect. 53 empowered & required the comrs. to cause the present & future streets, etc., & each & every part or parts thereof to be paved, etc., & the ground or soil thereof to be raised, lowered, or altered from time to time, in such manner & with such materials as the comrs. should think fit. Sect. 44 enabled the comrs. to declare new streets to be highways, provided they were of certain width. The Act did not contain a clause giving compensation for damages occasioned by the exercise of the powers conferred by sect. 53:—Held: the general powers conferred by sect. 53 were to be exercised for the repair only of pavements in old streets, & streets declared to be highways under the Act; & they were inconsistent with the specific powers conferred by sects. 55 & 56; & lowering the ground or soil of a street described in the sects. 55 & 56 was an act of trespass not to be justified under sect. 53.—*BROWN v. that if in any street, whether or not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, there was not a properly paved, asphalted or flagged footway on each side, the owners or occupiers of buildings or lands in the street should make a footway or pathway at their own expense along their respective frontages, & provided that if they made default in so doing, the corp'n. might at any time, & from time to time, execute the work & recover the expenses thereof from such frontagers:—Held: (1) though the frontagers could be required under the sect. of the local Act to make a footway where no footway exists, they could not be required to contribute the expenses of repairing or modernising footways already existing.

(2) Sect. 11 of Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), which casts the entire maintenance of main roads upon the county council, does not repeal the sect. of the local Act which empowers the corp'n. to call upon frontagers to make & repair footways.—*LODGE v. 2463. — — — In 1853 a corp'n. obtained an Act which recited that it was expedient that further provision be made for the widening, paving, & altering of streets, the drainage & general improvement of the town, & other purposes. Sect. 109 provided that if any street or part of a street, not being a street repairable by the surveyor of the township, was not drained or sewered to the satisfaction of the comrs., the comrs. might cause such street or part of a street not so drained & sewered to be drained & sewered in such manner as they thought fit, & the expenses incurred by the comrs. in respect thereof should be repaid to them by the owners of the lands abutting on such street or part of a street, & should be recoverable from such owners as private improvement expenses. In 1872 the corp'n. obtained a further Act which recited that it was expedient to extend the boundaries of the town & borough, to construct new streets & bridges, to make better & further provision for the making & levying of rates, & for other purposes. Sect. 2 provided that the word "street" should apply to & include the whole or any part of any existing or future square, it:—Held: (1) the street had not become a public street by reason of the removal of the barricade; & (2) the town council were not barred by their actions from now calling on the proprietors to pave it, in respect that these actions had not prejudiced the proprietors in their obligation to pave the street.—*ALLOA MAGISTRATES v. row of houses, street, highway, road, lane. . . . Sect. 171 provided that where the corpn. caused any new sewer to be constructed in any street in which there was not a sewer, or in which the existing sewer was insufficient, they might charge the owners of the lands abutting upon such street with the payment of the expenses incurred in the construction of the same, & the payment of such expenses should be recoverable in like manner in every respect as private improvement expenses.

Ptfs. having resolved that a certain road which was a public highway repairable by the inhabitants at large & was brought within the borough boundaries should be drained & sewered, & deft. as owner of lands & property abutting on the road not having executed the works, in the exercise of their powers caused the sewer & branch drains in connection with the sewer to be constructed, & by sect. 171 they charged deft. with the payment of his proportion of the expenses incurred by them in the construction of the works:—Held: "street" as defined by sect. 2 of the Act of 1872 was applicable to all the streets in the borough, & was sufficient to make a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large a street for the purposes of the sect., & where the corpn. caused any new sewer to be constructed in any street in which there was not a sewer, or in which the existing sewer was insufficient, they had by sect. 171 the power to charge the owners of the lands abutting upon such street with the payment of the expenses incurred in the construction of the same.—*ROCHDALE CORPN. v. The local Act contained provisions similar to those contained in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150. Deft. was the lessee of the lands in question, under a building lease for nine hundred & ninety-nine years at a ground rent of £26, & at the time the expenses were incurred there were no buildings erected upon the lands. By the local Act the expenses were to be charged upon the several owners of buildings or lands in the street in proportion to the extent of the frontage of their respective buildings & lands; the word "owner" being defined as meaning the person for the time being receiving the rack-rent of the land . . . or who would so receive the same if such lands or premises were let at a rack-rent; & the definition of rack-rent being the same as that contained in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55):—Held: deft. was the owner of the lands in question within the definition in the local Act.

These payments being made, no surplus remained. In June, 1891, the local board apportioned sums in respect of estimated expenses of sewerage & paving the street, & demanded £113 from deft. as his share. The first mtgee. entered into possession in June, 1892. The works were not completed till July or Aug. following :—Held: deft. was "owner" of the houses, within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4 (embodied in the private Act), & liable for the estimated expenses apportioned in respect of them.—*TOTTENHAM LOCAL BOARD v. In 1901 S. was served with notice to execute certain improvements which was executed by the corpn., the apportionment of expenses being in Dec. 1905. Notice of the apportionment was served in Feb. 1906, & a demand for payment in June, 1906. 2489. — Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 4, 157.—(1) In making bye-laws, & insisting on their observance, a local authority is entitled to consider what may happen in the future, when present conditions have been altered & the neighbourhood has developed, even although the present necessity for the bye-laws may not be obvious.

(2) The power to make bye-laws, as regards new streets, given by sect. 157 of above Act, is not confined to streets in the popular sense of the term, namely, roadways, with houses on both sides of them, but applies to streets, as defined by sect. 4 of the Act, which are proposed to be laid out & constructed for the first time.

The bye-laws of an urban sanitary authority required every new street over 100 feet long to be so laid out that its width should be 36 feet at the least, & that it should be constructed for use as a carriage drive. W., who was employed as a builder, by G., the owner of land, to erect some cottages on the land of G., sent to the urban authority plans showing an intended footpath, 202 feet long & 5 feet wide, affording the principal access to the cottages. The proposed footpath being objected to as not complying with the bye-laws, W., without any authority from G., undertook that a roadway, 36 feet wide, should be made as soon as possession of sufficient land on the side further from the cottages to enable a road of the required width to be made could be obtained from a tenant whose tenancy could not be determined for some months. The plans, varied so as to show a roadway 36 feet wide, were approved on the conditions of the undertaking. The cottages were then erected, & the footpath was levelled & surfaced with rubble & sand. It was 5 feet & bounded on the further side from the cottages by an ancient hedge, & on the nearer side by a fence in which were openings giving access to the cottages:—Held: (3) defts. had laid out & constructed a street within the bye-laws; (4) the bye-laws were intra vires & reasonable; (5) although W., by reason of his having no control over the land, was not a proper party to the action, an injunction to enforce the obligations under the bye-laws must be granted against G.—A.-G. v. GIBB, [1909] 2 Ch. 265; 78 L. J. Ch. 521; 101 L. T. 16; 73 J. P. 343; 7 L. G. R. 754.

2490. Secondary means of access.—21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34, does not empower the making of a bye-law, that "no dwelling house shall be erected without having, at the rear or side thereof, a good & sufficient back street or roadway, at least 12 feet wide, communicating with some adjoining public street or highway, for the purpose of affording access to the privy or ashpit of such house."—*WAITE v. 2491. — Width.—An urban authority made a bye-law under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), directing that all new streets be of a width of not less than 10 feet. Certain ways existed communicating with the backs of the houses, & used by the urban authority, who did the scavenging of the town, for the purpose of obtaining access to privies & ashpits in order to remove the contents thereof. Plans were submitted for approval to the urban authority showing ways such as above described of the width of 6 feet, & the urban authority, who had published a bye-law under above Act, prescribing 10 feet as the minimum width of new streets, refused to approve such plans:—Held: discharging a rule for a mandamus to compel the approval of the plans, the ways in question were "passages" within sect. 4 of the Act, & therefore were "streets" within that sect., & therefore the urban authority had power by sect. 157 (1), to make bye-laws with respect to their width & construction, & the bye-law was valid.—R. v. GOOLE LOCAL BOARD, [1891] 2 Q. B. 212; 60 L. J. Q. B. 617; 64 L. T. 595; 55 J. P. 535; 30 W. R. 608, D. C.

(1) The words "new streets" in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 157, are not confined to streets constructed for the first time, but apply also to an old highway, formerly a country lane, which has long been a "street" within the interpretation clause (sect. 4) of that Act, & which by the building of houses on each side of it has recently become a street in the popular sense of the term.

(2) A bye-law made by an urban authority under that sect. provided that every new street should be laid out & formed of such width & as such level as the urban authority should in each case determine:—Held: "width" in sect. 157 & in the above bye-law meant width of roadway, & not width between houses on each side of the street; & the urban authority were not entitled under the above bye-law, or any other of their existing bye-laws, to disapprove of & pull down houses in the course of erection in a new street on the ground that the building line was too near the roadway.

The only facts upon which, I think, the case turns are these:—There is at P. a public highway called "New Lane," on each side of which within the last ten years a considerable number of houses, not all continuous, have been built; & the present applt. proposed to build a row of nine houses fronting upon that public highway. The local board, the urban authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), have objected to his right to do so, & have asserted the right to remove those houses if built otherwise than in the line set back from the roadway which they have defined (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—ROBINSON v. 2495. — Until whole street constructed.]—Applts., who were builders, gave notice to the S. local authority, resps., of their intention to lay out a certain new street, & plans for the construction of which were approved by resps. They subsequently gave notice that they intended to erect four new houses in that street, the plans of which were submitted to & approved by resps. Applts. began to erect these houses abutting upon or fronting that part of the new street which had been sewered, levelled, paved, metalled, flagged, & channelled to the satisfaction of resps.; but the whole of the new street had not been constructed & made good to the satisfaction of resps. within Sunderland Local Improvement Act, 1885 (c. clxxxiii), s. 37. Applts. were summoned in respect of the infringement of that sect., & were fined. They appealed:—Held: the conviction was right, & as applts. had given notice to lay out the whole of a new street, the urban authority, under their local Act, were entitled to withhold kept in repair by the sanitary authority & their predecessors, & was in fact a public road. This lane led out of the market square at B., & was of a width varying throughout its length from 10 to 20 feet. The plans, however, showed the lane where it bounded the landowner's property, & where the proposed new street debouched into it, of a width of 40 feet, by means of the inclusion therein of part of the adjoining land. The bye-laws of the sanitary authority which had been duly confirmed by the Local Government Board provided that: "4. Every person who shall lay out a new street which shall be intended for use as a carriage road, shall so lay out such street that the width thereof shall be 40 feet at least. 8. Every person who shall construct a new street shall provide at one end at least of such street an entrance of a width equal to the width of such street, & open from the ground upwards." The plans were rejected on the ground of non-compliance with bye-law 8. The landowner thereupon gave notice of his intention to make the proposed street in accordance with the plans. Upon motion on behalf of the sanitary authority for an injunction to restrain the landowner from constructing or commencing the new street until an entrance should have been provided according to bye-law 8:—Held: under the bye-laws of the sanitary authority, a person proposing to construct a new street must provide a mode of access thereto of a width equal to the width of the new street; it made no difference that the mode of access to the new street was by means of a public street if such street was of less than the required width: & an injunction must be granted as asked.—*BROMLEY LOCAL BOARD v. 2501. — Outside district of local authority.—The bye-laws of pltf. authority provided: "(4) Every person who shall lay out a new street which shall be intended for use as a carriage road shall so lay out such street that the width thereof shall be 36 feet at the least." "(8) Every person who shall construct a new street shall provide at one end at least of such street an entrance of a width equal to the width of such street & open from the ground upwards." Defts. proposed to construct a new street of the prescribed width, the entrance to which was to be by an already existing street outside pltf's. district. Such existing street was not of the width prescribed by pltf's. bye-laws. Pltfs. refused to pass defts.' plans for laying out such proposed new street on the ground that the entrance to such proposed new street was not in accordance with the bye-laws:—Held: pltfs. were justified in refusing to pass the said plans.—BARTON REGIS RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. STEVENS (1896), 61 J. P. 598; 12 T. L. R. 347, D. C.

Held: R. committed the offence, & there was nothing unreasonable in laying down an absolute rule as to width, such as the bye-law contained.—ROBERTS v. RICHARDS (1890), 54 J. P. 693, D. C.

2503. Subsequent diminution of width of street.—Whether intra vires.—A bye-law provided that "Every person who shall construct for use as a carriage road a new street intended to form the principal approach or means of access to any building" shall comply with certain requirements as to the width of the carriageway & footways:—Held: when once the construction of a new street has been completed no offence is committed against such a bye-law by a subsequent diminution of the width of the carriageway or footways below the required minimum.

Semble: Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 157, which authorises the making by urban authorities of bye-laws "with respect to the level, width, & construction of new streets," does not authorise the making of a bye-law which would render such a reduction of the original width of the street an offence.—TARRANT v. WOKING URBAN COUNCIL, [1914] 3 K. B. 796; 84 L. J. K. B. 314; 111 L. T. 800; 79 J. P. 22; 12 L. G. R. 1293, D. C.

2504. Raising street level.—Affecting low-lying land.—Reasonableness.—A public authority, acting under their local Act, required a new street to be constructed (if at all) with a minimum level of 9 feet above Ordnance datum. This would necessitate raising the level of some 200 acres at an estimated cost of £220,000:—Held: having regard to the nature of the locality & other circumstances, the requirement was reasonable.—GREAT SALTERNS SYNDICATE v. PORTSMOUTH CORPN. (1904), 68 J. P. 48.

2505. Channelling.—Alternative materials.—Uncertainty.—A bye-law of a local authority dealing with the construction of new streets provided that in all cases where the street was of a certain width the person constructing it should make on each side of it "a proper channel not less than 12 inches wide & 6 inches deep either of granite cubes laid on a bed of cement concrete at least 6 inches in thickness or in a suitable manner & with suitable materials":—Held: (1) the fact that the bye-law did not give any power to the person constructing the street to object before some independent tribunal that the requirement was unnecessary in the circumstances of the particular case did not make the bye-law bad as being unreasonable; (2) the liberty of making the channel in another manner & of other materials than those specified, did not make the bye-law bad for uncertainty.—*LEYTON URBAN COUNCIL v. "Person laying out" new street—Owner of land.]—The owner of certain building land gave notice to appts. of his intention to lay out certain new streets, including a certain back street, & deposited plans of such streets. Notice was also received by appts. from resp., a builder, of his intention to dig & lay out the foundations of four cottages in the back street, & a plan of such street was deposited by him. In the plans deposited by the owner & builder, the back street in which it was intended to build the four cottages was shown as of the width of 12 feet, whereas the minimum width of back streets prescribed by the bye-laws, made by the appts. in pursuance of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 157, was 18 feet. Appts. accordingly gave the owner & resp. notice of their disapproval of such plans, & on his proceeding to build the cottages according to the disapproved plans, appts. took out a summons against resp. for unlawfully laying out a new street on insufficient width contrary to their bye-laws, which summons was dismissed:—Held: the magistrates were right in dismissing the summons, the owner of the land & not the builder being the person who laid out the streets within the sect.—SUNDERLAND CORPN. v. BROWN (1880), 43 L. T. 479; 41 J. P. 831, D. C.

2517. What constitutes "laying out"—Physical act done on the street.]—The model bye-laws of urban authorities under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 157, with respect to the level, width, & construction of new streets, are of a penal character, & ought not to be construed so as to impose on the party whose compliance with them it is sought to enforce any greater burden than the bye-laws in their fair & natural construction will allow.

The bye-laws refer, as regards the laying out of a new street, to a physical laying out, & not to *a. What constitutes "laying out"—Fencing.]—*It is not necessary for the cours. of highways, in laying out a street to put up fences or grade the road.—R. v. McGOWAN (1877), 1 P. & B. 191.—CAN.

*b. Statutory precept for "laying out"—Disinterested freeholders.]—*Three magistrates, forming a part of the Ct. of Sessions, by whom the return of a a metaphorical one; & a person does not "lay out" a new street within their meaning merely by making a road a street by building houses on the side of it, but only if he does something on the street itself.

In 1907 deft. bought a field surrounded by a hedge, bordering on an occupation road about 19 feet wide, which had been made up under sect. 150 of above Act, & on the other side of which two houses had been built with their sides turned towards the road. No house fronted towards it. Deft. submitted to the local authority, in whose district the model bye-laws were in force, plans for building a row of houses on the field, to be approached by a footpath a few feet wide, leading from the road to the side of the houses furthest from the road, & with an open space of about 16 feet between them & the road. The local authority objected to the plans on the ground of their non-compliance with the bye-laws; & deft. thereupon removed the footpath, when it had reached a length of about 150 feet, & informed the authority that he had abandoned the intention of laying it out. Instead, he made the approaches to the houses on the side of the road, putting gates in the hedge opposite each house as it was completed, with cement paths leading to the houses. He also carried the drains under the road; but he did nothing on the road itself; nor had he made, or proposed to make, the space between the houses & the road part of the road:—Held: the footpath would have been a breach of the bye-laws, but in view of deft.'s abandonment of it there was no ground for an injunction; & while deft. by building the row of houses had made the road a street, he had not laid out a street within the bye-laws.—A.-G. v. DORIN, [1912] 1 Ch. 369; 81 L. J. Ch. 225; 106 L. T. 18; 76 J. P. 181; 28 T. L. R. 105; 56 Sol. Jo. 123; 10 L. G. R. 194.

2518. — Erection of houses along existing road.—W. had ground abutting on one side of a lane 250 feet long & 6 feet wide, adjoining a town, there being no other houses, & he built six cottages standing back 15 feet from the lane. The lane was within an urban district, the bye-laws of which required new streets to be 18 feet wide. W. was convicted by justices of laying out a new street contrary to the bye-laws:—Held: the justices were wrong, the mere fact of six cottages being built in the lane not making it a new street.—WILLIAMS v. POWNING (1883), 48 L. T. 672; 47 J. P. 486, D. C.

2520. — — — — —.]—A country lane in the neighbourhood of a town, & situate within the district of the urban district council of that town, was defined for the greater part of its length (581 yards) by hedges. On one side of it were buildings, extending for 485 feet along the lane, belonging to brickmakers, who were proposing to erect on the other side of the lane, opposite to their existing buildings, new buildings, which would extend for 233 feet along the lane:—Held: by the erection of these new buildings the lane between them & the old buildings opposite would become a "new street" within Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 34), s. 63, & subject to the provisions of that sect. as to width.

An interlocutory injunction was accordingly granted to restrain defts. (the brickmakers) from building so as to make or lay out the lane as a new street less than 30 feet wide.—*A.-G. v. 2521. — — — — — Right of way over private road.]—By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 157, every urban sanitary authority may make bye-laws with respect to the width & construction of new streets. Resps., an urban sanitary authority, made bye-laws providing that every person who should lay out a new street exceeding 100 feet in length should lay out such street as a carriage road, with footways, & of a width of not less than 36 feet. Applt. was lessee of a piece of ground, together with a right of way over the adjoining road, which was 15 feet wide, for a distance of more than 100 feet. Applt. commenced to build two houses on the ground of which he was lessee, but did not widen the road over which he had a right of way to 36 feet. He was summoned by resps. for laying out a new street of a width of less than 36 feet, contrary to the bye-laws:—Held: what applt. had done, in commencing to erect the houses on the piece of ground adjoining the road, did not amount to laying out the road as a new street, & he was not liable to be convicted.—*GOZZETT v. 2522. — — — — — Road widened.]—Applt. purchased 7 acres of land abutting on, but not comprising any part of, an old private road, together with rights of way over the road, intending to re-sell the land in plots for building. He attempted, without success, to sell the whole of the land, except a portion which he intended to make into a new road communicating with the private road in question. He subsequently sold three plots, granting the purchasers rights of way over the private road, but reserving to himself a narrow strip of land between the three plots & that road along the whole front of the three plots. The purchasers from applt. built on these plots; & applt. removed so much of the hedge separating his property from the private road as was opposite these plots, & threw the strip of land he had retained into the road so as to widen it. The land on the opposite side of the road was at the time, as applt. knew, in process of development as a building estate.—Held: there was no evidence that applt. had laid out or intended to lay out a new street within bye-laws made under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 157, as to new streets & buildings.—*FELLOWES v. 2523. ——— Openings made in roadside fence.—Defts. were the owners of a triangular piece of land within pltf's borough. Two sides of the triangle abutted upon public highways within the borough. Defts., in pursuance of a building scheme, commenced erecting houses on their land fronting the highways. Pltfs. alleged that defts. were laying out the highways as "new streets" which did not comply with the requirements of the borough bye-laws as to width, & they claimed, first, an injunction, & secondly, a declaration that pltfs. were entitled to remove or pull down any work begun or done by defts. in contravention of the bye-laws. The bye-laws, which were framed under the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), prescribed a penalty for infringement, to be recovered by summary proceedings, & provided that pltfs. might, subject to any statutory provision, in that behalf, remove, alter, or pull down any work begun or done in contravention of the bye-laws.—Held: (1) the facts were not sufficient to justify the inference that defts. were laying out the highways as "new streets" within the bye-laws; (2) the action was not maintainable in the absence of the A.-G.—*DEVONPORT CORPN. v. The opposite side of the road was defined by a wall enclosing a dwelling-house. The justices were of opinion that B. had defined the line of road & had converted the road into a

2541. What amounts to consent—Acquiescence.]—A board having statutory power to consent in writing to a particular act is not bound by tacit acquiescence. Pltfs., owners of a house & area situate in & fronting a street, altered the front of the house by throwing out bay windows projecting beyond the street line of frontage but not beyond the limits of the area. After the completion of the alterations defts., the local authority, threatened pltfs. with summary proceedings before the justices for the recovery of penalties under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), on the ground that pltfs. had set forward their building without the written consent of defts. under sect. 156 of the Act. Pltfs. then moved ex p. for an injunction to restrain defts. from taking these proceedings, alleging that as the alterations had been made over their own property, defts., in threatening proceedings, were acting ultra vires; that defts., having had notice of pltfs.’ intention to make the alterations, were bound by acquiescence; & that the justices had no jurisdiction as defts. had not made their complaint within six months after the alleged offence, as required by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 252. 2542. — Approval by building committee—Ratification by council.]—Def’t. had erected a building after submitting plans of it to the urban authority. The plans were certified by the borough surveyor as being in order, & were afterwards approved, subject to a slight amendment, by a resolution passed by a committee of the corpn. of L., the urban authority for the district. Subsequently various proceedings of the committee, including the resolution as to the plans, were approved & adopted at a general meeting of the corpn. A minute to this effect was entered in the minute book of the corpn., approved at the next general meeting, & thereupon signed by the chairman of the corporation. The new erections projected beyond the building line, & pl’tf., the owner of an adjoining house, brought this action, alleging that “no written consent” of the urban authority within sect. 3 of above Act had been obtained; & that, in consequence, the erection constituted a breach of such section. He maintained that he had suffered special damage thereby, & had therefore a private right of action; he claimed damages & a mandatory injunction against def’t. —Held: (1) upon the true construction of sect. 3 of above Act only one statutory offence was thereby created for which a fine, to be exacted by the urban authority, was constituted the appropriate penalty. The exaction of this fine was therefore the sole remedy, & pl’tf. had no cause of action; (2) had it been necessary to decide the point, the proceedings of the urban authority stated above would almost certainly have constituted a sufficient “written consent.”—MULLIS v. HUBBARD, [1903] 2 Ch. 431; 72 L. J. Ch. 593; 88 L. T. 661; 67 J. P. 281; 51 W. R. 571; 1 L. G. R. 769.

2543. — — — Knowledge of infringement.]—Applt. was convicted under sect. 3 of above Act for erecting & bringing forward certain bay windows of his house in a street beyond the front main wall of the house or building on one side of his house in the same street. Applt. had, before commencing to build, submitted plans of his house to resps. These plans were examined by resp.’s surveyor, & submitted to the roads & health committees of resp. council, & the committees stamped their approval on the plans, & the approval was signed by their respective chairmen.

Resp. council duly confirmed the approval. The plans thus submitted & approved showed a contemplated "bringing forward" of certain bay windows beyond the front main wall of the building on one side of the house. The attention of neither of the said committees nor of resp. council was specifically called to the intended projection. Resps. contended, inter alia, that the approvals & confirmation only extended to approval of the plans as complying with their bye-laws as regards building construction & drainage, & that, therefore, they had given no "written consent" to the "bringing forward" within sect. 3 of above Act:—Held: there was a "written consent" within the sect.—MERLETT v. CHARLTON KINGS URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1903), 67 J. P. 419, D. C.

2544. ————]—On Dec. 10, 1923, plans for a hotel were approved by the building committee of an urban authority without their attention being drawn to the fact that the proposed building would infringe Public Health (Buildings in Street) Act, 1888 (c. 52), s. 3, & on the faith of that approval the building was commenced on Dec. 16. On May 12, 1924, when a substantial portion had been erected, & after a complaint by an adjoining owner raising the exact point, the urban authority gave a written consent to the hotel being erected beyond the front main wall of the adjoining house. In an action by the A.-G. for a mandatory injunction to restrain the breach of the sect.:—Held: (1) there was a sufficient written consent within the sect. & no breach; (2) in the circumstances, in no case ought a mandatory injunction to be granted.—*A.-G. v. 2547. Glass show case—In front of photographer's house.]—An information was laid against applt., a photographer, by resps., an urban sanitary authority, for erecting a building without their consent, contrary to sect. 3 of above Act. The structure had been erected beyond applt.'s front main wall, fronting a certain street. It was made of wood & glass, & was used for showing photographs as an advertisement of applt.'s business. It was 9 feet 6 inches long, 3 feet wide from back to front, & 7 feet high. It was roofed over, had a glass front & a door, & it was fastened on four posts fixed into the ground for about 9 inches in depth. There was no brickwork about the building or basement. The justices found as a fact that this structure was a building within above Act, & convicted applt. of the offence of erecting it without the consent of the local sanitary authority:—Held: the justices were justified, in point of law, in coming to such a conclusion, & their finding in fact could not be disturbed.—*LEICESTER CORPN. v. 2548. Buildings of waterworks company—Under private Act—Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 93.]—Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888 (c. 52), is an "Act for improving the sanitary condition of towns & populous districts" within Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 93. Therefore, if the Act of 1847 is incorporated by the special Act of a waterworks co., the co. is liable to be convicted upon an information under sect. 3 of the Act of 1888 for erecting a building in a street beyond the front main wall of the house or building on either side thereof, inasmuch as the effect of sect. 93 of the Act of 1847 is to make the co. subject to the provisions of the Act of 1888.—*GRAND JUNCTION WATERWORKS CO. v. 2549. What constitutes "front main wall"—General rule.]—In considering which is the "front main wall" of a house or building for the purposes of sect. 3 of above Act, & whether such house or building is "on either side of" or "in the same street" as a house or building in course of erection, for the purposes of the same sect., all the circumstances of the case must be taken into consideration. The building must be looked at as a whole; its character, its position, its distance from the house or building which is being erected or brought forward in alleged contravention of sect. 3, must be considered; & particular wing or other projection must not be selected, the front of which is to be treated as the "front main wall" which is to give the governing line, nor are two buildings necessarily "in the same street" for the purposes of the sect., because one faces on the same road or street, or a continuation of the same road or street, as the other.

Regarding the asylum, then, as a whole, can it be properly said that within the fair meaning of sect. 3 it is a building on the side of deft.'s shops? In my opinion, no. I have looked at the general nature of the building, its position & its distance, 57 feet 3 inches from the nearest portion of deft.'s shops, & the fact that it is separated from deft.'s shops by a portion of a garden, then by a private road leading to the back of the asylum, & again by a strip of land belonging to deft. Looking at all these circumstances of the case, it appears to me not to be a building on a side of deft.'s shop within sect. 3 (ROMER, J.).—A.-G. v. EDWARDS, [1891] 1 Ch. 184; 63 L. T. 639.

HINCHCLIFFE* (1880), 24 Q. B. D. 168; 59 L. J. M. C. 19; 61 L. T. 780; 51 J. P. 421, D. C.

We held in a case of Williams v. Wallasey Local Board, No. 2545, ante, that the expression "house or building" as used in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, did not include new buildings in course of erection on land never before built upon, but in Public Health (Building in Streets) Act, 1888 (c. 52), the word "erect" is inserted as well "as being forward," so as to meet that decision (SMITH, J.).—WARREN v. but not abutting on, the west side of Westbourne Grove, part of Ormesby road, 240 yards north of a house on the west side erected in 1886. The house fronted towards the south. In Feb. 1894, T. bought some land, 70 feet deep, along the west side of Ormesby road, to the north of his house, with the object of erecting cottages upon it. On the east side of Ormesby road a number of houses had been built close up to the road. The building plans showed that the cottages would be somewhat nearer Ormesby road than T.'s house was. The urban authority decided that the cottages must be in line with T.'s house under sect. 3 of above Act. There was no continuous line of buildings where it was proposed to build the cottages:—Held: the cottages need not be in line with T.'s house, as, in the above circumstances, there would be no erection of a "house or building beyond the front main wall of the house or building on either side thereof in the same street."—*R. v. In 1889 R. acquired the adjoining plot on the east side, & built other two villas at the same distance back from the road as the first. In 1894, L., who had in 1887 acquired the plot adjoining R.'s plot on the west side, proposed to erect a house on his property with a clear space of only 21 feet between the house & the road. The local authority considered that the proposed new house was a building in a street "beyond the front main wall of the house or building on either side thereof in the same street," within sect. 3 of above Act & in the exercise of the discretion conferred upon them by that sect. refused to admit

See Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act 1888 (c. 52), s. 3.

2566. What constitutes "addition"—Movable porch—Adjacent but not attached to main wall—Question of fact.]—Resp. was the owner & occupier of a house in a terrace with a small garden between the house & the carriageway. The front door was approached by a pathway & a flight of stone steps. He had erected in front of the door & upon the steps a porch of wood & glass, roofed with felt & containing a seat. The porch from back to front was 4 feet 8½ inches deep, 7 feet 5 inches high at the eaves, 10 feet 1 inch high at the ridge of the roof, & 8 feet 6 inches wide. The back of the porch was immediately adjacent to the pilasters of the front door, & projected 6 feet 6 inches beyond the front main wall of the houses on either side. The porch was not attached in any way to the house & stood on wheels, three on each side. It was possible to move the porch a few inches from the pilasters of the doorway, but an iron railing prevented it from being moved further. Justices dismissed proceedings against resp. under sect. 3 of above Act, finding that the porch was not attached to the house & did not constitute an "addition to a house or building" within the sect.:—Held: the justices having found these facts, their decision should not be disturbed.—*SUNDERLAND CORPN. v. 2568. ———.]—Pltfs., a waterworks co., purporting to act under their local Act, proposed to erect a new pumping station on a piece of their land abutting on a street. Defts., the local authority, gave them notice that as the proposed new building would extend beyond the building line they objected, & should proceed before the magistrates for penalties under above Act. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action for a declaration that they were entitled to build without interference by defts. Defts. pleaded that there was no jurisdiction to make such a declaration, & alternatively that, assuming jurisdiction, it was discretionary & the discretion ought not to be exercised:—Held: on the authorities there might be jurisdiction to make such a declaration, but the cases were limited to injunctions against apprehended trespass. An injunction against merely proceeding before magistrates ought to be granted if at all in very special circumstances which did not exist in this case, & accordingly a fortiori the declaration asked for ought not to be made.—GRAND JUNCTION WATERWORKS CO. v. HAMPTON URBAN COUNCIL, [1898] 2 Ch. 331; 67 L. J. Ch. 603; 78 L. T. 673; 62 J. P. 566; 46 W. R. 644; 14 T. L. R. 467; 42 Sol. Jo. 571; subsequent proceedings, 67 L. J. Q. B. 903, D. C.

2569. ——— Dismissal by justice—Further proceedings for same offence—Res judicata.]—A. was summoned for an offence under sect. 3 of above Act in building a house, the front wall of which projected beyond the building line. At the hearing the justices were equally divided in opinion, & on the advice of their clerk the chairman dismissed the information. A second information was subsequently laid in precisely same terms, save that the period for which penalties were claimed was different from that in the first. The justices convicted:—Held: (1) the dismissal of the first information was a good dismissal, although the justices were equally divided; (2) such dismissal decided that the erection of the house was not an offence under sect. 3, & the continuing of that erection could therefore not be an offence.—*KINNIS v. Power to prescribe building line—After plans of rebuilding approved.—A., owner of a factory, which he was desirous of pulling down & re-erecting, sent plans & sections of his proposed new building, showing thereon its site with reference to the adjacent property, to the town council of the borough in which the factory was situate for their approval, before he pulled down his factory. An approval was returned to him by the building & improvement committee of the council, which committee had been appointed under a section in a local Act, enabling the town council to delegate its authority on any subject to a committee. A note was added to the approval, stating that the ratification of the approval of any plans & particulars by such committee referred only to such matters & to such parts of the said plans & particulars as were required to be set forth therein in accordance with the bye-laws made for the regulation & laying out of new streets & the erection of new buildings, which bye-laws were made under Local Government Act, 1858 (c. 98), s. 34; but such approval was not to extend to the doing of any work whatsoever other than that set forth, described, & required by such bye-laws. A., thinking that this was a sufficient approval of his plan pulled down his factory; afterwards he received a notice from the town council, under the powers given by Local Government Act, 1858 (c. 98), s. 34, that any new building to be erected must have its frontage set back to a line marked on an accompanying plan, such line being about 13 feet behind the line shown on the plan & sections first mentioned:—Held: the corp. were not at liberty to give any such notice after the approval given by their committee, & an injunction was granted to restrain them from interfering in any manner with the erection of the new building according to pltf.'s plan & sections.—*SLEE v. 2578. ——J.—The owner of a house after having in accordance with a bye-law of the Local Government Board left, on Oct. 16, a plan of an intended new building, the local board passed a resolution that the plan was approved of, & that he should be offered £40 for certain land of his thrown into the street. He refused to accept the £40 but proceeded with his works, & by Oct. 26 had pulled down the front wall of his house. On Oct. 27, the board passed a resolution abandoning the terms before offered, & requiring him to set his frontage further back. This notice was given under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 155, as on the front of a house having been pulled down. On Nov. 27, the owner of the house proceeded with his building, & on Dec. 21, he was served with notice to pull down his new building:—Held: (1) the local board having approved of a plan, & having allowed a house owner to proceed & pull down the front wall of his house, could not afterwards avail itself of the powers acquired when the front of a house has been taken down; (2) where a local board has not, during the month prescribed by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 158, signified its disapproval of plans laid before it, it cannot afterwards object to the building according to the plan; (3) a local board cannot, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 158, pull down a building without giving the owner an opportunity of showing cause why it should not be pulled down.—*MASTERS v. 2579. — Building taken down—Rebuilding of portion commenced—Alternative site.—Defts., being about to pull down a school & erect a new one, submitted plans to the local board. The local board objected to the plans, giving as a reason that they violated a bye-law, which obliged a person laying out a new street to leave it of a certain width. This bye-law was not applicable, as South Lane on which the school was fronted was not a new street. Defts. disregarded the objection, commenced their works on Jan. 5, 1885, laid the foundations of the main wall towards South Lane on Jan. 12, & proceeded rapidly with the erection of it. On Jan. 22 the local board prescribed a building line which did not interfere with the main wall, but would prevent the erection of certain annexes not then commenced, lying between South Lane & the main wall, which annexes were shown on the plans laid before the board. Defts. had ground enough to allow of the annexes being erected elsewhere. Defts. proceeded with the annexes, & the board brought their action to restrain them from building beyond the line, & to compel them to pull down what they had built beyond it:—Held: (1) where a building is taken down to be rebuilt, a building line may be prescribed under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 155, for any portion of it which has not been commenced, although other portions have been commenced, unless what has been commenced necessarily involves as a matter of construction a projection beyond the line afterwards prescribed, & here no such necessity existed, as the annexes could be erected elsewhere; the commencement of the main building therefore did not preclude the board from laying down a line which would prevent the erection of the annexes which had not then been commenced; (2) as the notice given by the board, though ineffectual for the purpose of empowering them to pull down the erection under sect. 158, gave defts. to understand that the board objected on the ground that the buildings according to the plan would make the street too narrow, the board had not done anything to induce defts. to believe that they would not prescribe a building line, & there was no equity to prevent the board from exercising their powers under sect. 155 on the ground that they had misled defts.—NEWHAVEN LOCAL BOARD v. NEWHAVEN SCHOOL BOARD (1885), 30 Ch. D. 350; 53 L. T. 571; 34 W. R. 172; 1 T. L. R. 626, C. A.

The second floor was not disturbed, but was shored up with timber, which was afterwards replaced by iron girders & brick piers. Shortly after the erection of the iron girders & piers had been completed the urban authority prescribed a building line under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 155, & commenced an action to restrain the owner from building in front of it:—Held: inasmuch as a substantial part of the house & of its front wall was left standing, neither the house nor the front thereof had been taken down within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 155, & the power to fix a building line had never arisen.—*A.-G. v. 2582. — Whether necessary.]—Action based on Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 155, for an injunction to compel deft. to remove a building completed before writ issued. Deft. owned a house in a street & being desirous of pulling it down & rebuilding it on the same site, duly deposited plans with the local authority. The latter thereupon adopted a plan showing a building line for the whole of the street which cut a considerable slice off the site of deft.'s house. This plan did not refer expressly to the house. The authority further resolved that his deposited plan "be not approved" & wrote to him to that effect. Correspondence ensued; deft. insisted on rebuilding on the site of the old house, & completed the new building. The authority did not give him notice under which sect. of the Act they were proceeding or make any tender of compensation; but they commenced this action for a mandatory injunction to compel deft. to pull down so much of the structure as was in advance of the building line. By their statement of claim they alleged that they had at all times been & now were ready to pay compensation:—Held: (1) a building line had been duly prescribed & the fact that it purported to refer to the whole of the street in general terms was immaterial, it was not necessary to give notice, & in fact deft.'s advisers knew, under which sect. the proceedings were taken; (2) tender of compensation was not a condition precedent to enforcing compliance with the building line, & if it was, deft. by his hostile attitude had waived the objection; (3) the dispute was trivial, but deft. had challenged the local authority & could not be allowed to avoid compliance with the building line; & a mandatory injunction must be granted.—*A.-G. v. #### D. Under Local Acts.

2590. Power to prescribe building line—After building commenced.]—(1) The corpn. of F. had power, under a local Act, to prescribe the line in which any house to be thereafter built or taken down for the purpose of being rebuilt or altered should be erected, on payment of compensation to the owner of any house required to be set back, & it was also provided that no new street to be thereafter laid out should be of less width than 40 feet, inclusive of footways, & in the case of existing streets, houses to be thereafter erected were to be set back so as to allow of a width of 40 feet:—Held: a church was a house, & a perpetual curate in whom the freehold of the site was vested under 43 Geo. 3, c. 108, an owner within the Act.

(2) A temporary church fronting to a road within the borough less than 40 feet wide having been pulled down with a view to erecting a permanent church, the corpn. gave notice to the clergyman in charge at the time of a resolution passed by them that the road on which the church abutted must be not less than 40 feet wide; but there was no statement that the additional width was to be gained on the side on which the church abutted, & it appeared that the street might have been widened on the side opposite without removing any buildings. Afterwards, but not till the foundations of the new church had been put in, the corpn. prescribed a line of building which came within the limits of the church as designed:—Held: they were too late, & could not restrain the erection of the church in the manner in which it had been commenced.—*FOLKESTONE CORPN. v. 2592. What is taking down part of wall—Window-sill removed.]—Applts., the owners of a beer-house licensed before 1869, gave orders to a builder to take out the sashes of a window & alter them. The builder, without their instructions or knowledge, removed the stone sill of the window & substituted for it two courses of brickwork. Applt. was convicted by the justices for an offence under Bristol Improvement Act, 1847 (c. cxxix), s. 17, because he had "taken down part of the front or external wall of a house to be rebuilt or repaired," & had not rebuilt the wall in accordance with the provisions of the sect. On appeal to quarter sessions the conviction was quashed by the recorder:—Held: whether the stone sill was or was not part of the external wall of the house, it having been removed without the knowledge of applts., it had not been taken down to be "rebuilt or repaired," & the decision of the recorder must be upheld.—*YABBICOM v. 2593. Projection in front of building—Tray for display of goods—Vested right.]—By a local Act if any person placed, hung up, or otherwise exposed any furniture, goods, produce, wares, merchandise, matter or thing, so that same projected into or over any footway, or beyond the line of any house, shop or building, at which same was or were exposed, he should be liable to a penalty. Justices refused to convict deft., who was charged under this sect.; but they stated, in the case reserved at complainant's request, that deft. exposed greengrocery, in which he dealt, on a cooler or tray of wood, projecting 2 feet 9 inches beyond the line of the brickwork of his building. This tray fell forward from the shop window, & when used was supported by iron stanchions & hinges. The steps of the adjoining house projected three inches further than this tray during the day. At night, & on Sundays, the tray was not beyond the line of deft.'s & the adjoining house; the street was exceptionally wide at this particular part. The deft.'s premises had been erected between thirty & forty years, & during that period the tenants had always used the same cooler or tray, or something of the same description:—Held: the Act must be taken to refer to the line of shop existing at the time of its passing, which in this case was the line of the tray; & the justices were right.—*WILSON v. The pole was bolted to the main portion of the building by a screw-bolt & nut, & could be removed by unscrewing the bolt & nut:—Held: the pole & flag could be a "sign" within Liverpool Improvement Act, 1882 (c. 2598. Arch—Removal by local authority—Power to remove—Interference with underground cable.]—R. & Co. were occupiers of land on both sides of F. street within the urban district of which the W.U.D.C. was the urban authority. In Apr. 1901, R. & Co. constructed a tunnel or culvert 12 feet beneath the carriageway of F. street for the purpose of carrying electric cables in connection with their business. The tunnel consisted of a concrete flooring & a brick archway. They subsequently changed their plans, & cutting through the concrete, laid the cables in pipes upon or nearly upon the clay subsoil, & filled in the flooring with fresh concrete. The W.U.D.C. gave them notice to remove the tunnel in accordance with Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 26. R. & Co. then removed the keystone of the arch, the tunnel fell in, & the subsidence was made good with ballast. The W.U.D.C. not being satisfied, brought an action claiming a declaration that they as the urban authority might properly cause the arch, vault, or cellar constructed by defts. under the carriageway of F. street to be altered, pulled down, or otherwise dealt with as the W.U.D.C. should think fit. R. & Co. instituted a cross action for an injunction to prevent the W.U.D.C. from cutting, disturbing, or injuring their pipes or electrical wires. The two actions came on together. It was argued on behalf of the W.U.D.C. that they had a right to remove the whole of the structure, including the pipes & wires:—Held: on the evidence, the pipes were not in any part of the structure, & therefore it was unnecessary to decide whether the concrete flooring was part of the tunnel; the W.U.D.C. were entitled to remove the structure, which they could & must do without injuring the pipes or wires.

The injunction in the cross action was granted.—WALKER URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. WIGHAM, RICHARDSON & Co., LTD., WIGHAM, RICHARDSON & Co., LTD. v. WALKER URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1901), 85 L. T. 579; 66 J. P. 152; 18 T. L. R. 107; 40 Sol. Jo. 85.

The hoarding stood more than 10 feet back from the street, & there was no fence between it & the street:—Held: as the hoarding had become for the time being de facto the boundary of the street there was evidence to support the conviction.—ROCKLEYS, LTD. v. PRITCHARD (1909), 101 L. T. 575; 74 J. P. 11; 7 L. G. R. 1069, D. C.

2603. — Question of fact.—The mere fact that a strip of land to which the public have no access happens to be between an advertisement hoarding & a highway, does not prevent such hoarding from being "in or abutting on or adjoining any street." Whether such hoarding is "in or abutting on or adjoining any street" in such circumstances is a question of fact to be decided by the justices.—STOCKPORT CORPN. v. ROLLINSON (1910), 102 L. 2604. Alteration of name by local authority—Remedy of landowner.—A landowner laid out a new street & called it by a certain name, but the local authority shortly afterwards decided that it should be known by a different name & put up that name in the street. The landowner objected & defaced the name so put up, & was convicted under Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 34), s. 64, which provides that the local authority shall cause to be put up in every street "the name by which such street is to be known," & impose a penalty upon any person who "pulls down or defaces any such name":—Held: the landowner had misconceived his remedy, if any, & the conviction was right.—COLLINS v. ## Part XIV.—Footpaths.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

2605. Footpath ploughed up—Right of public to deviate.—The public had a right to use a footpath across the field of A., but subject to the right of A. to plough it up when he ploughed the rest of the field. He did so plough it up, & having done so, did not set out or mark the line of the path, but left the public to tread it out. The public continued to walk across the field in the direction in which the path had been, but soon finding the path in a muddy & bad condition, turned out of it, & walked on either side thereof. To prevent them from doing so A. placed hurdles on the parts upon which the public so walked, leaving a space of about 6 feet in width where the path had been. Resp. having thrown down the hurdles, an action was brought against him by A. in a county ct. The judge having given judgment in favour of resp., the ct. reversed such judgment, holding that resp. could not claim a right to go off the line of the footpath or a right to pull down the hurdles. —ARNOLD v. HOLBROOK (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 90; 42 L. J. Q. B. 80; 28 L. T. 23; 37 J. P. 229; 21 W. R. 330.

2610. Extent of repair—Right to plough up footpath—Repair preventing exercise of right.—The inhabitants of the parish of P., in the county of S., enjoyed the right to use at all times a footpath across a close, of which pltf. was tenant. The tenant of the close had from time immemorial enjoyed the right to plough up the footpath. Defts., who were surveyors of highways to the parish, so repaired the footpath that pltf. could neither plough through it nor lift his plough over it; pltf. thereupon brought an action of trespass against defts.:—Held: the action was maintainable.—ARNOLD v. BLAKER (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 433; 40 L. J. Q. B. 185; 35 J. P. 775; 19 W. R. 1090, Ex. Ch.

Accordingly he cannot at common law make cuttings to improve the levels, or build bridges, where none formerly existed, to carry the path across streams.—RADCLIFFE v. 2612. Footpath in dangerous condition—Repair by local authority—In default of owner—Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (c. 53), s. 30.—A public footway ran along the top of a high bank of the river Mersey. By the action of the weather & by erosion caused by the river eating away the bank, portions of the bank upon which the footpath ran were washed away, portions of the footway fell into the river, & further portions of the bank were threatening to fall into the river. The footway was thus rendered dangerous to persons lawfully using it. Appls. were the owners of parts of the bank & of the site over which the footway ran; but there was no obligation upon them to repair the footway ratione tenuræ. Footpath in dangerous condition—Repairs by local authority.—A sidewalk on one of the principal streets of a town, had been laid down for so long a period as to become unsound, the scantling being so rotten as to be unable to hold the nails fastening the boards placed across them & its condition was such as to impose on the corp'n. a constant supervision over it; one of the boards was missing for a week, leaving a hole into which a person fell: Held: notice to the corp'n. of such defect in the sidewalk must be assumed, 2624. — Enlarged bridge—Whether public rights increased—Rights of adjoining owner.]—Deflt. was indicted for obstructing a footway. A bridge which spanned a small stream connected a footway which passed through deflt.'s land. The bridge had been washed away, & a new one was erected, which deflt. objected to, on the ground that it was much larger than the former bridge, & was calculated to give the public enlarged rights to use the footway to his detriment. Deflt. had cut down the new bridge at the point at which it rested on his land. Deflt. was at the trial found guilty, & he now moved for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the evidence:—Held: deflt. had not been injured by the enlargement of the new bridge, & he was able to prevent, if he so wished, cattle crossing over into his land by the erection of a stile. 2626. — Duty to attach lights—Prevention of accidents—Public Health Act (1875), c. 55.]—Defts., the highway & lighting authority, had erected a post at the entrance & in the centre of a footpath to prevent cattle straying up the footpath, & near the post they placed a lamp, which they were in the habit of lighting at nights. Pltf.

2627. — Prevention of user by wheeled traffic—Path set out under inclosure award.]—A lane in the seaside town of S., which ran from the High Street to the top of the cliff, & varied from 6 feet to 4 feet 4 inches in width, had in 1811 been set out under an award by the inclosure comrs. under a local Act as a public footpath. In 1903 the S. urban district council erected in the centre of the footpath an iron post to prevent the lane being used for wheeled vehicles. Deflt. having overthrown the post, the district council brought an action against him in respect of the alleged trespass, claiming damages & an injunction; & claiming further a declaration that the lane was a public footpath vested in the council & under the council's control, & that it was not a carriageway. Deflt. contended that the land was a public highway for all persons to go & return on foot, & with all manner of beasts & vehicles, & alleged that since the award of the comrs. there had been a dedication of the way as a cart road. Alternatively, he contended that before or since the award there had been a private right for the class consisting of the owners & occupiers of S. to use the way for carts. The evidence showed, on the one hand, that when carts were driven through the land the foot passengers were obstructed, & had to wait until the carts had completed their passage, & on the other hand, that for more than forty years past barrow carts, sometimes drawn by donkeys or ponies, had been continuously used in the lane:—Held: (1) the action, being in substance one for damages for interference with pltf.'s property could be maintained without the A.-G. being made a party; (2) the user for wheeled traffic was in its inception & all along a public nuisance, & no length of time could legalise it, & as regards dedication, no one had the power to dedicate even with the consent of the local authority. Damages & an injunction accordingly.—SHERINGHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. HOLSEY (1904), 91 L. T. 225; 68 J. P. 395; 20 T. L. R. 402; 48 Sol. Jo. 416; 2 L. G. R. 744.

Part XV.—Bridges and Approaches thereto.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

2628. Bridge as "public passage or place built upon"—Within local paving Act.]—By a local paving Act, the comrs. were to inspect "any street, square, or other public passage or place which now is or hereafter may be built upon, or in building," & if, upon inspection, they should be of opinion that the foot or carriageways required paving, etc., they were to "give notice to the owners, etc., of any such land, tenement, etc., situate in any such street, square, or other passage or place," & to compel them to pay the expenses of paving, etc.:—Held: a bridge, which formed part of a public highway through streets communicating with each end of the bridge, & which was built of brick over a canal & had brick walls from four to five feet high on either side, was not "a passage or place built upon" within the Act.—ARNELL v. REGENT'S CANAL CO. (1854), 14 C. B. 504; 23 I. J. C. P. 155; 18 Jur. 632; 2 W. R. 457; 130 E. R. 232.

2629. Bridge as street.—A bridge may be so situate as to be a street within the meaning of a statute.—BEAVER v. MANCHESTER CORPN. (1857), as reported in 26 L. J. Q. B. 311.

2630. Approach to new bridge—Bridge substituted for ferry—Whether approach a highway.—Before 1791 an old highway from London to York crossed the Ouse at Selby by means of a ferry. In 1791 the Selby Bridge Act was passed. After reciting that the building of a bridge near the ferry would be of great public utility, & that the persons named were willing to build a bridge at their own expense & to compensate the owner of the ferry rights, the Act authorised the incorporation of the said persons as the Co. of Proprietors of Selby Bridge, empowered them to build a bridge near the ferry with proper approaches, which were to all intents & purposes to be considered part of the bridge, & to charge tolls to all persons crossing the bridge. Under the Act the ferry rights & the soil of the approaches were vested in the co. The co. claimed that the approaches were their private property & that without their permission no one was entitled to be on them except for the purpose of crossing the bridge:—Held: the Act substituted one highway for another; the old highway consisted of the approaches to the ferry plus the passage across the river; the new highway consisted of the approaches to the bridge plus the bridge; & plfss., being owners of land adjoining an approach, & all persons lawfully entering upon or leaving such land were entitled to free access to it over the approach.—YORKSHIRE, EAST RIDING, COUNTY COUNCIL v. SELBY BRIDGE PROPRIETORS, [1925] 1 Ch. 841; 133 L. T. 628; 41 T. L. R. 802; 69 Sol. Jo. 775; 23 L. G. R. 547.

PART XV. SECT. 1.

t. What is a bridge.—A bridge which crosses a river, except at certain seasons when the water cuts off communication between the bridge & the dry land, is none the less a bridge within Public Works Act, 1884, ss. 11 & 12.—RANGIORA (MAYOR, ETC.) v. ASHLEY ROAD DISTRICT (1887), 6 N. Z. L. R. 119.—N.Z.

PART XV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—A. (a).

a. What is a county bridge—Length

fixed by statute.—A structure for crossing a lake, with a wooden section 243 feet long spanning the waters at low water, & embankments at either end of 140 feet & 260 feet respectively, the whole width being covered at high water, is a bridge over 300 feet in length, within Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, s. 617 (a), whereby bridges over that length may be declared county bridges.—Re MUD LAKE BRIDGE (1906), 12 O. L. R. 159.—CAN.

b. ———.—A bridge held not to be a bridge over 300 feet in length, within Consolidated Municipal Act,

Liability to repair new or improved bridges.]—See Part XV., Sect. 3, post

SECT. 2.—REPAIR OF BRIDGES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—LIABILITY TO REPAIR.

A. County Council.

(a) In General.

See Statute of Bridges, 1530–31 (c. 5); Bridges Act, 1803 (c. 59); Bridges Act, 1814 (c. 90), s. 2; Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 5; Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 20; Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), ss. 3, 6, 11, 79; County of Sussex Act, 1865 (c. 37), s. 13; Annual Turnpike Acts Continuance Act, 1875 (c. xciv), s. 10.

2631. What is a county bridge.—Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), provides for the repair of highways in a specified manner not at the expense of the hundreds. By sect. 5, "highways," in the construction of the statute, "shall be understood to mean all roads, bridges, except county bridges, carriageways, cartways," etc.:—Held: "county bridges" includes hundred bridges, & consequently hundred bridges are not highways under Highway Act, 1835, & therefore, hundreds are not relieved by that Act from liability to repair hundred bridges.

Semble: even if hundred bridges were not included in "county bridges" hundreds would not be relieved by Highway Act, 1835, from their liability to repair hundred bridges, as there are no negative words in the statute to relieve hundreds from that liability.

County bridge is an expression not known to the law. It is merely a compendious way of speaking of a public bridge the county is liable to repair (BOVILL, C.J.).—R. v. CHART & LONGBRIDGE (INHABITANTS) (1870), L. R. 1 C. C. R. 237; 39 L. J. M. C. 107; 22 L. T. 416; 34 J. P. 454; 18 W. R. 791; 11 Cox, C. C. 502, C. C. R.

2632. ——— Whether every bridge in a highway.—The inhabitants of a county are bound to repair every public bridge within it, unless when indicted for the non-repair of it, they can show by their plea that some other person, or body politic or corporate, is liable; & every bridge in a highway is, by Statute of Bridges, 1530–31 (c. 5), taken to be a public bridge for this purpose. Therefore where Queen Anne, in 1708, for her greater convenience in passing to & from Windsor Castle, built a bridge over the Thames at Datchet, in the common highway leading from London to Windsor, in lieu of an ancient ferry, with a toll, which belonged to the Crown; & she & her successors maintained & repaired the bridge till 1790, when, being in part broken down, the whole was removed, & the materials converted to the use of the King, by whom the ferry was re-established as before:—Held: the inhabitants of the county of Bucks, who, in answer to an indictment for the non-repair of that part of the bridge thirteen years afterwards, pleaded these matters, & traversed that the bridge was a common public bridge, were bound to rebuild & repair it.—*R. v. h. Abandonment by company—Assumption by county.—A bridge built in 1857, by a joint stock co. over the Grand river, which separates two townships was destroyed by a storm, rebuilt in 1863, & kept in repair since by tolls collected upon it. In 1873 it became out of repair & dangerous, & the secretary of the co. wrote to the county council that the co. abandoned the bridge. The county having been indicted for not repairing it:—Held: they were not liable; for by the statute then in force, 35 Vict. c. 33, s. 9, the abandonment by the co. could only be by bye-law; & there having been no bridge there before, there was nothing for the county council to resume, & they had refused to assume this bridge, which had become a public flood water, which were equally necessary to the safety of the main bridge & the causeway:—Held: the inhabitants of the county were not bound to repair such arches being at the distance of more than 300 feet from the end of the main bridge.—R. v. OXFORDSHIRE (INHABITANTS) (1830), 1 B. & Ad. 289; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 354; 109 E. R. 794.

2647. —[A structure, 1275 feet in length, consisted of forty-two arches, divided, at some points, by a stone causeway, at others by the piers only. A common highway passed over it. A river flowed constantly under five of the arches at one end of the structure; a brook flowed constantly under an arch at the opposite end. The other arches lay across meadow land; the water flowed under all of them in times of flood; & under most of them there was stagnant water at all times. The county had immemorially repaired the whole structure, & had rebuilt & widened several of the arches under which there was no constant stream. Parts of the whole structure, other than the five arches, had been presented at different times, under the name of S. Bridge, by the grand jury, as out of repair, & repaired thereupon by the county:—Held: upon these facts, the whole structure must be deemed a bridge, repairable by the county: there being no general rule of law that arches, under which there is not a constant running stream, cannot form a part of a county bridge.—R. v. DERBYSHIRE (INHABITANTS) (1842), 2 Q. B. 745; 2 Gal. & Dav. 97; 11 L. J. M. C. 51; 6 Jur. 483; 114 E. R. 290.

2650. Whether structure bridge or culvert—Question of fact.—[If a judge ad nisi prius, being pressed to say whether, upon the evidence before him, a particular structure comes within the description of a bridge, gives his opinion on that point, as upon a question of fact, the alleged inaccuracy of such opinion is no ground for moving to set aside the verdict on account of misdirection. Upon a question, whether a particular structure be a bridge or a culvert, the fact of its being without parapets is not decisive. Nor the fact that it is built over water flowing in a channel between banks; though nothing can be a bridge which is not built over such a flow of water.—*R. v. 2651. —[A bridge has been built before Bridges Act, 1803 (c. 59), over a stream of water. The stream was never known to be dry, but in the winter its depth only averaged 2½ feet. It was part of a sheet of water crossing low land, & at the place where the bridge crossed it, it was confined by embankments to prevent it from overflowing the adjoining meadows. The judge left it to the jury whether this structure were a bridge over a stream of water, for, if so, it was not necessary that it should be for the convenience of the public under sects. of the Act, but the county were liable to repair it.—*R. v. Before 1812 a highway crossed it, & the water was conveyed in a wooden trunk two feet wide & deep under the surface. In 1812 the highway was improved, & the wooden trunk converted into a solid culvert made of stone, & in 1840 this again was replaced with a larger opening, square at the top, but similarly formed under & across the highway. The parish repaired the highway & structure, but latterly a structure had been again made, enlarging the capacity so as to admit more water, & it was sought to make the county liable for repairs:—Held: it was a question of degree whether it was a culvert or a bridge, & it was not a bridge.—*R. v. 2656. — Replacement of old bridge by new—Increased user by public.—A particular parish was bound by prescription to repair an old wooden footbridge used by carriages only in times of flood. About forty years ago the trustees of the turnpike road built on the same site a much wider bridge of brick, which had been constantly used ever since by all carriages passing that way. To an indictment against the county for not repairing this bridge:—Held: a plea that the parish had immemorially repaired & still ought to repair the said bridge was not supported by evidence of the above facts; & the burden of repairing the new bridge must be borne by the county at large.—*R. v. 2657. County not liable for repair—Bridge not erected to satisfaction of county surveyor.—Trustees appointed by a local Turnpike Act are individuals or private persons within Bridges Act, 1803 (c. 59), s. 5; & a bridge erected by such trustees after the passing of the Act, but not under the direction or to the satisfaction of the county surveyor, etc., is not a bridge which the inhabitants of the county are liable to repair.—*R. v. 2658. Expiry of turnpike trust—Annual Turnpike Acts Continuance Act, 1870 (c. 73)—No actual repair by trustees.—By a local Act of 1827 a road passing over a bridge was made repairable by trustees; but at no time was the bridge or its approaches actually repaired by them. The road became an ordinary highway. By another local Act of the same year a canal co. was empowered to make, maintain, & support bridges across their navigation, provided no existing liability to repair a bridge not erected or altered by the co. should be affected. The co. raised the surface of this bridge, without altering the structure, in order to give the approach to another bridge over their navigation the incline required by their Act. They did this without reference to the county surveyor or justices. By Annual Turnpike Acts Continuance Act, 1870 (c. 73), s. 12, where a turnpike road shall have become an ordinary highway, all bridges which were previously repaired by the trustees of such turnpike road shall become county bridges, & shall be kept in repair accordingly:—Held: by this alteration this bridge had not become repairable by the canal co., & this general provision of the last Act was not limited to those bridges erected by private expense, which alone were repairable by a county under Bridges Act, 1803 (c. 59), s. 5; nor to bridges which had been actually repaired by trustees.—R. v. SOMERSET (1878), 38 L. T. 452; 42 J. P. 501, D. C.

2659. — Addition to old bridge.—An ancient bridge existed between county B. & county C., & H. was bound ratione tenuræ to repair it. Afterwards a turnpike trust was created, & the trustees repaired the road & approaches. The trustees finding floods on the B. side, added, apparently without authority, two new arches, thereby extending the bridge & approaches & improving the road. The new arches were wholly on the B. side, & within the county of B., the turnpike trust having ceased:—Held: under sect. 12 of above Act, the burden of repairing the new portion of the bridge was now on the county of B.—R. v. BUCKINGHAM COUNTY (1878), 43 J. P. 175, D. C.

2660. — Bridge situated within borough—Separate trusts for road & bridge.—Where a toll bridge has been built, & a turnpike road made in connection with it under a local Act, on the termination of the period of the trust, though the bridge is within the boundaries of a municipal borough, it becomes such a county bridge under sect. 12 of above Act, as to make it repairable by the inhabitants of the county, unless there is some immemorial usage imposing a liability on the inhabitants of the borough to repair all bridges within its boundaries.

A toll bridge was made over the B. river at W. for the purpose of connecting the back streets of W. with the county districts on the other side of the river. A turnpike road was made in connection with the bridge; both the road & the bridge were constructed under one Act. There were separate trusts of the bridge & the road, but the trustees of the one were trustees of the other. This bridge was within the municipal boundaries of the borough of W. On the expiration of the trust the county repaired the road, but the bridge was allowed to fall into disrepair. The county of D., in which the bridge was situated, was thereupon indicted for its non-repair, & was found guilty:—Held: the county was rightly convicted; & as there was nothing shown in the case to cast the liability to repair on the borough in which the bridge was situated, on the expiration of the period of the trust affecting the bridge, it became a county bridge repairable by the inhabitants of the county under sect. 12 of above Act.—R. v. DORSET (INHABITANTS) (1881), 45 L. T. 308, D. C.

2661. — Reconstructed bridge.—About the year 1835, under the powers of a local Turnpike Act, a new turnpike road was constructed & was carried over a canal, now owned by plffs., by a bridge erected by the road trustees. This road ceased to be a turnpike road in 1875. The bridge, which was situate in a county borough, of which defts. were the highway authority, replaced an accommodation bridge erected by plffs.' predecessors in title. Owing to mining operations the bridge & the canal subsided, & plffs., acting reasonably for the protection of the canal, raised the banks, with the result that the level of the water came so near to the under-surface of the bridge that the latter became an obstruction to the navigation; the bridge was also dangerous to traffic passing over it. In an action by plffs. in effect to compel defts. to abate the nuisance, it was agreed between the parties that the bridge should be reconstructed at its original level, the cost of the work to be ultimately borne by the parties according to their respective legal liabilities:—Held: (1) upon the construction of the local Turnpike Act, the road & the bridge were repairable by the road trustees, consequently by virtue of above Act the bridge had become a county bridge & was repairable by defts., & repair involved reconstruction; (2) inasmuch as the obligation to reconstruct did not authorise debts. to create a nuisance, they were liable for the cost of raising the bridge to its original level as well as for the cost of reconstruction; (3) a report & an estimate prepared by the then surveyor to the road trustees with reference to the construction of the turnpike road were in the circumstances admissible in evidence as entries made by a deceased official in the discharge of his duty.—*NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. 2672. Dedication & adoption—Question for jury.

—(1) Upon the trial of an indictment against the inhabitants of a county for the non-repair of a bridge built by private owners, but not built in an existing highway, the true effect of the evidence as to the dedication to & the adoption of the bridge by the county is always a question for the jury. The fact that such a bridge is of public utility & is used by the public is not necessarily conclusive against the county on the question of liability, user & utility being only elements for consideration in determining that question; but there need not, in addition to evidence of public user & public utility, be proof of an overt act amounting to a formal adoption by a body capable of representing & binding the county.

(2) Where a verdict of not guilty has been returned upon an indictment for non-repair, a new trial will not be granted; but under very special circumstances the ct. may order all proceedings upon the judgment to be suspended, so as to give an opportunity for the question to be again raised upon a fresh indictment.—*R. v. 2676. ————Bridge built before Act—Bridge repaired & widened.—Before above Act there had been a public county bridge, which was of wood, resting on stone abutments. After that Act passed, the wooden part of the bridge was, during a flood, carried some distance down the river, but the stone abutments remained. Part of the wooden materials being afterwards collected together, were, with new materials formed into the upper part of a bridge, which was wider than it had been before the flood, & placed upon the old abutments. This was done at the expense of the parish, & not under the direction of the county surveyor:—Held: this was not a bridge “erected or built” after the passing of above Act; & the inhabitants of the county were bound to repair it.—R. v. DEVON (INHABITANTS) (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 383; 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 212; 1 Nev. & M. C. 223; 2 L. J. M. C. 74; 110 E. R. 832.

2677. Enlargement of borough — Bridge previously repairable by county.—A borough, incorporated by charter with a non intransmittant clause, was enlarged, under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 35, & 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 7, by the addition of a parish in the same county, containing a bridge, which, until that time, the county had repaired. There was no evidence that the borough had been used to maintain any bridges:—Held: the transfer of the new district did not render the borough liable to repair the bridge.—*R. v. 2678. Quarter sessions borough—Contribution to cost of non-county bridges—Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), ss. 6, 35.—The exercise by a county council of the powers conferred on them by sect. 6 of above Act of purchasing or taking over existing bridges not then being county bridges, or erecting new bridges, or maintaining, repairing, or improving any bridges so purchased, taken over, or erected, is a “purpose for which the quarter sessions of the county” were “authorised to incur cost” within sect. 35 (2); & consequently a quarter sessions borough, not being a county borough, but containing a population of ten thousand or upwards, which, by reason of its liability to repair the bridges within the borough, was at the passing of the Act exempt from contributing to the costs of the then existing county bridges, cannot be assessed to county contributions in respect of costs incurred by the county council in the exercise of any of the above-mentioned powers.—*BURY ST. 2679. Agreement with railway company—Repair of road over bridge—Bridge widened by tramway company—Liability of railway company.—Under statutory powers conferred in 1859, resps. constructed a railway through the parish of T., certain highways being carried over the railway by a bridge constructed by resps. The roadways over the bridge & the approaches became repairable by resps. under Railways (Consolidation) Act, 1815 (c. 20), s. 46. In 1877 appls.’ predecessors agreed with resps. to keep in repair the roads over the bridge & the approaches for a payment by resps. of £10 a year. Appls.’ predecessors & appls. kept them in repair down to 1903. In 1900 a tramway co. promoted a Bill for power to construct a tramway over the bridge & approaches. Resps. entered into an agreement with the tramway co. that the latter should take over resps.’ liability with reference (inter alia) to the bridge & the approaches & should widen the bridge & keep in repair the road when so widened. Appls. also made an agreement with the tramway co. that the tramway co. should not construct the tramway over the bridge or the approaches until the widening of the bridge had been carried out in such manner as resps. might approve. After both these agreements had been entered into, the tramway co.’s Bill was passed & under the Act of Parliament the bridge was taken down by & at the expense of the tramway co., & a new, larger, & wider bridge was erected, & the approaches widened by the tramway co. to the satisfaction of resps., the new bridge being capable of taking four railway tracks below it, instead of two tracks as previously. The tramway was duly constructed & was opened on Apr. 1, 1903, & the road forming part of the highway before the widening took place became repairable by the tramway co. under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78).

r. Bridge dedicated to public—In public use for long period.—Where a bridge connecting two highways was dedicated to the public & in public use for a number of years, forming part of a thoroughfare on which houses had been built, for which it was the only direct mode of communication to the south, & for nine or ten years had been repaired by the municipality out of the public funds, although no bye-law had been passed establishing or assenting it:—Held: the municipality were bound to keep it in a proper state

b. Road Boards substituted for county council.—When a proportion of the cost of maintaining a bridge falls on

On Dec. 1, 1903, applts. in consequence of the substitution of a new bridge & the increase in the surface of the road declined to continue to repair the road under the agreement of 1877 & gave notice to resps. to repair the road over the bridge under Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 46. Resps. annually tendered to applts. £10 & all arrears under the agreement of 1877. Applts. summoned resps. for neglecting to repair the road over the bridge & the approaches:—Held: in the circumstances the rebuilding & widening of the bridge was, so far as resps. were concerned, the act of a paramount authority, namely, the tramway co., under their statutory powers; resps.' obligation so far as it had reference to the old roadway, was not altogether done away with; the agreement of 1877 still stood; any extra burden occasioned by the widening thrown upon the railway co. had to be borne by the tramway co.; & the justices were right in dismissing the summons.—*TEDDINGTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. more, imply a new incorporation: yet where the same charter recited that it was an ancient borough in which a guild was theretofore founded & endowed with lands, out of the rents, revenues, & profits of which a school & an alms-house were maintained, & a bridge was from time to time kept up & repaired; which guild was then dissolved, & its lands lately come into the King's hands; & further reciting that the inhabitants of the borough, from time immemorial, had enjoyed franchises, liberties, free customs, jurisdictions, privileges, exemptions, & immunities, by reason & pretence of the guild & of charters, grants, & confirmations to the guild, & otherwise, which the inhabitants could not then hold & enjoy by the dissolution of the guild & for other causes, by means whereof it was likely that the borough & its government would fall into a worse state without speedy remedy; & thereupon the inhabitants of the borough had prayed the King's favour for bettering the borough & govt. thereof, & for supporting the great charges which from time to time they were bound to sustain, to be deemed worthy to be made, etc., a body corporate, etc., & thereupon the King, after granting to the inhabitants of the borough to be a corp., as before stated, granted them the said bounds & limits as the borough & the jurisdiction thereof from time immemorial had extended to: & then the King, "willing that the alms-house & school should be kept up & maintained as theretofore," without naming the bridge, " & that the great charges to the borough & its inhabitants from time to time incident, might be thereafter the better sustained & supported, granted to the corp. the lands of the late guild: & it further appearing by parol testimony, as far back as living memory went, that the corp. had always repaired the bridge:—Held: taking the whole of the charter & the parol testimony together, (1) this was a corp. by prescription, though words of creation only were used in the incorporating part of the charter of Edward VI.; (2) the burden of repairing the bridge was upon such prescriptive corp., during the existence of the guild before that charter; (3) though the guild, out of their revenues, had in fact repaired the bridge; which was only in case of the corp., & not ratione tenuræ; & the corp. were still bound by prescription, & not merely by tenure; & therefore a verdict against them upon an indictment for the non-repair of the bridge, charging them as immemorably bound to the repair of it, was sustainable.—*R. v. 2692. Toll bridge—Right to toll for maintenance of bridge—Bridge out of repair—Ferry established.—An Act of 20 Geo. 2, after reciting that it would be for the convenience of the inhabitants of the counties of Surrey & Middlesex that a bridge should be built across the Thames from W. to S., enacted that it "shall & may be lawful for S., his heirs & assigns, to build the said bridge." & it was further enacted, "that for & in consideration of the great charges & expenses S. his heirs, or assigns, would be at, not only in building the bridge, but also in erecting & maintaining, other matters necessary to be erected, etc., it shall & may be lawful for the said S., his heirs & assigns, from time to time to take" certain tolls by way of pontage for every person, carriage or horse passing the bridge. & after reciting that it may happen that the bridge may receive such damage as to be dangerous or impassable, it further enacted that it such case "it shall & may be lawful" to S., his heirs & assigns, to set up a ferry across the river as near the bridge as conveniently may be, & take for the passage over the ferry the pontage granted by the Act, "provided that the ferry shall not continue longer than is necessary for repairing or rebuilding the bridge." The bridge was made extra-parochial, & was not to be deemed a county bridge so as to make either Surrey or Middlesex liable to repair it. A subsequent Act of 20 Geo. 3, after reciting that by the former Act certain tolls & powers had been granted to S. to build the bridge, & that it had been accordingly built & passable for many years, & that it is now in a ruinous condition, & if not effectually repaired or rebuilt would be manifestly to the inconvenience of the public, & that M. was the sole proprietor, & had proposed to effectually repair or rebuild it, & that the pontage granted under the former Act had been found by experience greatly inadequate to the expense of building & keeping in repair the same, enacted that it should be lawful to M., his heirs & assigns, to take, under this & the former Act, certain increased tolls. The bridge having been built under the first Act, the public constantly used it, & the proprietors for the time being took the tolls & exercised the powers of the two Acts, & did all the necessary repairs until the year 1859, when the principal arch fell in, & the bridge became impassable. On this deft., the present proprietor of the bridge, set up a ferry, & took, & continues to take, the tolls authorised by the two Acts:—Held: upon the true construction of the two statutes, although there was no duty expressly imposed, yet, inasmuch as the taking of the tolls was on condition & in consideration of building & maintaining the bridge, deft., at least as long as he remained proprietor & took the tolls, was bound to reinstate the bridge & maintain it in a state practicable for passage. 2693. Charity fund for repair—Repair by public authority—Reimbursement from charity trustees.]—By a deed of feoffment of Mar. 4, 1576, one H. conveyed certain land to feoffees to the use & behoof of the reparation of, among other things, U. Bridge, & by an order of May 7, 1851, it was declared that the trustees were bound to set apart a third of the annual rents & profits of the charity estate for this purpose, any surplus to be accumulated. As the result of two private Acts of Parliament of 1846 & 1881, & an agreement between the justices & the S. comrs., part of the existing U. Bridge was a swing bridge, constructed to open to allow traffic on the river to pass to & fro. By virtue of these Acts & this agreement the comrs. were bound to keep in repair the opening portion of the bridge. Having spent a sum of over £200 in 1909 on these repairs the comrs. claimed to be reimbursed by the trustees of the charity out of the funds accumulated in their hands. The county council objected to the fund being applied for the benefit of the comrs. on the ground that the swing bridge was on a different footing to the rest of the bridge :—Held : (1) the repairs done by the comrs. were reparations of the bridge & the fund was by the terms of the feoffment applicable to such reparations, though the burden of repair had been cast by the legislature on a public body ; (2) the opening portion of the bridge was part of a bridge of special construction & the trustees were bound to keep the whole bridge in repair so far as the charity funds applicable for the purpose sufficed.—*Re HALL'S CHARITY, SEVERN COMRS. v. 2694. Bridge under control of drainage commissioners—Repair of bridge not "drainage work."

—By Somersetshire Drainage Act, 1877 (c. xxxvi), appts. exercised an exclusive jurisdiction over the arterial drainage of separate & distinct river valleys in Somersetshire, including the valley of the river P. Resps. were a drainage district board & had exclusive jurisdiction over the non-arterial drainage of the lands in the district of the P. reaching to & including the L. Bridge. That bridge had existed from early times & carried the high road connecting Exeter, Taunton, Bath, & other populous places. Before 1839 the bridge consisted of nine arches so constructed as to impede the flow of water down stream, & until 1839, the bridge & the roadway over it were repaired by the L. corpn. In Mar. 1839, an agreement was made between that corpn. & the "Company of Proprietors of the P. Navigation," a co. which was incorporated by Parrett Navigation Act, 1836 (c. ci), hereinafter called "the co.," whereby the corpn. agreed to pay £500 towards the expenses to be incurred by the co. in building a new bridge over the P. The co. erected the new bridge, & the money was duly paid. Sect. 10 of Parrett Navigation Act, 1839 (c. xxxvii), empowered the co. to make & levy certain tolls on all goods carried to or through or beyond L. Bridge if the co. pulled down the old bridge & rebuilt it with not more than three arches, so as to allow a freer & easier passage of the water & so as to give a carriageway & a footway of a certain width, provided that "after the completion of the said bridge the said co. shall at all times thenceforth, at their own costs & charges, keep the same bridge & the roadway over the same in good & sufficient repair." By Somersetshire Drainage Act, 1877 (c. xxxvi), ss. 117, 118, the whole undertaking of the co., together with all its powers & liabilities, was transferred to appts., & by sect. 121 they were empowered to use the undertaking for the drainage of lands within their jurisdiction & to abandon the user of the undertaking for the purpose of navigation together with the power of levying tolls. By s. 2, the expression "drainage work" was defined as including "all works which the comrs. or district board have power to execute or acquire authority over under the Act." By s. 32, the powers of the comrs. & of the district board extended to "maintenance of existing works" & included the repairing of all bridges :—Held : the repair of the roadway over the bridge was not "drainage work" within the Act of 1877, & appts. were not entitled to recover the cost of repairing it from resps.—SOMERSETSHIRE DRAINAGE COMRS. v. LANGPORT DRAINAGE DISTRICT BOARD (1919), 89 L. J. K. B. 273 ; 122 L. T. 378 ; 84 J. P. 10 ; 18 L. G. R. 87, D. C.

2695. Bridge over fen drain—Discretion of commissioners to repair.—Certain comrs. for draining of fen land were appointed under a local Act of the reign of George II., & their powers extended by an Act of the reign of George III., passed in 1801. In 1873 they sold certain land adjoining a bridge which crossed one of the drains forming part of their drainage system, but not, as was found as a fact, any part of the soil of the bridge. In that year they repaired the bridge, & they again repaired it in 1902. Pltf. was the present owner of the land sold in 1873, & in 1902 the then owner was the sole comr. :—Held : pltf. had failed on the facts to prove any liability in the comrs. to keep the bridge in repair if in their discretion they no longer thought it necessary to do so.—TUCK v. UPWELL, OUTWELL, DENVER & WELNEY DRAINAGE COMRS. (1922), 87 J. P. 97 ; 21 L. G. R. 17.

2696. Covenant to repair—Until bridge "taken over" by local authority—What amounts to "taking over."—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, defines "street" as including "any highway . . . & any public bridge, not being a county bridge, & any road. . . ."

By a deed made in 1900 one G. obtained liberty to construct a bridge over a watercourse belonging to two canal cos. & to carry a road thereover, & he covenanted to repair & maintain the bridge until the road & bridge were "taken over" by the local authority. In 1915 the local authority by a notice under sect. 152 of the above Act, declared the road which passed over the bridge to be a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large & the road thereupon, by sect. 149, became vested in the local authority. No steps were taken by the local authority to declare the bridge to be a county bridge :—Held : the local authority had "taken over" within the meaning of the covenant not only the road but the fabric of the bridge, & therefore that no obligation now rested upon G. or his representatives to repair & maintain the bridge.—REGENT'S CANAL & DOCKS CO. v. GIBBONS, [1925] 1 K. B. 81 ; 94 L. J. K. B. 46 ; 132 L. T. 631 ; 89 J. P. 4 ; 41 T. L. R. 12 ; 69 Sol. Jo. 195 ; 22 L. G. R. 759.

2702. Enlarged bridge—Footbridge added.]—To an indictment against the inhabitants of a county, for the non-repair of a footbridge, they pleaded that it was parcel of a carriage bridge, which A. was bound to repair ratione tenuræ. Replication admitted the liability of A. to repair the carriage bridge, but denied that the footbridge was parcel of the same; whereupon issue was joined. The evidence was, that the carriage bridge mentioned in the pleadings had been built before 1119, & that certain abbey lands had been ordained for the repairs of the same, & the proprietors of those lands, of which those mentioned to be held by A. were part, had always repaired the bridge so built. In 1736 the trustees of a turnpike road, with the consent of a certain number of the proprietors of the abbey lands, constructed a wooden footbridge along the outside of the parapet of the carriage bridge, partly connected with it by brick work & iron pins, & partly resting on the stone work of the bridge:—Held: this (being the footbridge mentioned in the indictment) was not parcel of the carriage bridge which A. was bound by tenure to repair, & the county was liable to repair the footbridge.—R. v. MIDDLESEX (INHABITANTS) (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 201; 1 L. J. M. C. 16; 110 E. R. 75.

2703. Liability of owner or occupier—Infant owner—Guardian occupier.]—An infant, whose guardian is in the occupation of the estate, & in receipt of the rents & profits, is not liable to the repair of a bridge ratione tenuræ, either as owner or occupier. The guardian in socage is such an owner & occupier as to be liable to the discharge of that & other obligations to which the land is subject. Qu.: whether the owner of an estate, in respect of which a liability to repair arises, not being in the occupation, is liable to be indicted, or whether the indictment must be against the occupiers.—*R. v. 2704. — Covenant by lessee.]—At common law, the liability to repair bridges ratione tenuræ is thrown ultimately on the owner, as between him & the occupier of the land.

Where a lessee of lands, of which the owners were liable to the repair of a bridge ratione tenuræ, covenanted to pay his rent "free & clear of all taxes & deductions, parliamentary or parochial," & by certain local Acts it was provided, that the owners of these lands might hold meetings, & make at such meetings rates & assessments on the lands, for the purpose of such repair:—Held: such a rate was not a parliamentary or parochial tax; & the occupier was not liable to pay it, in addition to his rent.—*BAKER v. (c) Bridges necessitated by Interference with Highway.

i. In General.

2705. Private purpose interfering with public right—Liability for maintenance.]—The Isle of Ely is included in Statute of Bridges, & therefore its inhabitants are prima facie liable at common law to repair the bridges situate within it; & may be indicted in the same form as ordinary counties. The general rule as to bridges built prior to Bridges Act, 1803 (c. 59), is, that if a private person erects a bridge, & it becomes useful to the county in general, the county shall repair it.—But where an act rendering a bridge necessary, though authorised to be done, is done primarily for private purposes, & interferes with the public right, & the public user, from which public benefit is inferred, is referable only to that act, because made necessary by it, the authority to do the act in question is conditional only on the party maintaining the public right in the same state as before it was interfered with.—*R. v. 2713. — — — Recovery of cost of repair.]—A canal co., the predecessors in title of defts., acting under powers conferred upon them by a private Act of Parliament, made a canal, & in so doing cut through an old highway, which they carried by a new bridge over the canal. The roadway of the bridge having fallen out of repair & become dangerous, pl'ts., who were the highway authority for the district, called upon defts. to do the necessary repairs to the roadway, & upon their refusal to do so, did the work themselves & brought this action to recover the cost thereof from defts.:—Held: (1) upon the true construction of the sects. of the private Act defts., & not pl'ts., were liable to repair the roadway over the bridge as well as the fabric of the bridge itself; (2) pl'ts., being under no legal liability to repair the roadway, had acted as mere volunteers in doing the repairs, & could not recover from defts. the cost so incurred by them.—MACCLESFIELD CORPN. v. GREAT CENTRAL RY. CO., [1911] 2 K. B. 528; 80 L. J. K. B. 884; 104 L. T. 728; 75 J. P. 369; 9 L. G. R. 682, C. A.

It is perfectly clear what is the common law obligation of persons who make canals of this kind. They may make a bridge but common sense points out it must be a proper bridge & fit for travelling over; & that if we were now discussing what kind of bridge it ought to be I should say a bridge suitable to the present state of society. . . . To hold that the same bridge which would suffice formerly will do so now would be contrary to reason & good sense (MARTIN, B.).—MANLEY v. ST. HELENS CANAL & RY. Subsequently manufactories were established on a tract of land inclosed by their cuts, in which large boilers & engines of twenty tons weight & upwards were constructed, which the bridges were insufficient to carry:—Held: on rule for mandamus, the statute did not impose upon the co. the duty of providing bridges sufficient to carry such traffic.—R. The canal, which was completed in 1812, was made across several highways in an urban district, & the co. made bridges over the canal in accordance with the requirements of the comrs. to carry such highways. In an action by the A.-G., at the relation of the urban authority, against the co. for a declaration that they were liable to keep the bridges in repair so as to be sufficient to bear the traffic which might reasonably be expected to pass along the highways carried over the canal by the said bridges, having regard to the present character & needs of the district:—Held: the co. were only liable to keep the bridges in repair in the condition in which they were made in accordance with the requirements of the comrs.—SHARPNESS NEW DOCKS & GLOUCESTER & BIRMINGHAM NAVIGATION CO. v. 2734. Defence—Special plea as to persons alleged liable to repair.—Information for not repairing an ancient bridge. The plea must directly answer or traverse that it is not an ancient bridge, & show who is bound to repair.—LANGFORTH BRIDGE CASE (1834), Cro. Car. 365; 79 E. R. 919.

2735. ———.—(1) The county being primâ facie liable for the repair of a public bridge cannot,

on an indictment for non-repair, without special plea, escape liability by casting the burden upon some other body.

(2) On an indictment for the non-repair of a bridge the ct. admitted in evidence an ancient map purporting to have been made by one C. a person of repute in connection with maps & surveys, proof being given of the custody from which it came. Semle: the map would have been admissible even without proof of the custody from which it came. The ct. also admitted two maps purporting to have been made by the King's Geographer, without proof of the custody from which they came; but refused to admit a copy of an old minute book which came from the custody of the bridge reeves of another bridge in the same neighbourhood as the bridge in question.—R. v. NORFOLK COUNTY COUNCIL (1910), 26 T. L. R. 269.

2736. In respect of public bridges.—An indictment for not repairing "a common bridge situated in a certain common footpath" is good without stating that it was in the King's highway: but the sessions have no power by Statute of Bridges, 1530–31 (c. 5), with respect to private bridges not common in the highways unless they are public nuisances & then they have jurisdiction.

An indictment lies not for non-repairing a bridge except it be in a highway (HOLT, C.J.).—It. v. SAINTIFF (1704), 6 Mod. Rep. 255; Holt, K. B. 129; 2 Ld. Raym. 1174; 1 Salk. 359; 87 E. R. 1002.

2738. Variance between allegation & proof—Public user of bridge—Proof of limited user only.—

A bar across a public bridge kept locked except in times of flood, is conclusive evidence that the public have only a limited right to use the bridge at such times, & if an indictment for not keeping it in repair, states that it is used by the King's subjects, "at their free will & pleasure" the variance is fatal.—*R. v. 2748. Documentary—Previous record of acquittal.]—On indictment for non-repair of a bridge, charging defts. ratione tenuræ, they produced at the trial a record setting forth a presentment, in the time of Edward III., against a Bishop of L., not connected with the present defts., who was thereby charged with non-repair of the same bridge, & liability to repair. The record stated a trial of this presentment at the spring assizes, in 1346, & an acquittal of the bishop as not liable; it further stated that the jury, being asked who was bound to repair, said they did not know; & being asked when & by whom it was first built or repaired, said, about sixty years since, & then of alms, & that a Bishop of L. bestowed 40s. on the workmen repairing it, of his alms, & not otherwise. In addition to this record, defts. put in a writ of Privy Seal of June 28, 1346, for a grant of pontage to the town of K., where the bridge was, reciting, as the cause of the grant, that the bridge was ruinous, & no person bound to repair in certain, according to that which was found by inquest. They also put in the grant of pontage, dated in the same year:—Held: the evidence was admissible on behalf of the present defts. Semble: the special findings of the jury may have been regular, according to the practice in the time of Edward III. But at all events the acquittal of the bishop, followed by the writ & grant of pontage, was evidence to negative the existence of a prescriptive liability in any person.—*R. v. k. Collapse of approach—Default of municipality.]—The collapse of the approach to a bridge under the weight of a pair of horses using the highway in a proper manner is conclusive evidence that the highway is not in proper repair. It is also prima facie evidence that the duty of keeping it in repair has been neglected by the municipality responsible therefor. The onus of meeting this prima facie case is on the municipality. To meet it the municipality must show that by its officers or servants it had inspected the the party desiring to inspect them must have an interest in them. In this case the books are not of a public nature, & the parties desiring to inspect them have no interest in them. In the case of parochial or corpn. books, no person wholly unconnected with the parish or corpn. has a right to inspect them. These books are not kept for the benefit of the public, or even of the inhabitants of the county, but for the benefit of the inhabitants of the parish only. They are properly speaking, not public but parochial books, & this is, in effect, an application made by one of two litigant parties against the other, to compel him to produce his own private documents, in order to establish a case against himself. Such an application cannot be granted (BAILEY, J.).—Re GREAT MARLOW BRIDGE, R. v. BUCKS (INHABITANTS) (1828), 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 412.

DEVON (INHABITANTS)* (1811), 14 East, 477; 104 E. R. 684.

2764. — — — — — Specific charge in indictment.]—Although the inhabitants of the county are, in general, liable to the repairs of the highway within 300 feet of the bridge as well as of the bridge itself, an indictment, which charges merely a non-repair of the bridge, is not sufficient to charge them with the not repairing of the highway within that distance. If it be intended to complain also of not repairing that part of the highway, it should be specifically mentioned in the indictment.—R. v. GLOUCESTER (INHABITANTS) (1829), 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 97.

2766. Liability of highway authority—Bridge built since 1835—Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 21.]

—The owners of land on one side of a river made a road across such land & built a bridge connecting such road with an existing highway on the other side of the river. They then dedicated both bridge & road simultaneously to the public, who afterwards used the same:—Held: the bridge not having been erected in an existing highway, the county was not liable for its repair, inasmuch as there was no evidence of acquiescence by the county in the building & dedication of the bridge. The effect of above sect. is, in the case of county bridges built subsequently to that Act, to throw the liability in respect of surface repairs to the roadway of the bridge & approaches upon the highway authority. Where a county of a town has been created by charter & declared to be a separate county, the county in which it was originally situated is not liable for the repair of bridges within its boundaries.—*R. v. At C., in the county of N., the canal crossed a public highway, which it was necessary to raise for a distance of 180 feet on either side of the canal for the purpose of making approaches to a bridge which the co. had to construct over the canal at that point. The canal subsequently became vested in deft. co., & the highway was made a main road within Highways & Locomotives Amendment Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 13, & became vested in pltf's. The question arose, who was legally liable to maintain & repair the raised approaches to the bridge:—Held: as the bridge could not have been constructed without making the approaches, the latter were practically part of the bridge, & defts.' obligation as regards the approaches did not cease on the completion of the bridge, but they were bound to keep them in repair.—NOTTINGHAM COUNTY COUNCIL v. 2778. — Common law liability.]—A railway co., being authorised to carry their railway across a high road on the level, constructed the railway at a slightly higher level than the road, &, in order to bring the road up to the level of the railway, raised it by means of inclined "approaches" on either side of the railway under powers conferred by their special Act. The Act was silent as to any obligation of the co. to repair the roadway upon the approaches.—Held: there was imposed upon the co. by the common law, as a condition of the statutory authority to interfere with the high road, an obligation to keep in repair the roadway upon the whole of the approaches, including those portions which lay outside the fences of the railway.—HERTFORDSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. ### SUB-SECT. 3.—INJURY ARISING FROM NON-REPAIR.

2779. General rule—Liability for negligence.]—

As pltf. was passing along a highway under a railway bridge of defts., which was a girder bridge resting on a perpendicular brick wall, with pilasters, a brick fell from the top of one of the piers, on which one of the girders rested, & injured pltf.; a train had passed just previously. On examination afterwards, other bricks were found to have fallen out. The bridge had been built & in use three years. The jury having found a verdict for pltf., a rule was obtained, pursuant to leave, to enter a nonsuit, on the ground that there was no evidence of negligence to leave to the jury.—Held: defts. were bound to use due care in keeping the bridge in proper repair, so as not to injure persons passing along the highway, & there was evidence from which the jury might infer negligence.—KEARNEY v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. CO. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 759; 40 L. J. Q. B. 285; 24 L. T. 913; 20 W. R. 24, Ex. Ch.

PART XV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3.

p. Action by individual—Against municipal corporation.]—In an action against defts. for damage sustained by pltf. through the breaking down of a bridge some six feet wide, built on three sleepers over a culvert on a road in defts.' township, over which pltf. was attempting to drive with a buggy & a pair of horses, it appeared, from an examination after the accident, that the centre sleeper to two-thirds of its diameter & on the outside was rotten, & that its condition was either not ascertained by the persons whose duty it was to repair the bridge, or if ascertained it was not repaired, & that the bridge broke down in consequence of this centre sleeper giving way by the mere entry of pltf.'s horses, without the buggy, upon the side of the bridge. The jury having found for pltf., their verdict was upheld.—MACDONALD v. SOUTH DORCHESTER TOWNSHIP (1878), 29 C. P. 249.—CAN.

q. —.]—Pltf. while crossing, on horseback, a bridge within the municipality, received injuries found to have resulted from the negligence of the corpn. & its officers.—Held: deft. corpn. was liable, & the fact of the bridge being on a highway was no defence, or if a defence should have been pleaded.—MCQUARRIE v. ST. MARY'S MUNICIPALITY (1884), 17 N. S. R. (5 R. & G.) 493.—CAN.

brought against deft. municipality for injuries sustained by pltf.'s horse, resulting in its death, caused by the defective condition of a bridge on a public road in the municipality. The covering of the bridge was more than eight years old at the time of the accident, & required renewing. Also the unsafe condition of the bridge was known to the comrs. appointed by the municipal council to repair the road upon which it was situated, but that he had delayed repairing the bridge for over three months & did not touch it until after the accident.—Held: deft. was responsible for the negligence of the comr. in not recovering the bridge & making it safe.—DIAMOND v. EAST HAMTS MUNICIPALITY (1887), 20 N. S. R. (8 R. & G.) 9.—CAN.

s. —.]—In an action to recover damages from a corpn. for a fatal accident caused by the breaking down of a bridge over which a tramcar containing deceased was running.—Held: the finding of the jury that an act done by their officer had materially weakened the beam which afterwards broke, amply justified a verdict against them.—VICTORIA CORPN. v. PATTERSON, VICTORIA CORPN. v. LANG, [1899] A. C. 615.—CAN.

t. —.]—Petition of right to recover damages for personal injuries to suppliant by reason of a govt. bridge being out of repair. There was no evidence that the injury resulted from the negligence of any servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties, so as to bring the case within Exchequer Ct. Act, s. 16 (c).—Held: there is no duty on the part of the Crown, or any minister of the Crown, to keep this bridge in repair for the failure of which a petition will lie against the Crown at the suit of one injured by non-repair, unless the case comes within sect. 16 (c).—MCBRIDE v. R. (1900), 6 Exch. C. R. 374.—CAN.

a. —.]—Where a heavy traction engine broke through rotten timbers in the approach of a bridge on one of the highways of defts. on which work had been done & improvements made by them, & over which such engines had for two years previous been accustomed to pass, to the knowledge of defts. officials, & no attempt had been made to stop such traffic or warn those in charge of it of any danger, the bridge in question being one of the strongest across the river in many miles.—Held: defts. were liable for damages under Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 (c. 116), s. 687, but they could not be held to have been guilty of negligence amounting to misfeasance, so as to make them liable in damages independently of the statute, by reason of having failed to stop up a spike hole in one of the joints in the approach, in consequence of which it had rotted more than the others on account of water lodging in the hole.—CURLE v. BRANDON (CITY) (1905), 24 C. L. T. 279; 15 Man. L. R. 122; 1 W. L. R. 176.—CAN.

for a road on that side of the ditch until a change of course of the ditch permitted a return to the original allowance. A bridge over the ditch was necessary to permit of this "cross over;" & defts., & instead of building a new bridge, made the cross-over by means of a bridge which, years before, that had made for the use of a single farm-owner, in order to give him access to the road as it then was. The effect was, that the turn which must be made, going north, at the bridge, was too sharp, having regard especially to the narrowness of the bridge & that the bridge was too narrow. It was at this place that an accident happened to a motor car in which pltf. was a passenger by reason of which he was injured.—Held: defts. were guilty of neglect of the duty imposed upon them by statute, to keep the highway in repair at the place where the accident happened.—RAYMOND v. 2787. — Bridge built in different position.]—The Isle of Wight is a division of the county of Southampton, but has no separate commission of the peace. Before 1842, all public bridges in the island, not repairable by tenure, were repaired either by the tithings, parishes or townships in which they were situate, or from rates levied on all the parishes in the island, under the following circumstances. The island having been assessed to the general county rate, & appeals against such assessment having been entered, an arrangement was made, in 1774, by consent, under an order of quarter sessions, fixing certain proportions to be paid by the parishes in the island towards the general county rate, but leaving the expense of bridges & the house of correction in the island to be raised by a local rate; the island being adjudged & declared not to be liable to pay to the county bridge rate or county house of correction; & the inhabitants agreeing to erect & maintain houses of correction & bridges within the island at their own sole expense. After this arrangement, the practice was for the county quarter sessions, on the application of the justices for the Isle of Wight division, to lay a rate, in the nature of a county rate, on every parish in the island, for the repair of the island bridges & bridewell. Till 1842, there had been no instance of the general county rate being applied to the repair of the island bridges. In 1813 a local Act appointed comrs. for the repair of the highways in the island, with power to make assessments, & enacted that all bridges previously repaired by any parishes, tithings, divisions or townships in the island should, for the future, be repaired "in such & the same manner & by such & the same ways & means," "as other bridges" "usually called county bridges" within the island had been accustomed to be repaired. In 1842, & since, the island was assessed generally with the county, & no separate island rate made. Application for the repair of bridges & bridewells in the island had been, since that time made to the county quarter sessions:—Held: (1) all bridges which, at the time of the passing of the Act, were repairable by the tithings, etc., in which they were situate, were for the future repairable by the county generally, & the arrangement of 1774 did not affect the legal liability of the county, & was no answer to an indictment against it for non-repair of such bridges.

(2) A bridge in the island, originally repaired by the titling, was, after the passing of the Act, wholly rebuilt by order of the justices for the island division. The new bridge was larger than the old, & different in form, & stood higher up the stream. The expense of the building, & of repairs, were defrayed out of the island rate imposed under the arrangement of 1774. The conditions prescribed by 43 Geo. 3, c. 59, were not observed in building it:—Held: the county was liable to repair the new bridge.

(3) A foot bridge, formed of three planks, nine or ten feet long, & a hand rail, & which carried a public footpath across a small stream, was held not to be repairable as a county bridge, though it had been repaired by the comrs. under the above mentioned local Act.

It can hardly be said that every structure which enables passengers to cross a stream is a county bridge (LORD CAMPBELL).—R. v. SOUTHAMPTON COUNTY (INHABITANTS), BLACK
